FRENCH VOTE DOWN DICTATOR

BRITISH RULE IN AFRICA WANING; CAPE TO EGYPT

Discontent Found in Many States.

BY WILLIAM MAKIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CAIRO, Egypt, July 3.—[By Mail.]—British prestige in the dark continent is lower now than it ever has been. Britain holds more of Africa than it has ever held before. The dream of the empire financier, Cecil Rhodes, of a blotch of red territories on the map of Africa stretching from the cape to Cairo, is almost an accomplished fact. But these red colored territories are seething with discontent and the end of British rule is already being prophesied in the coffee houses of Cairo and the kraals of the Zambesi.

The recent political excitement in Egypt was a significant manifestation. A few days ago I sat in the house of Zaghlul Pasha, a one time coffee waiter in the palaces of Egyptian princes, and now more powerful than King Fuad of Egypt himself. Zaghlul is one of Africa's fanatics, and from him radiates all the intense anti-British feeling which at present pervades Egypt.

In the room were all the leading politicians of Egypt, men who had held high office and were the slavish adherents of this one man who seems to have successfully flouted the British prestige. In their badly tailored European clothes, brown boots and gaudy ties, these Egyptians begged an audience with Zaghlul, prepared, as their talk revealed, to play any unscrupulous part that he might require of them. Politics among the Egyptians is merely the screen for clever and subterranean machinations. They do not include statesmanship.

Turn to Zaghlul Pasha.

Now that Abd-el Krim is a prisoner, the eyes of the Africans are turned toward Zaghlul Pasha. The whole of North Africa believes implicity in him, that he can overthrow the British yoke and lead Egypt to a sort of sherbet paradise beloved by the Mohammedans. He sits in his house in Cairo making and unmaking cabinets. He is the real king of Egypt, for Fuad is regarded only as a British puppet, the strings of which are pulled by Lord Lloyd, the representative in Egypt of the British government.

Zaghlul, however, is only one of the two strong men in Africa, both anti-British. In the south is Gen. Hertzog. In the tea rooms of Cape Town many Europeans are already discussing seriously how long it will be before the Union of South Africa breaks away from the British empire. In a few months Gen. Hertzog will visit London to represent South Africa at the imperial conference. Most English people will meet him then for the first time, as the only other occasion on which he visited England was at the beginning of the great war, when he headed a Boer deputation to the king pleading for the independence of South Africa.

Angers the Nationalists.

Here also is a fanatic, a cold, Bible reading, passionless fanatic, who broke away from the Botha ministry because it would not plead the independence of his race. South Africa. Gen. Hertzog believes, should stand alone, untrammeled by the duties of an empire dominion. A few months ago South Africa determined to rid itself of the Asiatics in its midst. The protest of Indians and the strong representations of the imperial government forced Gen. Hertzog and his ministers to compromise and agree to a round table conference with India.

This necessity for compromise has angered the Nationalists of South Africa by virtue of whose support Gen. Hertzog is now prime minister. It is this interference of the imperial government which will provide Gen. Hertzog with another strong argument for independence. He will go to the imperial conference demanding more and more freedom and refusing to grant anything in return. He is accompanied by the darling of young, intransigeant South Africa, Tielman Roos, minister of justice, who laughingly has asserted that his first speech in London will make the blood of imperialists there run cold. Under the Nationalist government South Africa is heading away from British rule. The desire to replace the union jack by a flag entirely Dutch in color and sentiment is a significant sign of the times.

"But," the British imperialists will retort, "we still possess huge territories in central and east Africa. And West Africa is still solidly British." It is true that Britain still administers

REWARDS SPUR HUNT FOR KILLER OF OHIO EDITOR

$25,000 Is Offered to Solve Mystery.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

Canton, O., July 17.—[Special.]—Canton police today turned to the underworld for clews to the murder of Don R. Mellett, newspaper editor and crusader shot to death at his home yesterday morning.

Persons known to be prominent in underworld activities were brought to the police station for questioning, but no arrests had been made at a late hour tonight.

Work of Hired Killers.

The shooting of Mellett from ambush is believed to have been the work of hired imported gangsters, killers employed for that purpose by higherups in the booze and dope racket, against which Mellett waged relentless war in his newspaper, the Canton News.

For this reason it is believed that the only source of information will be from persons close to the men who planned and paid for the murder.

But it will not be the police alone who will be employed in attempting to solve the killing of Mellett. There are numbers of private detectives and other operatives in Canton, some, it is said, employed by James M. Cox, owner of the News and former Democratic presidential candidate; some by the state, and others by other interests.

Raise $25,000 Fund.

Money is the medium upon which the authorities and leading citizens of this city of 110,000 rely to bring to justice the men who killed Mellett.

As the young editor was being buried today a fund of $25,000 had been posted to bring the killers to justice, and this fund was growing and expected to reach $50,000.

With the killing done with no witness, not one who even saw the killers flee the scene known to the police, all interested in clearing up the murder came today to realize they must rely for information upon the size of the fund placed at the disposal of the investigators.

To Track Down Slayers.

Not all the money so far posted is for reward purposes. A good portion of it has been put up as pursuit funds, money to be used in tracking down the killers and the higher ups behind the scenes.

The funds come from a number of sources. James M. Cox has put up $5,000. H. H. Timken, head of the Timken Roller Bearing works located here, has put up $5,000; the Scripps-Howard Newspapers of Ohio have put up $5,000; the Brush Moore Newspaper League of Ohio has put up $1,000; Stark county commissioners have put up $2,000, and banks and business houses and other individuals have given freely to the fund.

A Wide Open Town.

Canton has always been a wide open town and it has a comparatively large population devoted to vice and other underworld pursuits. The town lies half way between Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh gangsters have been wont to go into seclusion here and Cleveland has contributed freely to Canton's creek district at the southeast end of the city.

Until a year ago the racketeering went unconfined in the creek. Booze was plentifully run in from Pittsburgh. Quondam common gangsters and hoodlums were taking golden fortunes out of alky, women ran resorts and nobody bothered the bosses.

Then the young crusader, Mellett, came from Akron, where he had been connected with the Scripps-Howard organization, and he started a fight on all booze, vice, and gambling.

Mellett was a reformer from conviction; he was fighting the wide open town and the politicians who made that possible and his fight began to tell.

Sought Governor's Aid.

He made trips to Columbus to see the governor and other state officials to demand action he could not get locally, and in some cases he got action. As one prominent citizen expressed it this morning at Mellett's funeral:

"He got to be like a wasp, always buzzing around over the creek district."

Mellett is credited with driving E. E. Curtis, brother of former mayor C. C. Curtis, out of the office of safety director, and of being instrumental in send-

Slush Writs Served Upon State Chiefs

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

United States Marshal Palmer E. Anderson yesterday received subpoenas for the first group of witnesses to be examined by the United States senate slush fund committee when it comes here July 26 to open its inquiry into campaign expenses of senate candidates in the Illinois primaries April 13.

Those summoned in the first batch of subpoenas were:

Frank L. Smith, Republican nominee for United States senator.

George E. Brennan, Democratic national committeeman and the party nominee for senator.

Crowe and West Called.

County Reviewer Charles V. Barrett, co-leader with State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe of the Crowe-Barrett forces and treasurer of the Cook county Republican committee.

State's Attorney Crowe.

Roy O. West, secretary of the Republican national committee, chief lieutenant to Senator Charles S. Deneen and manager of the Deneen-Lundin campaign in the Republican primaries.

Samuel Insull, utility magnate, backer of Frank L. Smith.

Edward H. Wright, colored Republican leader of the south side black belt, member of the Illinois commerce commission and committeeman of the Second ward.

Former Mayor William Hale Thompson, who supported Smith ardently in the primaries and who joined forces with the Crowe-Barrett camp in the campaign.

More Subpœnas Later.

Summons for additional witnesses will be issued from time to time after the committee gets started in Chicago it was announced. These will include Senator William B. McKinley, who was defeated by Smith; the McKinley managers, including Henry I. Green, former State Auditor Andrew Russel, Chester Willoughby, the senator's secretary, and others of the McKinley camp; Republican National Committeeman Allen F. Moore, Smith manager; former State Senator and Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson and his law partners, Daniel Schuyler, and numerous others, including officials of the Anti-Saloon league.

Yesterday's subpoenas arrived by mail. The hearings will be conducted in the courtroom of Federal District Judge James H. Wilkerson. Deputy Marshal Leon Tashjian served the subpoenas on Brennan, Insull, and Barrett yesterday.

Mr. Brennan meantime, while saying that he was willing to coöperate with the committee in its inquiry, said he hopes the investigation will disclose nothing that will besmirch Illinois or run his anti-Volstead issue off on to a side track. He said in a letter to the editor of the Galesburg Register:

"I would greatly regret to have the situation muddled by any disclosures that slush funds were used during the primary campaign. I would not desire to gain votes that way. I want the issue clearly defined. My opponent voted for the Volstead act, which I seek to have modified, and I want the electorate of Illinois to vote their convictions regarding the Volstead act and farm relief without being influenced by extraneous matters."

MRS. O'BANION "SASSES" A COP; GOES IN AGAIN

Mrs. Viola O'Banion, widow of Dean O'Banion, slain gang leader and bootlegging king, was arrested again this morning on charges of speeding and disorderly conduct. She was going out Ridge avenue when she was espied by C. H. Fesler of the Ridge Avenue park district police and halted.

After telling Fesler what she thought of him—all uncomplimentary—she was taken to the Rogers Park police station. Having no money for bail she was sent to the West Chicago avenue station where friends soon bailed her out. She was arrested on May 18 on a similar charge.

Store Manager Fights Thieves; Shot to Death

Battling in a dark alley with two bandits after they had robbed him of $200, Allan Boe, manager of an Atlantic and Pacific Tea company store at 1708 Lawrence avenue, was shot three times and fatally wounded last night.

Boe and a clerk, Leroy Jacobson, 1714 Leland avenue, with two customers, Michael Bishop, 4451 North Paulina street, and Frank Deans, 4435 North Paulina street, were in the store when the two robbers entered. Both were armed and four pairs of hands were raised at the command.

Cash Register Is Emptied.

While one of the robbers guarded the four men the other swiftly emptied the cash register of the day's receipts. Both then left, warning their prisoners not to follow.

As soon as the door was closed on them Boe, seizing a revolver that was concealed under the counter, shouted that he would get them. He ran out and saw the holdup men turning north on Paulina street. He fired at them and followed.

Pursues Robber Into Alley.

As they dashed into the alley he followed. Throwing caution to the winds, he ran into the shadows. The bandits flattened against a building and fired. One of the bullets struck Boe in the temple. He was taken to the Ravenswood hospital, where he died early this morning.

The police were told by some witnesses that the pair drove out of the alley in an automobile. Others reported they escaped on foot.

CLEAR AND WARM FOR CITY TODAY; MIDWEST BAKES

Continued warm weather, with skies mostly fair, are to prevail in Chicago today and tomorrow, according to the official prediction of the weather bureau.

The territory west and northwest of Lake Michigan has had temperatures much higher than those here during the last forty-eight hours. On Friday practically all cities in the Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys had readings of from 95 to 105 degrees. The Chicago maximum on that day was 88; yesterday it was 83.

Four deaths in Chicago, believed due to heart disease, were attributed in part to the heat. The victims were: W. M. Mickle, 35, 1510 Dayton street; Fidore Didomenico, 66, 1027 South Racine avenue; Martin Nick, 65, 2026 West Congress street, and George Fowler, colored, 49, 4222 Grand boulevard.

Shot in Self Defense, Plea of Evangelist

Fort Worth, Tex., July 17.—(AP)—The Rev. J. Frank Norris, widely known exponent of fundamentalism, shot and killed D. E. Chipps, wealthy lumber dealer, in the office of the First Baptist church today. The Rev. Mr. Norris, who is pastor of the church, immediately surrendered to the authorities and told them he had shot Chipps in self-defense.

The pastor was released on $10,000 bonds after a murder charge had been filed against him in justice court. His bond was signed by thirty members of his congregation, reputed to be worth more than $1,000,000.

After posting the bond, Mr. Norris returned to his home and said he did not know whether he would preach his regular sermon in the church tomorrow.

Leading Baptist Evangelist.

Mr. Norris is one of the leading evangelists in the Baptist churches. He not only has appeared in revival meetings in the southern Baptist churches, but also in the northern.

In addition to his evangelistic work, he is editor and publisher of the Searchlight. He told newspaper men that Mr. Chipps came to his office and protested against statements he had made from his pulpit and printed in the Seachlight concerning Mayor H. C. Meacham, a friend of Chipps.

Asserting that he tried to "avoid trouble," the pastor said he found it was "necessary" for him to shoot to defend himself against Chipps.

Detectives after searching the clothing of Chipps, who died soon after being taken to a hospital, said they found no weapon. He had been shot three times.

Police announced that the pistol used by Mr. Norris was found in the church office. All the chambers were empty.

Claims Self-Defense.

In his statement to newspaper men in the district attorney's office, the pastor said he fired four shots at Chipps after the latter threatened to kill him.

He asserted Chipps had telephoned him this afternoon, saying he was coming to "settle with you."

"I walked to my stenographer's office after hanging up the telephone and got some sermon notes and came back to get matters ready for the Sunday school superintendent's work for Sunday," he continued. "Soon, Mr. Chipps came into my office. He did not knock. He came rushing in and was very angry.

"'I am going to kill you for what you said in your sermon,' he said to me. I remonstrated with him and told him I did not want to have any trouble. I walked to the door of my office and invited him to leave, and as I turned and walked back to the decsk he followed me and continued to threaten to kill me.

Took Gun from Desk.

"'I mean every word I told you,' he said as he threw his hand behind him. There was a gun in the desk which the night watchman used. I reached and got it. I saw nothing else for me to do but defend myself. He repeated his statement to me, continuing to threaten to kill me. I shot him, I don't know how many times."

Mr. Norris said the sermon Chipps objected to referred to Mayor Meacham, whom he had criticized in connection with a civic land deal, and L. B. Haughey, manager of Meachem's department store.

Corroborates Pastor's Story.

L. H. Nutt, auditor of the Farmers and Mechanics' National bank, was believed to be the only other person present at the shooting. He was with Dr. Norris in the study when Chipps

BRIAND CABINET FALLS; HERRIOT MAY BE PREMIER

Nation Facing New Financial Chaos.

BULLETIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 17.—Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber of deputies, tonight admitted he would be glad to accept the task of forming a cabinet and expects to do so with great dispatch the moment President Doumergue asks him, which probably will be tomorrow morning. He is downcast, however, because he was unable to swing more than half the radicals against the fallen ministry of Premier Aristide Briand.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 17.—With the spray from the breakers of financial ruin in its face, France tonight is without a government for the sixth time in sixteen months.

The Briand-Caillaux government, the tenth cabinet headed by the veteran premier, went crashing down tonight, with it went the hopes for quick action by Finance Minister Joseph Caillaux, who had asked to be endowed with a dictator's powers to ratify the United States and British debt pacts, obtain foreign credits, enforce tax reforms and stop the disastrous crash of the franc.

The cabinet went down because Edouard Herriot, the radical Socialist chieftain and mayor of Lyons, who fell from power in April, 1925, pulled off a coup d'état and squashed the Caillaux dictatorship plan, by one of the most sensational maneuvers in French parliamentary history.

Herriot May Be Next Premier.

M. Herriot walked down from the speaker's chair, enveloped in neutrality, and with a plea that the constitutional rights should not be sacrificed on the altar of Joseph Caillaux's ambition, wrecked the ministry. In this action, M. Herriot placed himself in a fair way to be the next premier.

Lucien Romier, editor of Figaro, and M. Boaknowski are mentioned to fill the finance ministry jointly, with Louis Marin, leader of the moderates and Raymond Poincare, former premier and president and leader of the nationalists, as other prominent members of the cabinet, which M. Herriot is expected to form.

Saved from Mob by Police.

For his pains M. Herriot was hissed and threatened with bodily harm in the streets of Paris tonight. As he drove by the gates of Elysée palace an enormous, sullen crowd massed in the Rue Fauborg St. Honoré spotted the bulky, silk-hatted gentleman who did the Briand cabinet to its death.

Hisses, savage cries, and ugly threats, born of despair, rose from the mob, and fifty policemen were required to protect the limousine, while squads of other policemen were brought up to clear the street. A heavy guard was immediately posted about the president's palace and the parliament buildings to nip any further demonstrations arising out of the popular conviction that any kind of government is better than none when the franc is worth only about 2.44 cents, while before the war it was worth 20 cents in real money.

With the country rudderless, the opening of the exchange Monday looms in a most disquieting manner.

Defeat Comes Suddenly.

The disastrous vote of 288 to 243 against the government came with unexpected suddenness when Acting President Bouyssou put a purely routine question to get down to a methodic discussion of the double barreled demand for dictatorial powers. A favorable vote here would simply have unleashed a two days preliminary tilt on generalities.

The foes of the government changed exultant glances and whe[illegible] ballots were counted it appear[illegible] the deputies did not want ev[illegible] sider the full power ques[illegible] "financial" Napoleon's [illegible] month's consulship w[illegible]

"Now you've done [illegible] Deputy Dauthy. "The fr[illegible] to 60 to the dollar tomorrow." The center deputies, heartbroken and not knowing what else to do, clapped.

Premier Briand took M. Caillaux by the arm and the pair solemnly walked out, followed by the rest of the cabinet. They immediately went to Elysée palace to inform President Doumergue that France is again without a government.

The chief of state went through the usual form of calling in M. Herriot and M. de Seldes as presidents of the chamber and senate and announced he was going to bed to sleep on the situation.

"Stop Parliament's Suicide."

When with the chamber of deputies tense and startled, M. Herriot made his sensational descent from the presidential armchair to take the speaker's tribune and deliver the fatal blow, he had only one precedent in the history of the Third Republic—when M. Gambetta, its father, did the same thing in the years of its infancy.

He pleaded with the chamber not to commit virtual suicide by handing its legislative powers to Finance Minister Caillaux. He said he did it in the name of republican principles, but the politicians of Paris tonight are inclined to be a little cynical and say he did it because he wanted to get back the mighty seat of premier.

"For a year I have consecrated my strength to aiding the cabinets in their death lock with formidable difficulties," M. Herriot declared. "If my conscience permitted, I would come to the aid of this government. But M. Caillaux's project with too keen edged, preëmptory and even brutal articles, has wounded many true blue republican consciences in this chamber. And I mount the speaker's tribune, not as a party chief but as president of the chamber which I have had the honor to direct and which I could direct no longer if it willingly impaired its own powers, and I urge M. Briand not to ask these deputies to strip themselves of their powers.

"Try to Coöperate."

"They have rights and obligations to the people. It is impossible for the people's sworn delegates, the deputies, to delegate their legislative powers to anybody else, and that is what M. Caillaux really asks. These are the organic articles of France's republican credo.

"I cannot give my assent to M. Caillaux's summary text. Let us not be precipitate. Gentlemen of the cabinet, try to coöperate with parliament—do not suppress it."

Seeing Premier Briand's sneer and M. Caillaux's grin, M. Herriot blushed with rage, raised his voice to a screech and pointing his finger at the ministerial benches, shouted this warning: "You need not sneer Monsieur Premier, for there are plenty of tenacious men in this parliament who feel the need of energetic measures, but who, having heard the rumors of a dictatorship, demand that the necessities of the moment be conciliated with respect to the fundamental principles of the republican regime."

Calls Debate Tragic.

Taken completely by surprise, Premier Briand, who has suffered more disappointments this year than any man in Europe, let his hands drop to his sides in a gesture of weariness and despair. But as the radical socialist leader, who never has been his friend, went on, the old war horse began to snort. Once M. Herriot finished to the delirious applause of the extreme left and right groups, the Premier mounted the tribune.

While Finance Minister Caillaux, baldheaded and red as a turkey cock, sat twiddling his thumbs, M. Briand turned the full blast of his great oratory in a hopeless effort to save his minister of finance. His own political fate he chucked into the balance.

"It is tragic, this duel which puts into the arena the president of the chamber and the premier," M. Briand said. "What the outcome will be I cannot tell. It is painful and tragic, but is a question of confidence in me or him. I am a good republican, too, but I have a different conception of my duty than M. Herriot. I do not want merely to save the parliamentary machinery and perhaps sacrifice my country.

"Would Rather Have a King."

"In forty-eight hours this country must have a government capable of acting. It cannot be saved otherwise. If parliament understood this it would make a guesture of abrogation which would win the approval of the country and strengthen, not endanger republican institutions. Look at the Belgians. They have risen to the responsibilities and made their king the financial dictator."

"I would rather have a king than M. Caillaux!" yelled Leon Blum, Socialist leader.

M. Briand put out his hands in a gesture of appeal and said in a voice hushed with emotion, while beads of perspiration stood on M. Caillaux's brow, "I am following the dictates of my conscience. I ask you to give us a free hand. If you do not want us, we are behind whomever succeeds us."

Moderates Join Fight.

The moderates, led by M. Marin dragged out the bogey of the gold reserve in the Bank of France, claiming that with parliament out of the way, M. Caillaux could get his hands on it. At this the finance minister screamed protest.

"A naive lot, this cabinet," jeered M. Marin, "to ask the chamber to cut its throat in order to enhance its prestige. The parliament which abdicates, shames itself. Give us a cabinet of a national union, but not a dictatorship."

"M. Caillaux as a dictator can make all the foreign loans he wants. And watch the franc fall when he does. We do not want to ratify the Washington debt accords. It would keep down France for sixty-two years. France can save herself."

MELLON REPEATS U. S. POLICY ON FOREIGN DEBTS

Says Moral Force of Paying Will Help World.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—Administration opposition to cancellation of foreign debts is reiterated in a letter from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to Frederick W. Peabody, a Boston lawyer, made public today by the treasury. Secretary Mellon replied to arguments advanced by Mr. Peabody in a communication addressed to President Coolidge.

Asserting that the United States has been extremely generous in its settlements, Secretary Mellon presents computations which he says indicates that with the exception of Great Britain the pre-armistice debts of all allied nations have virtually been canceled.

Gift, Says Mr. Peabody.

Mr. Peabody's letter to the President argued that as a legal proposition the United States made a gift and not a loan, and neither party expected repayment; that as an equitable proposition advances were made while the allies were fighting our battle for us and before we could put an adequate military force in the field, and that as a charitable proposition and in the interests of humanity we should cancel the debts.

"I have, as have you, and every other good citizen, a profound sympathy for the countries suffering from the after-results of the great war, which we, in America, have, to a large extent, escaped," said Secretary Mellon. "But I feel that a recognition of their external obligations by the European nations and an undertaking bravely to meet them within their capacity as each country has done, is a moral force of great service to permanent prosperity in the world.

Thinks Financial Sky Clear.

"I cannot agree with you that England is on the edge of destruction. It is most sound of heart, as its recent solution of a general strike has shown to all. Other countries are in monetary difficulties, but the very acuteness of the disease has brought a clear understanding of the causes and of the proper remedies. Dark as the financial sky now appears, I believe Europe is today closer to a permanent sound solution of its economic troubles than at any time since the war. The danger is there, but with it the courage to fight. I do not despair of Europe."

COMPLAINS ITALY IS BEING CHEATED OF REPARATIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 17.—Italy is getting cheated out of its share under the Dawes reparations plans, L'Avoca D'Italia complains in an editorial today. It is asserted that from September, 1925, to August 31, 1926, Italy has coming 84,847,000 gold marks ($21,211,750) and in the last ten months, ending June 30, Italy was supposed to receive 70,700,000 gold marks ($17,675,000).

"We have only received 58,985,000 gold marks ($14,746,250), which is 11,000,000 gold marks ($2,750,000) below what we have coming," the newspaper protests. "Last year we were supposed to receive 66,700,000 gold marks ($16,625,000) but we only received 65,000,000 gold marks ($16,250,000)."

Finance Parley in Paris Soon.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 17.—The German press announces that Hjalmar Schact, president of the German reichsbank, will leave for Paris in the near future to take part in a general financial conference with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, J. Pierpont Morgan, and Seymour Parker Gilbert, agent general for reparations.

ROLL OF FRENCH PREMIERS SINCE 1905 TOTALS 35

PARIS, July 17—(AP)—Thirty-five premiers have been at the helm of the French government since 1905. Twelve of them came into power after M. Clemenceau, the tiger of France, relinquished the premiership in 1920. This, incidentally, marked the end of the "sacred union" prevailing during the world war and a renewal of bitter warfare between the many political groups in parliament.

During that period (1905-'26) France also had a half dozen presidents, beginning with M. Laubet and followed successively by M. Fallieres, Raymond Poincare, Paul Deschanel, Alexandre Millerand, and Gaston Doumergue.

The record of longevity is held by Georges Clemenceau, who presided over a ministry which curiously included M. Briand as minister of education, and M. Caillaux as minister of finance, from October, 1906, until July, 1909. The "father of victory" almost duplicated this during the world war, when he managed to whip all political parties together into the now famous "sacred union," and continued his rule for two years and two months from November, 1917, to January, 1920. The astute Raymond Poincare, who narrowly escaped going down to defeat with the Briand government by a last minute demand for dictatorial powers, runs a close second to M. Clemenceau, holding on from January, 1922, to March, 1924.

The late Alexander Ribot holds the record for short life of a French cabinet. He managed to stay just four days, from June 9 to June 12, 1914. Another cabinet, which died young, was that of M. Francois-Marsal; it lasted five days in June, 1924.

GANNA AMAZES BUDAPEST WITH HER LONG SKIRTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 17.—Ganna Walska arrived here last night to appear in a summer theater, where she will sing in "Madam Butterfly." She was accompanied by her husband, Harold McCormick of Chicago. Also with her were fifteen trunks, a secretary, a squad of servants, and a singing teacher.

In Budapest the style experts remarked that Mme. Walska's frocks are two inches longer than the prescribed length here. Some women rushed to the tailors today to lengthen their gowns.

Mme. Walska told local journalists that she had come to Europe to recuperate from the noise and excitement of American life. She announced she would go from here to Deauville, but will return in the autumn for a tour of eastern Europe.

ing him to the Ohio state penitentiary for taking a bribe.

When a movement for a pardon for Curtis was started after he had served a year, Gov. A. V. Donahey refused to sign the pardon unless Mellett agreed to it. Mellett made a special trip to Columbus to protest against it.

Police Force Accused.

Canton's police department of seventy men is freely accused in the vice, gambling, and rum running that has been going on. Various individuals and groups are said to have had the privilege of the "take" in the different branches of illegal activities. Those who know say that there now will be an immediate shakeup and that the outcome will probably be the placing of the whole force at the disposal of Prosecutor C. B. McClintock of Stark county, to help him clean up the Mellett killing.

Under the scope of the investigation will fall four general groups, the bootleggers, the gamblers, the dope ring, and those interested in prositution—each headed by its chieftains; and one man known to be the big boss of them all.

It is from various members of these groups that threats of death have frequently come to Mellett. Most of the threats were anonymous, telephone ones, but one man, one of the leading figures in the local underworld is said to have come out boldly and told Mellett: "Watch your step, young fellow—your going to be got."

"And it is a sad commentary to our authorities," said H. C. Pontius, attorney for Mellett's family, "that this man hasn't even been questioned."

Mr. Pontius has general charge of the investigation also for James M. Cox and early today when he also was told to "watch his step" in the matter—the word being carried to him in an indirect way, he responded by adding $1,000 to the reward pursuit fund that is being raised to get the slayers.

DRY AGENTS ON CIDER CASE JURY WHICH GETS ORDERS TO ACQUIT

Rochester, N. Y., July 17.—[Special.]—Two prohibition agents were obliged to concur in a verdict of not guilty in the federal court at Jamestown today, thus freeing the man they arrested. They and three attorneys were pressed into jury service when the panel was exhausted.

Judge Harland P. Howe ordered the acquittal when the government failed to produce testimony. The defendant, Fred Patterson, a hotel man of Wellsville, was charged with selling cider containing more than the legal percentage of alcohol.

COX PRAISES EDITOR

Dayton, O., July 17.—(AP)—Don R. Mellett, slain publisher of the Canton Daily News, was characterized by former Gov. James M. Cox, owner of the Canton News, as a frank and loyal man of deep religious feeling in "a tribute to Don Mellett, by his employer," issued today. The statement said:

"I never knew a finer moral courage than his. He came to me many months ago with the recital of what he conceived to be fundamental wrongs in the life of the city of Canton. . . .

"No one who reflects upon the situation developed by Mr. Mellett's reformative movement will question that he was each day approaching his objective. . . . He was driving the agents and messengers of evil to their lair.

"Driven to their extremity, these unfortunate persons decided that he must die.

Cut Off Their Loot.

"He, and he alone, more than any citizen or any group of citizens in Canton, stood between them and their loot.

"In the shadow of his home, with his four little children asleep in their beds, Don Mellett was cruelly murdered. No doubt the men who killed were professional gunmen.

"Don Mellett was not a crusader bent upon adventure. He sought neither to exploit himself nor his newspaper. He was moved purely by a sense of duty.

"How foolish were the assassins and those who goaded them on. The taking of a single life in the present circumstances is of no avail. The soul of Don Mellett will go marching on."

ROB SHOP IN OLD POLICE STATION; GET $4,000 LOOT

Three robbers yesterday held up the plant of the American Cleaners and Dyers at 4252 W. Lake street, site of the old West Lake street police station, forced two officials to lie flat on the floor, and escaped with between $3,500 and $4,000 in cash and the manager's $800 diamond ring.

The manager, Benjamin Fishbain, and his bookkeeper, Hyman Sommers, 1118 South Aberdeen street, were making up the Saturday bank deposit when the bandits entered. Two calmly cleaned the open safe while the other guarded the prostrate victims.

One of the bandits ordered Fishbain to turn over his diamond ring. "I can't," the latter replied, "it won't come off." The bandit laughed and told him to put it in his mouth and it would. The manager did as ordered and the ring came loose. The robbers then ran to a touring car parked at the curb and disappeared.

TRUDE-SAVAGE CONTEST HINGES ON COURT RULING

Holdom to Decide Issue of Jurisdiction.

Superior Judge Jesse Holdom is confronted with the task of deciding another phase of the Trude-Savage conflict over the Republican nomination for county judge. Events leading up to this new chapter in the hectic story of the Republican primaries are best explained chronologically.

1. Assistant State's Attorney Joseph P. Savage, Crowe-Barrett candidate, defeated Municipal Judge Daniel P. Trude, the Deneen-Lundin entry, by approximately 22,000 votes on the face of returns.

2. Charging that he had been cheated of thousands of votes, Trude filed a petition for a recount in the Superior court, his attorneys admittedly manipulating the filing to get the case before Judge M. L. McKinley.

Case Taken From McKinley.

3. The executive committee of the Superior court composed of Judges D. E. Sullivan, Hurley and Pam, took the case away from Judge McKinley and assigned it to Judge Holdom, McKinley relinquishing jurisdiction at the same time.

4. Declaring the primary laws clearly specify that contests involving the county judgeship must be conducted in the Circuit court, Superior Judge Holdom dismissed the Trude petition for want of jurisdiction and the certificate of nomination was issued by County Clerk Sweitzer to Savage, the time limit for filing a contest in the Circuit court having meanwhile expired.

5. Intervening as friends of the court but actually in behalf of Judge Trude the Chicago Bar association asked Judge Holdom to reopen the case so he might hear arguments on transferring it to the Circuit court. Judge Holdom granted the request.

Claim Court Lacks Authority.

6. On July 13 James G. Condon, attorney for Savage, filed with Judge Holdom a seventy-five page brief and argument contending that a judge of the Superior court was without authority to transfer a case to the Circuit court.

This brings the story up to yesterday. In the early stages Judge Trude's lawyers, State Representative Howard P. Castle and Harry Eugene Kelly, had contended that the Superior court had concurrent jurisdiction with the Circuit court in primary election contests. Condon argued differently.

Yesterday the bar association through its president, William C. Boyden and secretary, Herbert M. Lautmann, filed a 43 page brief and argument supporting Trude's contention that the Superior court has jurisdiction. The bar association asked Judge Holdom to vacate his order dismissing the Trude contest, open the ballots and recount the vote. On the question of jurisdiction it used numerous citations tending to show identical powers of the two courts.

Charged Issue Is Ignored.

Savage and his counsellors perused the bar association's brief and declared it ignored the question now at issue, whether Superior Judge Holdom has the power to transfer the case to the Circuit court.

"They argue the same old question of the jurisdiction of the Superior court that Judge Holdom has completely disposed of," Mr. Savage said. "Not a word is said about transferring the case to the Circuit court. No reply whatever is made to our argument."

Judge Holdom received the brief and argument of the bar association without comment. Later he admitted that the question before him is that involving the right to transfer the case.

Decision in Ten Days.

"I have given the brief only a cursory glance so far," he said, "but it will receive my most careful consideration." Judge Holdom is the only Superior court judge sitting during the coming five weeks and he intimated that his decision will not be made for a week or ten days.

The recount in contests pending before County Judge Jarecki has covered 291 precincts on the Republican side and 113 on the Democratic. Although he has no legal authority for doing so and is doing it merely as a matter of record, Judge Jarecki is permitting a recount of the county judge contests, his own with John J. Byrne, for the Democratic nomination as well as the Trude-Savage race.

In the recount so far Trude has gained 2,947 votes on Savage in the 20th, 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, and part of the 29th ward. Byrne has gained 1,765 votes on Judge Jarecki in the 13th, 20th, 27th, and part of the 19th ward.

Average Losses by Candidates.

With the exception of Dunne-Harrison-O'Connell contestants whose average gain is 1,183, in the Democratic recount, the recount shows the following average losses for the respective slates:

Crowe-Barrett Republicans, 5,539;
Deneen-Lundin Republicans, 3,850;
Brennan Democrats, 3,647.

Robert Jerome Dunne has gained 2,797 votes on Harry Kohl, candidate of the regular Democratic organization for the board of review. Kohl was nominated by 72,000. James J. Danaher of the O'Connell slate has gained 3,882 votes on Cyril Jandus, low man on the Brennan Municipal court slate, who was nominated by 50,000.

Municipal Judge William L. Morgan (Deneen-Lundin) jumped up to 11th place in the Republican Municipal court contest, deposing Samuel Heller of the same slate. Heller dropped to 13th position, 578 votes behind Morgan and 350 behind Assistant State's Attorney Robert McMillan, who now occupies the lowest place for a nomination.

Special State's Attorney Charles A. McDonald and his assistants yesterday prepared a batch of subpœnas for additional judges, clerks, and precinct watchers to appear Monday before the special vote fraud grand jury which returned 44 indictments on Friday.

Preacher Slays in Texas Church came in. Nutt corroborated the pastor's story. He said Chipps had made threats against Dr. Norris before the latter fired.

Nutt said Chipps warned the pastor he would kill him "if you make another statement about my friends." Dr. Norris replied that he did not "want any more trouble out of you," according to Nutt.

"Norris took him to the door and Chipps said to him, 'I repeat everything I have said,'" Nutt continued.

When the pastor turned back toward his office Chipps persisted with "Let's go to it," said Nutt.

"Chipps made a move toward Norris. I don't know what Dr. Norris did. I was watching Chipps. The first I knew was when the shots were fired."

Apprised of the killing, Mayor Meachem said:

"Chipps and Norris were close friends."

Mr. Chipps was president of the D. E. Chipps Lumber company. He was a native of Virginia. He was a member of the Fort Worth and River Crest clubs, a Knight Templar and a Shriner.

FRIEND OF DR. STRATON.

The Rev. J. Frank Norris earned an international reputation as a leader in the fundamentalist movement. A companion and close friend of the Rev. John Roach Straton, the New York fundamentalist leader, he advocated expulsion from the Baptist church of all persons having leanings toward liberal views on evolution and Bible interpretation.

In January, 1925, preaching in Chicago, he suggested that Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, one of the liberals of his church, be unfrocked.

Gave 'Em "Hell" in New York.

He gained considerable notoriety in New York when, at a meeting sponsored by Dr. Straton, he announced that he was old-fashioned in his views and that he intended to "give 'em [the evolutionists] hell, from the first word to the benediction." His militant stand against the evolutionists brought him into close touch with the late William Jennings Bryan, whom he aided in the preparation of the case against John T. Scopes in Dayton, Tenn. When Scopes was convicted, Mr. Bryan wrote Mr. Norris thanking him for his help.

Often likened to Billy Sunday, the Texas minister engaged in bitter controversy with Baptist university authorities in his home state several years ago and did not hesitate to refer to them as infidels. His church has a membership of 8,000. Its buildings cost $500,000.

Last year, at a Northern Baptist convention in Washington, he severely criticized the Y. M. C. A. for opposing blue laws and—as he phrased it—for teaching young men to smoke during the war. At one time he predicted the destructioin of "sinful New York."

In 1911 the Rev. Mr. Norris was tried for arson following the burning of his church. He was acquitted.

25,000 SWEDES TO ATTEND ANNUAL PICNIC TODAY

Twenty-five thousand people are expected to attend the annual picnic and celebration at the Swedish Societies Old People's home in Evanston today, at which Adolph O. Eberhart, former governor of Minnesota, will be the principal speaker. Carl O. de Dardel, Swedish consul in Chicago, will make an address, as will Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Evanston.

Officials of the home expect to realize $50,000 from gifts by friends of the home, through the plan of Albert I. Appleton, who donated $5,000 with the provision that nine other individuals make similar contributions to the institution.

Yank Collector Finds Dickens' First Play

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 17.—C. J. Sawyer, an American book collector, finding he had purchased Charles Dickens' first literary effort, a play named "Rozanza," written when Dickens was 16, sold the works back to England recently, it was announced tonight. The play is a comedy. Mr. Sawyer sold the manuscript because he thought it should be kept as an historical relic by Great Britain.

U. S. PLANS TO FIND OUT IF CONTINENTS OF WORLD ARE SHIFTING

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—In an effort to disprove or confirm the theory that the continents are not permanently and solidly fixed to the globe but are experiencing changes in position, a world wide scientific investigation is to be conducted this fall, the commerce department announced today. Experts from the coast and geodetic survey will participate in the work. Aside from the natural interest which is aroused by the possibility of the reality of this theory of moving continents, the investigation is considered of the utmost scientific importance for the reason that, if substantiated, it will affect all of the theories which have been held in the past as to the origin of continents and the causes of the great changes which have taken place in geologic time on the earth's surface.

A. BERSBACH, HEAD OF PRINTING HOUSE, IS DEAD

Alfred Bersbach, pioneer resident of Chicago and president of the Manz corporation, printers and engravers, died yesterday at his summer home in San Diego, Cal. He was 70 years old and had been ill of heart disease for several weeks.

A native of Chicago, Mr. Bersbach joined the J. Manz & Co. engraving firm when he was 16 years old. Eight years later he was made a partner. In 1890, when the concern was incorporated, he became secretary and treasurer, then president and general manager.

He is survived by a widow, a son, F. J. Bersbach, and two daughters, Mrs. David Anderson and Mrs. Samuel Porter. A member of the Chicago Athletic association, he was also prominent in the Masonic order.

Asks Police to Help Her Find Thaw; Wants to Wed

Winchester, Va., July 17.—(AP)—A young woman, who said she was Miss Forrest Walsh of California, appealed to police here to help her locate Harry K. Thaw, who, she insisted, has promised to marry her. Thaw is said to be in Pittsburgh or New York. Miss Walsh said she and Thaw had engaged in a mail courtship and had never seen each other. She told police she had copies of all of Thaw's letters, but had returned originals several months ago in compliance with his request.

Break Bricklaying Record; 2 Lay 10,000 in 7 Hours

New York, July 17.—[Special.]—What is believed to be a modern record was set by two local bricklayers when they laid 10,000 rough bricks in a sixteen-inch wall in seven hours today. This record, made by Samuel Faticato and Tony Iannello, betters, it is said, the mark recently set by a Chicago mason who laid 4,500 bricks in a twelve-inch wall in eight hours.

Pronounced Earthquake Recorded at Washington

Washington, D. C., July 17.—(AP)—A very pronounced earthquake, beginning at 10:25 a. m. today and continuing until 12:05 p. m., was recorded on the Georgetown university seismograph. It was estimated by Director Tondorf at 5,000 miles from Washington.

REV. WILLIAMS MAY BE OUSTED IN B. G. A. SPLIT

3 Others May Quit in Row Over Brennan's Coin.

The Better Government association, most zealous of Chicago's uplift societies, is facing a probable split in its own ranks. The reported trouble originated, it is said, in friction over the $23,000 donation by George E. Brennan, the Democratic leader, revealed after 18 months of silence. The report of strife in B. G. A. ranks specifies that three of its prominent officials may resign shortly. It also is persistently reported that the reform organization's crusader, the Rev. Elmer L. Williams, is about to be ousted.

It is no secret that things have been at sixes and sevens in the B. G. A. for several months, in fact since the Brennan incident became known before the spring primaries. The reformers have had differences on how to reform.

Treasurer Didn't Know.

The three officials whose forthcoming resignations are rumored are Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist church, George W. Dixon and William C. Hollister. Mr. Dixon was treasurer when the Brennan $23,000 came in, but he didn't know where it came from until Mr. Brennan told, long afterward.

Mr. Dixon was out of the city yesterday. Mr. Hollister was asked about the report and said he preferred not to make a statement. Dr. Thompson said: "I haven't attended any meetings or been near the Better Government association for a long time and haven't heard anything about them for a long time and that's all I care to say."

Denials that Williams' services were soon to be dispensed with were made in other quarters. The most zealous group in the B. G. A. is understood to be all for the raiding, crusading Mr. Williams. On his behalf it is denied that he has had friction with his equally zealous colleague, Supt. E. J. Davis, who left the Anti-Saloon league several years ago when he and F. Scott McBride couldn't agree.

Differences Patched Up.

Thomas D. Knight, the B. G. A. director who negotiated the Brennan contribution, said he did not believe any of the reports of friction were authentic. He declared that differences of opinion on reform methods have been patched up and that if Williams eventually does leave the B. G. A. it will be for reasons of economy only.

DIVORCE TANGLE LANDS YANK, 72, IN MEXICAN JAIL

Mexico City, July 17.—(AP)—The marital tangle of John F. Howard, 72 year old manufacturer of Haverhill, Mass., has been further complicated by his formal arrest and imprisonment here pending his trial on charges of perjury and bigamy. Mr. Howard was arrested in Mexico City and taken to the Curenavaca jail on the instance of his sons, John C. of Los Angeles, and Albert F., who have been here some time in an effort to secure what they feel is redress for their mother.

The manufacturer, who secured a divorce in Mexico and then married Mrs. Eleanor B. Phillips of Milwaukee, with whom he came to Mexico, has been given the warden's room at the jail and is permitted to send to his hotel for his meals. Mrs. Phillips is now ill at a Mexico City hospital, but her condition is not regarded as serious.

According to information here, the sons secured their father's formal arrest after their efforts to effect a compromise of the marital tangle had failed.

CRIMINAL COURT SENTENCES 167 TO PRISONS IN JUNE

The Criminal court judges during June sentenced 167 defendants to various penal institutions, according to the monthly report made public yesterday by John H. Passmore, clerk of the court. The penitentiary received 46 new convicts from Cook county, Pontiac was allotted 33, the jail 15 and the Bridewell 73.

Judge Emanuel Eller headed the list of cases disposed of, having tried 65 indictments. He sentenced 44 defendants. Judge William N. Gemmill sentenced more to institutions than his associates, having a total of 46. Chief Justice Thomas J. Lynch imposed 25 sentences.

Despite the fact that nine judges worked throughout June the report shows that at the start of the July term 1,242 indictments remain on the docket.

OPERA STAR DIVORCED

Frieda Hempel, opera star, has just been granted a divorce in Paris from her husband, William D. Kahn, New York patent broker. The picture shows the opera star with her ex-husband.

FRIEDA HEMPEL, OPERA STAR, GETS DIVORCE IN PARIS

PARIS, July 17.—(AP)—Frieda Hempel, the opera singer, received a final decree of divorce Thursday, it became known today. Madam Hempel charged her husband, William B. Kahn, a New York patent broker, with abandonment and refusal to support her.

Married in 1918.

New York, July 17.—[Special.]—Frieda Hempel, the prima donna was married to William B. Kahn, president of the W. B. Kahn company, patent brokers of New York, on June 8, 1918, at St. James' Lutheran church, here. By her marriage, Madam Hempel, a native of Leipsic, Germany, became an American citizen.

Announcement of the singer's engagement to Mr. Kahn had been made early in the spring of 1918, when feeling ran high against artists of German origin. Mr. Kahn and his mother, Mrs. H. Kahn, had accompanied the singer to Providence, R. I., the previous November, when her concert was held up by authorities until it was arranged that she should sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

A week after the Providence episode, Mr. Kahn went to Youngstown, O., where a woman's club threatened to cancel a concert until persuaded that Madam Hempel intended to become an American.

WITNESSES SAY COP KILLED IN SELF-DEFENSE

Testimony tending to show that Probationary Policeman Joseph Yarmaska of the stockyards police fired in self-defense when he shot and killed Charles Pryzstanski, 46 years old, 4726 South Laflin street, Friday, was introduced in the inquest yesterday at Zolp's undertaking rooms, 4603 South Marshfield avenue.

John Holtz, a neighbor, and the dead man's widow told the coroner's jury that Pryzstanski struck the policeman over the head with a milk bottle before the latter emptied his revolver. Yarmaska declared Przystanski attacked him when he went into the yard to quiet a disturbance. The widow denied on the stand that her husband had sold moonshine. After this testimony the inquest was continued until July 30, without a verdict being rendered.

King, Queen, Dictator Back in Spain from Their Tour

MUNCIE EDITOR THINKS HE WILL WIN IN U. S. COURT

"It seems utterly inconceivable to me that the Supreme court of the United States will uphold the decision of the Indiana Supreme court, that the truth is no defense." That is the position of George R. Dale, Muncie, Ind., editor, on his chances to escape serving a ninety day sentence imposed on him by Judge Clarence Dearth of Muncie for alleged contempt of court. Mr. Dale is in Chicago in the interest of his fight against the decision of the courts.

"The fundamental principles of the constitution and of American liberty are involved in my case," Mr. Dale said. "Monday morning my attorney, W. V. Rooker, will file a petition for a writ of error before Chief Justice Myers of the Indiana Supreme court at Indianapolis, on which we hope to carry the fight to the Supreme court of the United States."

Yesterday Mr. Dale spent in conference with Emmet Cavanaugh, a packer, and with Attorney Francis Houlihan, who are in charge of the raising of funds here to help him carry on the court contest. Yesterday he received a check for $500 as the first advance on the fund of $5,000 which it is hoped to raise.

HOFFMAN ASKS AID OF JUDGES IN JAIL SCANDAL

Two Guards Discharged for Drinking.

The Criminal court judges, at a meeting next week, will be asked to assist Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman in keeping his jail inmates from straying from the path of sobriety and interrupting the dignity of the courts during their sessions, such as was done Friday by Frank McErlane, notorious bootlegger and gangster, while before Judge John P. McGoorty.

Sheriff Hoffman, Warden George Weideling, and Assistant State's Attorney Charles Mueller held a conference with Chief Justice Thomas J. Lynch yesterday about the booze situation in the jail, and asked him to call the meeting of the judges. This Judge Lynch agreed to do.

Fire Two Guards.

Sheriff Hoffman ordered the two jail guards, Elmer Moore, Northbrook, Ill., and Robert Stratton, 3857 Maypole avenue, who were suspended when it was found that they, too, had been drinking as well as McErlane, fired, and said that he hoped the men would be sentenced for contempt.

"I will ask Judge McGoorty on Thursday when he resumed his investigation to hold both men in contempt," said the sheriff. "Moore at least should have been sentenced yesterday."

Stratton was brought to Prosecutor Mueller's office yesterday and notified of his outright discharge. Under questioning, however, he refused to admit that it was he who gave McErlane liquor as at first charged by Moore, according to Warden Weideling.

Wants High Priced Men.

Moore, who apparently had recovered from his drunk of Friday, at which time he expressed a desire to "knock Judge McGoorty loose from his trousers," could not be located yesterday to be notified of his discharge. He left his home early and had not returned when detectives went after him.

"You fire any man irrespective of his political backing, who is not living up to the rules of the institution," said Hoffman to Warden Weideling. "I am going to ask the county board to appropriate funds so that I can employ first class men to assist you. What can you expect when the guards receive only $14 a month and the assistant jailers $193?

Crime Commission to Investigate.

"We have 779 prisoners at this time and only 75 guards to work in three shifts to take care of them. I have asked time and time again for additional guards, but have not received a single extra man."

Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commisison, announced yesterday that his committee on institutions will start an investigation of jail conditions next week.

NUDE PICTURES MAY BAN PARKS' PENNY ARCADES

A ban on penny arcades at White City and Riverview park appeared in prospect yesterday following reports by the city board of censors that immoral pictures are being displayed.

Ethel R. McDowell, one of the censors, reported that she visited White City July 14 and discovered nude or semi-nude photos that were "most objectionable." Censor Anna M. Costello said she found the same kind of pictures at Riverview.

A third complaint came from Censor Samuel E. White who reported finding "the pictures of women in various stages of nudity" in an amusement arcade at 434 South State street.

In a communication to Corporation Counsel Busch, Effie D. Sigler, head of the bureau of censors, said she was informed the arcades had no city permits. Mr. Busch replied that, in his opinion, it would be necessary for them to get permits from the police department.

ACTS TO CLOSE PHILADELPHIA'S FAIR ON SUNDAY

Harrisburg, Pa., July 17.—[U. P.]—Attorney General George Woodruff announced today that he would institute quo warranto proceedings to force the closing of the sesquicentennial international exposition at Philadelphia on Sundays.

Prior to today's announcement by Woodruff, the attorney general's office has maintained that it had no power to interfere in the case, declaring that the officials of Philadelphia alone were empowered to act.

Revolution Breaks Out in Peru, Argentina Hears

BUENOS AIRES, July 17.—It is insistently rumored here that trouble of a revolutionary character has broken out in Peru.

FAMILIES FLEE AS MINE CAVE-IN ENGULFS HOMES

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 17.—(AP)—Thirty-five families fled their homes at Parsons today as a huge mine cave-in on the workings of the Glen Alden Coal company spread to the residence district.

The subsidences occurred over the Peach Orchard colliery where eight men lost thier lives in a mine cave in two weeks ago.

Two double houses have disappeared into the earth to a depth of about 70 feet and at least 20 other homes are undermined and in danger of falling. There has been no loss of life, residents of the danger zone having moved out before their homes collapsed.

Fearing that the cave in may spread to other sections, scores of persons worked feverishly today and tonight to move their belongings to solid ground. Many made homeless paced the streets weeping.

Arrangements were made tonight to open the high school building to care for those made homeless.

BRITISH POWER FOUND WANING IN DARK AFRICA

Territories Seethe with Discontent.

these territories, but its prestige there is not nearly so high as it used to be.

Kenya is supposed to be the great British colony of the future. Yet, I had not been many hours in Nairobi before I became aware of some of the reasons why Kenya is not progressing as it should. They were to be seen in a notice displayed in one of the hotels, the sale of a farm for coffee growing. "Owner going home," was the reason for the sale. It is a well known phrase in Kenya.

That is the real trouble with the modern British settler in Africa—he wants to go home after a year or two. So many people go to Africa with the hopes of making a fortune within a few years out of farming or mining. They wish to get rick quick and return to spend their fortune in and about Piccadilly. The African colonies are being exploited and not developed.

Indians Rout British.

But there is a much more sinister invasion in East Africa, and one that spells quicker ruin to British prestige. It is the Indian invasion. All along the coast, from Mombasa to Dar-es-Salaam, I found the Indian securely settled in his oriental fashion and possessed of all the real trade of the country. These Indians frankly regard the Britishers as honorable fools and fleece them of money and trade. Disliked as they are by the Africans, they are nevertheless all powerful. They own many buildings and huge tracts of land. They are the real rulers of East Africa.

In Tanganyika, which was once German East Africa, but is now mandated to Britain by the league of nations, the Indian trader is strongly intrenched.

Some weeks ago I leaned over the rail of a German steamer that was leavng Dar-es-Salaam. The band was playing a plaintive "Auf Wiedersehen" melody, and many German faces were turned longingly towards this town, where once had centered all their hopes in Africa. "We shall get it back," a German officer said to me. "The league of nations cannot deny us. We must be given a chance to display ourselves as settlers in Africa."

West Africa, too, is sending up its wisps of danger smoke across the horizon. In Nigeria, the Gold Coast, and Sierra Leone, there are murmurs of unrest among the natives.

The Black Peril.

But the really great danger to Britain in Africa today lies among the natives, those hordes of black savages whom witch doctors still hold in sway and for whom the gold mining towns of the Rand or the puny white settlements in Central or East Africa are merely leprous excresences on the face of the dark continent. If the black races of Africa should ever combine, white rule would be ended in a few hours.

There is one great unifying influence in Africa today, and that is Mahommedanism. Spreading from the north, it now possesses its millions of black converts in central and south Africa. Its teachers may be found among the Bantu tribes, in the wastes of the Kalahari desert, and in the kraals of the Zulus. Christianity is making no headway against this sweeping tide of Mahommedanism, which appeals to the African as the great fighting religion of the world.

KIP RHINELANDER'S WIFE SAILS FOR VISIT TO ENGLISH RELATIVES

New York, July 17.—[Special.]—Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander, mulatto wife of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, sailed for England today on the White Star liner Majestic protesting "undying love" for her husband, but denying that she expects to meet him.

MRS. KIP RHINELANDER. [P. & A.]

Behind her in the New Rochelle jail she left a man who gave his name as Louis George and who was arrested on her complaint. He appeared as an uninvited guest last night at her home, 763 Pelham road, while a farewell party in her honor was at its height.

With Mrs. Rhinelander when she sailed this forenoon was her mother, Mrs. George Jones. Both are going to England to visit Mrs. Jones' parents, Mrs. Rhinelander said.

SMITH VISIT TO COOLIDGE STIRS WET FIGHT TALK

Governor Will Be a Candidate Again.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 17.—[Special.]—The presence of Gov. Smith here has focused interest not only in the strength of the wet movement nationally and its effect upon the Republican party in the fall elections, but has centered interest upon Gov. Smith himself as the probable Democratic candidate for governor of New York and the leader in the wet cause as the Democratic aspirant for president.

While Gov. Smith declined to comment upon his plans there is every indication that he will accept the gubernatorial nomination and continue his efforts to strengthen himself for the presidential race. He still continues, while enjoying his vacation here, following his luncheon with the President yesterday, to be the puzzle of politicians and the popular hero of his constituents.

Cheered and Applauded.

His movements here today as he played golf and drove with his family and companions to Saranac were singled out by the crowds who cheered and applauded him. In truth he holds the center of interest in this community where President Coolidge is also spending his vacation and furnishes a sharp contrast with the quiet figure who presides over the destinies of the nation and who today did not leave his grounds, devoting the day to study and fishing.

With these two men here the observer naturally asks what will be the future politically. Already the gloomy forecasters have eliminated President Coolidge from the 1928 race, but he himself has shown no indication of his purposes. He remains sphinx like and self contained. The rumors have not disturbed his serenity.

Gov. Smith is altogether different. One sees in his every movement that he is going after the Democratic presidential nomination, and to strengthen himself much against his personal wishes and comforts, will accept the gubernatorial nomination in New York this year.

Picks His Own Ticket.

That Gov. Smith will dominate the situation in New York and name a ticket that will aid him and his plans is accepted here. Thomas F. Conway of Plattsburgh is slated for the nomination for the United States senate. He is not any too strong and Republicans believe that he can not command enough strength to defeat Senator Wadsworth. It has always been understood that there is such a personal bond between Wadsworth and Smith that the latter would do nothing to defeat the senator.

While here Gov. Smith is seeing Democratic leaders and on his return will confer with Joseph P. Tumulty, who was secretary to President Wilson, at Lake Placid where are also assembled Democrats from different parts of the country who favor the injection of the wet issue into the Democratic national fight.

President Coolidge has shown every courtesy to Gov. Smith during his stay. He sent him a three pound pike which he caught himself this morning and wished him a pleasant rest in the mountains.

Sees Boys Rescued.

Today while seated on the piazza of his cabin with Mrs. Coolidge he saw secret service men and Commander Boone rescue four Canadian boys who had been capsized while sailing in Lake Osgood. The boys were stopping at the camp of Dr. Wilfred McDougall, a Canadian senator of Montreal. They were Arthur Dooner, Leonard Green, and Wilfred McDougall Jr. of Montreal, and Alan Walsh of Victoria, B. C.

Tomorrow President and Mrs. Coolidge will attend the First Presbyterian church at Saranac, while Gov. and Mrs. Smith will go to mass at St. Bernard's church, in the same town.

RING WAR TOCSIN IN POLAND; STOP ALL ARMY LEAVES

Pilsudski Sees Menace from Lithuania.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, July 17.—Military leave in the Polish army was suspended today for the remainder of the year. This announcement was made by Marshal Joseph Pilsudski following a conference with military chiefs whom he called together in Warsaw for consideration of the problems of national defense.

The marshal's supporters interpret the sudden action as necessitated by conditions on the frontiers, while the conservatives and anti-Pilsudski organs consider the latest Pilsudski order as a new gesture in a war scare campaign intended to arouse the fear of imminent foreign danger and detract public attention from the internal political situation.

News of the cancellation of army leaves appearing in the government papers today caused widespread depression, especially in the ranks, where the peasant soldiers are accustomed at this time each year to receive permission to return to their farms to assist their families in harvesting the crops.

Reports Lithuanians Massing.

The announcement carries no explanation for the suspension, which is put into effect for the first time since the summer of 1921 when Marshal Pilsudski held all his men to the colors to defend Warsaw from the bolsheviks. Other Pilsudski newspapers continue their campaign of publishing alarming reports of the condition on the Lithuanian and Russian frontiers.

One newspaper tells of a large movement of Lithuanian troops singing "March on Vilna" while another journal demands to know why the soviet troops continue to fire on the Polish border patrols in the vicinity of Komanska. Conservative journals report that their correspondents, located at these points on the frontier, are unable to confirm the alarming reports published in the Pilsudski press.

Raise War Cry.

Articles concerning various developments in Germany, Russia, and Lithuania are being given great prominence, emphasis being placed on the war cry that Poland must be prepared to defend the life of the republic on every one of three hostile frontiers.

A large section of the Polish masses is ready any time to accept such news as a grave warning from their national hero and patriot in whose honesty of purpose they hold great faith, but the politicians believe that the marshal is resurrecting the war scare, even at the risk of actual war, for the purpose of suppressing a growing demand for a statement as to the government policy, and at the same time diverting attention from the marshal's gradual loss of political support in the diet.

Marshal Pilsudski's leading newspaper supporter give prominence to a report of the existence of a secret military treaty between Germany and Lithuania, directed against Poland. The report was credited to newspaper correspondents in Berlin and quoted the German pacifist, Herr Foerster, as having revealed this treaty in a secret meeting of a socialistic club in Berlin.

German Aid Reported.

According to this report, which was widely reproduced and discussed, Germany has agreed to place capital at Lithuania's disposal for the establishment of war matrial plants in Lithuania for the manufacture and storing of war materials, which are forbidden in Germany by the Versailles treaty, but which would be available for Germany in Lithuania in the event of hostilities.

This arrangement, which would be facilitated by the common frontier of Germany and Lithuania east of East Prussia, would have the effect of giving Germany potentiality of rearming herself. The reported treaty sets forth that Germany must support Lithuania's claims for Vilna, the old capital of the country, which Poland took by force in 1921.

Whether this report is true or not, it's widespread publication throughout Poland, and its emanation from Pilsudski sources, has served to raise a scare of foreign aggression, which the politicians say is Marshall Pilsudski's aim to divert the public's attention from the country's critical situation.

Strife on Border.

Lithuania's continued refusal to reopen relations with Poland until its "stolen capital" is returned and Poland's successful resistance to all demands to relinquish it, leaves the controversy a clean cut one and a cause for war at any time either contestant wishes to resort to arms.

The Polish-Lithuanian frontier has been closed now for several years, with armed guards patroling it and the sentries occasionally taking pot-shots at each other. Every now and then incidents which tend to further intensify the feeling on both sides occur on the border.

The closed frontier has caused serious economic losses to both Poland and Lithuania. They also involve great damages to English interests which control large Polish lumber concessions since logs can no longer be transported down the Niemen river to the Baltic. The cessation of this traffic has greatly affected the Lithuanian transport and shipping industries with resultant unemployment. Economically and politically and militarily, the general situation bristles with bitterness.

Transfers General.

Both countries have strong military forces facing each other on the frontier. The Lithuanians are based at Kovno and are in rail communication with Königsberg and Riga, while Poland's forces are based at Vilna, Grodno, and Suwalki.

Further attention to the situation was attracted by Marshal Pilsudski's sudden visit of inspection to the Lithuanian frontier, with the additional fact that he gave orders for the transfer of Gen. Zeligowski from his post at Warsaw to Vilna, where he is now, not in command of the troops, but on a secret mission. Gen. Zeligowski is ex-minister of war and it was he who captured Vilna when Marshal Pilsudski was chief of state. He is a former Russian general and is credited with being one of Marshal Pilsudski's few confidantes.

Print Secret Telegrams.

New elements entered into the international intrigue with the publication by the anti-Pilsudski press of secret telegrams transmitted between Poland's general staff and the Polish nineteenth army division at Vilna. These messages mention the names of several unknown women and give a curious air of mystery to the course of events.

The first message reads, "Wanda is going to England tomorrow and asks for final instructions. Commander happy."

The second message was, "Mrs. Olga here with children and commander is contented."

The third message reads, "Sofia feeds the commander strawberries and makes him laugh."

Believes England Interested.

The anti-Pilsudski papers are publishing these messages, and say that "commander" refers to Pilsudski, and there will be further revelations concerning Wanda, and these will have to do with Polish-English affairs, particularly with reference to the Indian office at London. While no further details are given now, the mysterious messages have served to revive the belief that England is interested in employing Marshal Pilsudski's assistance to counteract the spreading of Red propaganda in England and India.

Additional weight to the war scare was given by a report found in a Pilsudski newspaper of a recent speech by the soviet minister Radek, in which the Russian is quoted as saying that "Russia's armies must be so great and strong and efficient that they'll be able to take Warsaw before Marshal Pilsudski's legions can cross the Russian frontiers."

JUDGE REBUKES ATTORNEYS FOR DIVORCE SPEED

Too much enthusiasm in attempting to obtain a quick divorce for their clients gained a reprimand yesterday for Attorneys Frank E. Cantwell and Myer H. Gladstone from Superior Judge Joseph Sabath. As a punishment, the judge said the divorce case would not be heard for at least two months.

The attorneys represented Mrs. Mary Warren Davis, 2613 Hampton court, and Harry A. Davis, wealthy insurance broker at 33 South Clark street. Immediately after the divorce bill was filed Friday the lawyers asked Judge Sabath to hear the case. He refused and the attorneys then went before Judge John J. Sullivan. They obtained a hearing, but Judge Sullivan yesterday morning told them to take the case back to Judge Sabath.

"If I were not sure from a personal investigation of the facts that you did not obtain the second hearing maliciously, I would cite you for contempt of court," remarked Judge Sabath. "There will be no thirty minute divorces in my court."

Chicago Police Asked to Hunt for Stolen Airship

The Chicago police were asked yesterday to search for an airplane that was stolen from a hangar in Richmond, Ind. Chief of Police Eversman of the latter city reported that the craft was believed to have headed here. Sergt. William Rohan ordered his squad to try to find it if it lands.

CATHOLICS OPEN BOYCOTT WAR TO HUMBLE MEXICO

Hope to Cut Excise, Force State to Relent.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Mexico City, uly 17.—The united Catholic party held a grand reunion here last night behind closed doors to consider the church situation under the new decree governing the church and religious schools. Persons who attended say the Catholics decided to enforce a virtual boycott against the government, urging all Catholics to refrain from using articles from which the government receives its greatest income.

The people are urged not to purchase silks or other articles of luxury bearing heavy import duties and to avoid the use, where possible, of postage stamps, liquors, foreign and native tobacco, and all forms of merchandise subject to heavy excise duties. The churchmen resolved not to buy lottery tickets, as they constitute a considerable part of the government's income. Catholic women have decided to give up all social functions.

To Organize Catholics.

The United Catholics plan a Catholic committee in every town, village, and community of Mexico to carry out the resolutions of the grand central committee.

To the question, "How do you propose to prevent the sale of lottery tickets and luxuries?" a prominent priest replied today: "Easily. We will boycott the commercial houses selling them and as the Catholic purchasing power is enormous we will be able to effect our aims without other pressure."

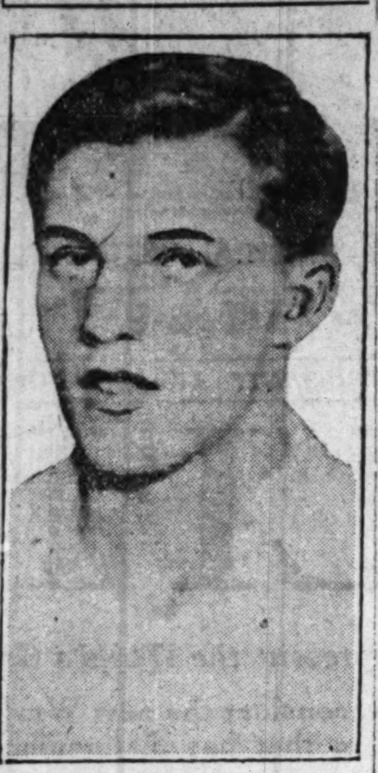
To Pray for Mexicans.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 17.—Arrangements for the offering of special prayers on Aug. 1 for Mexican Catholics have been published by the Vatican. The pope will celebrate the mass in the Pauline chapel, the same service being held in all the Roman Catholic churches. It will consist of the adoration of the blessed sacrament for an hour, with the chanting of the "Miserere." Only the intimate court of the pope will be admitted to the ceremony, which the pope is to conduct.

The queen of Italy today presented the churches of Assisi, where St. Francis was born, with four altar coverings valued at 300,000 lire ($10,200). The gift was made on the eve of the anniversary of the famous saint's death, which also was the occasion of the government's restitution of the convent of San Francesco to the Franciscan friars, indicating further efforts of the government to prepare to close the rift between the state and the Vatican.

ROBBER ARRESTED



JOSEPH BUSHELL.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

SAFEBLOWER AND WIFE, ALLEGED BIGAMIST, SEIZED

Joseph Bushell, stickup man and safeblower with a long record, and his wife, Ruth, an alleged bigamist, were arrested yesterday in the Jackson Beach hotel, 1552 East 63d street, by a detective bureau squad commanded by Sergt. Alva Stevesson.

Bushell was wanted in connection with the killing of a watchman in the plant of the Cascade laundry, 79th street and Racine avenue, during a burglary in March, 1925. He had also forfeited bonds after being arrested for a safe blowing in the Modern laundry, 58th and Halsted streets. With him the detectives arrested Russell Grandell, of Toledo, also believed to have been involved in robberies.

The girl, it is said, married a man by the name of Davis three years ago and later went through a marriage ceremony with Bushell without the formality of divorce. She has a 3 month old girl, who is now in charge of her relatives. The three prisoners are held at the detective bureau.

Geneva Police Discover Plot Against U. S. Embassy

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CLAIM MEXICAN TRIED BLACKMAIL ON EVANGELIST

Aimee Case Waits Grand Jury Quiz Tuesday.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., July 17.—[Special.]—The war of affidavits upholding and attacking Aimee Semple McPherson's story of six weeks captivity by kidnapers in Mexico, continued vigorously today.

Mrs. McPherson's counsel, composed of Arthur Veitch, attorney in chief; Roland Woolley and Leonard Hamner, sprung one more surprise during the day than did the police and district attorney's office.

Veitch made public an affidavit by William Appel of Douglas, Ariz., which recounts that Appel acted as interpreter for the woman evangelist and Mayor Ernesto Boubion of the Mexican town of Agua Prieta on July 2. On that day Mrs. McPherson visited Agua Prieta in attempt to trace her movements during the time she asserts she was escaping from a kidnap hut in Sonora, near Douglas, Ariz., where her dramatic reappearance ended six weeks of mourning while she was believed drowned.

Appel's affidavit says that Boubion arranged a conference at the Curio cafe, Agua Prieta, at which the Mexican mayor, Mrs. McPherson and Appel were present.

The affidavit says that the mayor accused the evangelist of being in Agua Prieta two days before her appearance in Douglas and intimates he was willing to keep the story to himself for a consideration.

Officers in charge of the investigation today checked up the reported identification of Mrs. McPherson as one of a party with two men who made a brief stay at Jacumba Hot Springs, in the mountains between San Diego and Imperial county, California, shortly after May 18.

Asked for Seclusion.

B. L. Vaughn, owner of the resort, today told district attorney's operatives that a large blue car drove up to the hotel several days after the disappearance of Mrs. McPherson. The driver came to the office and asked for secluded apartments. Their meals were all served in the apartments and they left, leaving money on the table to pay their bill.

"The affair seemed peculiar," the hotel man said, "but when Mrs. McPherson's pictures appeared in the newspapers the woman in the car, although she was veiled, bore a marked resemblance to Mrs. McPherson and everything was so mysterious I believe it was she."

The district attorney's staff today pointed to discrepancies in the affidavit of Mrs. V. R. Umphrey, presented on Mrs. McPherson's behalf yesterday, in which Mrs. Umphrey swore that it was she and not Mrs. McPherson who was observed outside the Café Internacional in Agua Prieta several days prior to Mrs. McPherson's appearance in Douglas.

The officers said Mrs. Umphrey swears she was in Agua Prieta on June 15 while C. E. Pape of Tucson, Ariz., who made the identification before the grand jury, swears to seeing Mrs. McPherson in Agua Prieta on June 18.

Wire from Ormiston.

A telegram signed, "Kenneth Ormiston," addressed to the mayor of Los Angeles and the county grand jury was received from Norfolk, Va., late today.

The wire reads: "I stand to clean up hundred thousand in Norfolk, Va., real estate boom. Will sue Los Angeles if don't stop rotten stories about me. Will not leave Norfolk until boom is over or clean up big. Cut out the bum stuff or will pay dear for it."

The Los Angeles Times tonight received a telegram, signed Ormiston, from New York City.

"I wired Keyes Wednesday from here," it said. "Yesterday he gave out contents with intimation that it came from North Carolina. Ask Keyes why he thus gave support to idiotic Carolina story when he knew wire came from New York. Ask him why he has not published my letter."

Ormiston at one time was operator of Mrs. McPherson's Angelus temple wireless broadcast station and disappeared after being questioned by officials regarding his relations with the woman pastor and his knowledge of her disappearance. Witnesses testified that he was seen with her in two California towns a day or two after her disappearance.

Hold Arizona Suspect.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 17.—(AP)—Federal authorities at Gila Bend, Ariz., are holding a man whom they believe has knowledge which may substantiate Aimee Semple McPherson's kidnaping story, police were informed here tonight.

Representatives of the United States marshal's office were reported to have taken the man, who gave his name as Harry Moore, into custody and federal authorities are working on the theory that Moore can lead them to the hiding place of a border character known as "Steve." Mrs. McPherson has maintained that a woman known as "Rose" and a man named "Steve" were her abductors. Moore is said to have admitted that he "knew Steve."

Senator Oddie Wounded Accidentally by Hunter

Reno, Nev., July 17.—(AP)—U. S. Senator Tasker Oddie of Nevada was painfully, but not seriously, injured while on a hunting trip yesterday. A shot from a shotgun fired by a fellow hunter struck him in the face below the left eye.

Implicate Americans in Venezuela Revolt Plot

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, July 17.—Nearly 500,000 rounds of ammunition, together with guns and revolvers, were captured here tonight as they were being loaded aboard a ship chartered by Venezuelan revolutionists. Several Americans are implicated.

SLAIN BANDIT'S PAL TELLS OF STUDENT HOLDUP

Admits Being with Carmichael; Used Glass Gun.

Dexter Clyde Harrison, 23 years old, itinerant railroader, identified yesterday as the companion of Arthur Carmichael, 24 years old, alias Blackie, alias Arthur Ruth, paroled convict, when Carmichael was shot and killed Friday night after having held up two University of Chicago students, admitted his part in the robbery to Sergt. James Fitzgerald, chief of detectives at Hyde Park police station.

"Sure, I was with 'Blackie'; but I was only the extra guy. I didn't do nothin," Harrison declared.

Harrison was taken into custody in his room at the New Central hotel, 500 South State street, by Sergt. J. F. Mulcahy of the detective bureau, a few hours after Carmichael had been shot. The two of them had held up George Gray, 6200 Greenwood avenue, and Miss La Verne Lane of 5621 Woodlawn avenue, as they were walking on 57th street between Kimbark and Woodlawn avenues. Carmichael, so the stickup victims assert, flourished a gun and took $14 from Gray.

One Hides, Other Is Slain.

A few moments later Gray came upon Policemen John Leddy and Joseph Conlan in a flivver. The three gave chase. Harrison was hiding in an areaway, but Carmichael, fleeing, dropped with a policeman's bullet in his temple and died shortly.

Cards in the dead man's pockets sent the police first to 940 North La Salle street to question Gene Renault, former pugilist, then to the New Central hotel where interviews with Joseph Kelly and Gene Roland led them finally to Harrison's room. Harrison was dressed, and he was fidgety. Taken into custody he admitted that he had been with Carmichael.

"No, I ain't got no home, you might say," Harrison told Sergt. Fitzgerald. "My parents split up when I was a kid. The old man's a section hand down in Missouri, I believe. I was born in Peoria, but I just come from Battle Creek, Mich., a couple of weeks ago.

Got Girls in Jackson Park.

"I met Carmichael, we always called him 'Blackie,' a few days ago. He used to work in a restaurant up north. That night we went to Jackson Park and picked up some girls. Last night 'Blackie' asked me did I want to pick up some change. I says, 'How,' and he says, 'Easy. You don't have to do nothing, but just come along and put a front like you was gonna frisk 'em. I'll have the gun and do all the work.'"

The gun, Harrison claimed, was a toy glass affair. And yesterday the police discovered just such a weapon, tossed away about the spot where Carmichael had dropped.

"So," Harrison continued, "I went with him. We both needed dough. This couple come along. I just stood there, like he told me to. He got the money, the girl was near a faint. Then I heard the flivver comin'. We both ran. I hid in a doorway till everything was over then I went back to my room. But I didn't do nothing."

Slain Bandit Had Record.

In Harrison's pocket was a letter from a W. J. Whisemand of Bucklin, Mo., stating that Harrison's father worked four miles from there. Police last night dispatched a telegram to Whisemand asking him to locate the father.

Carmichael, in whose pockets were found letters from a Bernard Carmichael in Milan, Mo., and from his sister, postmarked Hagerman, Idaho, has a police record, under the name of Arthur Ruth.

ADMITS PART IN FATAL HOLDUP

Officials Convicted in Liquor Conspiracy Trial

Boston, July 17.—(AP)—The jury in the Chelsea rum conspiracy trial, involving Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley, and 12 others, returned a verdict of guilty today in the case of five of the defendants. Six were acquitted and in the case of the mayor and one other a disagreement was reported. Those convicted included Police Inspector Thomas Quigley, brother of the mayor, and Police Sergeant Edward W. Isbester.

EXPECTS FRANCE TO CUT TERM OF U. S. DESERTER

PARIS, July 17.—(AP)—The probability that Bennet J. Doty of Memphis, American world war veteran, will not have to serve out his eight year sentence for deserting from the French foreign legion in Syria was indicated in high quarters today. The principal secretary to War Minister Guillaumat said that in his opinion there probably would be a marked reduction in the sentence. Although Doty, by his enlistment in the legion is technically a French citizen, the secretary said, the ministry did not want to treat him with undue harshness.

DAVISON NAMES 2 GENERALS FOR U. S. AIR SERVICE

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—F. Trubee Davison, new assistant secretary of war, announced the appointment today of the two new brigadier generals of the air service provided for by the army air expansion bill. This was his first official act as acting secretary of war, a position he assumed for this week-end because of the absence of Secretary of War Davis and Hanford Macnider, assistant secretary of war.

The two new brigadiers are both air service officers with from ten to twelve years' experience in the air. They are Lieut. Col. William E. Gilmore, chief of the air supply division, and Lieut. Col. Frank P. Lahm, air officer of the 9th corps area at San Francisco, Cal.

With the appointment of the two new officers, the high command of the new air corps, as provided in the army bill, is complete.

The present organization consists of Mr. Davison, assistant secretary of war in charge of aviation work; Maj. Gen. Mason C. Patrick, chief of the air corps; Brig. Gen. James E. Fechet, first assistant air chief and at present in command of air training, and the two new officers.

It is expected that Gen. Fechet will alternate with Gen. Lahm in holding the air operations post in Washington and in commanding the army's leading aviation training station at Kelly Field, Texas. Gen. Gilmore will continue as supply officer.

In the world war Gen. Lahm was first assigned to duty in connection with the balloon service and later was in charge of the air service of the second army. He has been awarded the distinguished service medal, the French Legion of Honor, and the Portuguese Order of Avis.

Gen. Gilmore was first connected with the air service in 1917 when he was assigned as chief of air service personnel Since the war he has held several important positions in the air service.

BLOWOUT UPSETS AUTO; KILLS TWO.

Vancouver Drys Try to End Sale of Beer by Glass

Vancouver, B. C., July 17.—(AP)—The Provincial and Vancouver City Prohibition association decided last night to circulate petitions immediately to limit the sale of beer by the glass in this municipality. All liquor in British Columbia is sold by the provincial government. After a meeting here on June 8, prohibitionists of the province announced a campaign to make British Columbia bone dry. They voted to initiate the campaign by eliminating beer parlors here The sale of beer by the glass was established by a Vancouver plebiscite

Jealous Suitor Kills Woman and Her Fiance

Peoria, Ill., July 17.—(AP)—A posse is in search of Fred Hoover, who this morning shot and killed Mrs. Anna Parks, a divorcee, and her fiancé, Herman Mason, at Canton. Hoover escaped after the shooting, which occurred in the cellar of Mrs. Parks' home. Hoover formerly boarded at the Parks home and was said to be in love with the woman.

COMMUNISTS IN DRIVE TO SEIZE REINS IN CHINA

Canton Troops Push On to North; Take Changsha.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, July 17.—The most serious attempt by the Canton Kuomintang [communist] party to invade north China since the days of Sun Yat-sen now is progressing, according to reports from central and south China telling of the capture of Changsha, the capital of Hunan province, by southerners, and the retreat of the northern forces to the town of Yochow on the Hupeh provincial border south of Hankow.

The Canton reports say Gen. Chiang Kai-chek, the so-called red militarist, has an army of 50,000 men advancing northward into Hunan province with Hankow as its objective. Hankow is Marshal Wu Pei-fu's central China base and source of wealth. He has arms and munition supplies in the city as well.

General Hurries South.

The seriousness of the situation, from the standpoint of the northerners, is indicated by the hurried return to Nanking of Gen. Sun Chuan-fang from the northern provincial border, where he has been inspecting the troops. Gen. Sun, the commander of the five lower Yangtze provinces, supposedly is allied with Marshal Wu, but his attitude really is uncertain, due to the antagonism of the Fengtien party, now allied with Marshal Wu.

Statements of Kuomintang leaders indicate the definite alliance of the Canton party with the Kouminchun [national army], the Christian Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang's forces in the northwest, thus making a clear cut issue between the radical parties and the more conservative Chicli-Fengtien group for the control of the nation.

ARMY OF VANDALS

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, June 16.—[By Mail.]—Unless aid is forthcoming shortly from some benevolent source thousands of farmers in North China, and especially in the congested sections within a radius of fifty miles from Peking, where the holdings are in almost every instance less than an acre, are doomed to starvation. The horde of undisciplined soldiers from Shantung province and lower Chihli which swept through the metropolitan district with the expulsion of the Kuominchun army of Feng Yu Hsiang, has laid the district utterly in waste. The brigade of White Russians that accompanied them was equally ruthless.

The militarists turned their horses loose in the fields of ripening grain in the occupied area and the growing crop was ruined. In such fields as the farmers were able to protect the militarists confiscated their scythes, and when with the sun turning the remaining stalks from green to yellow they compelled the farmers to reap the grain under their orders, stood over the farmers' wives while they toiled in donkeys' harness at the primitive stone mills and ground the wheat the farmers had threshed at the point of bayonets.

A woman with bound feet circumambulating twelve hours a day in the unmerciful sun of the Chihli plains, dragging or pushing the log that turns the heavy stone roller, always under the rifle of a loafing soldier, would turn a strong man's heart, but it is even worse. Though utterly exhausted by nightfall, these women get no rest; instead they are victims of the lust of these same soldiers.

CHINESE SIEGE OF SIANFU TRAPS 29 AMERICANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, China, July 17.—The consul at Hankow reports that he is unable to get word of twenty-nine Americans, chiefly missionaries, who are concentrated at Sianfu, Shensi province, which has been besieged for two months since the evacuation by the kuominchun [national people's army]. A British missionary who attempted to visit Sianfu reports that after a ten days' overland trip he was stopped by troops eight miles from the city and compelled to return. The consul at Kalgan, in Chihli province, is proceeding to Tatuntun to aid in the rescue of Americans there. The city is besieged by the kuominchun, with fighting within the walls.

Children with Bobbed Hair Barred from Schools

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 17.—Schools here have issued an edict against bobbed hair and have informed the parents that they must let the children's hair grow or they will not be accepted in classes.

BREAK GROUND FOR NEW MASONIC TEMPLE

William J. Dillon, president of the Ravenswood Masonic Temple corporation (with spade in hand), is shown turning first shovel of dirt as construction of new building at Wilson avenue and Paulina street starts. The structure will be occupied by eight lodges.

Cost Is $500,000

Ground was broken yesterday for the new Ravenswood Masonic temple at Wilson avenue and North Paulina street. The building will be completed next July at a cost of $500,000.

The principal address yesterday was given by Samuel Peterson, an attorney and member of Ravenswood lodge, A. F. & A. M., one of the eight Masonic bodies which will occupy the temple. William J. Dillon is president of the Ravenswood Masonic Temple corporation which is building the structure.

ROBBED BY DAYLIGHT BANDITS.

Two bandits yesterday forced James M. Felton, an automobile salesman, living at the Metropole hotel, to drive his car to the curb at East Forty-ninth street and South Michigan avenue, drew revolvers, and robbed him of $140, also taking his car.

AMERICANS HELP PERSIA TO WIPE OUT OPIUM TRADE

Yank Finance Assistant Sees End of Traffic.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 17.—The opium traffic can be abolished entirely, not through measures proposed by the league of nations nor by blind reformistic measures, according to T. W. MacCormack, who has just arrived from Persia, where he went after attending the Geneva opium conference.

Mr. MacCormack, who is a member of the American mission which is aiding Persia in the handling of its finances, is director of internal revenue at Teheran. He has been a close student of the opium problem for the last four years.

"Persia, which rates as the world's fourth strongest producer of opium, has adopted a policy for the curtailment of production as soon as the economic condition of the country justifies this step," he told THE TRIBUNE.

Speed Railway Building.

There may be difficulty in the way of the plan, however, Mr. MacCormack admitted. One of these is the lack of transportation. Persia now has a balanced budget and is providing between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 a year for the construction of railroads, irrigation works and for the employment of foreign agricultural experts. Every effort is being made to change Persia from an opium producing country to a country producing silk, tobacco and other useful products.

The eventful reduction of opium production to the quantity necessary to meet medical requirements is certain

Yank Fights Opium.

An international committee under Frederick A. Delano of Washington was appointed by the league of nations to study the possibility of the abolition of opium traffic in Persia and Asia. It has completed a trip through Persia and is preparing a report.

Persia, which four years ago was deep in debt, is now thankful for the advice of such Americans as Dr. A. C. Millspaugh, administrator general of Persian finances and formerly economic advisor to the United States state department, not only for the balanced budget but for the country's ability to spend 20 per cent of its annual income on investments which will result in the final abolition of opium growing.

MR. BALDWIN AND ONE THING AND ANOTHER ON HISTORY.

Prime Minister Baldwin, speaking before the Anglo-American historians' conference in London, said that a better balanced understanding of history on both sides of the ocean would make for better Anglo-American relations. He said he believed many Americans felt that England paid insufficient attention to the revolution in the colonies but that the English at the time "were interested in the struggle in France which led to the downfall of Napoleon." Furthermore they were building an empire and therefore the period of events in America were not "especially significant to us."

It has been said, and by Englishmen, that general English knowledge of American history contains a bit of Washington and a bit of Lincoln and that no other characters in American history are known. The American school child is taught about as much English history as he is taught American. If he retains what he is taught and if he is taught so that he can understand it, both dubious, he knows the developments from Saxon England to the American republic and has them related.

The Englishman does not follow the colonials across the water. Why should he, in his opinion, if he thinks at all about at? They got away on their own and not much thought has been given to the beggars since. That is in keeping with a good deal of human nature and it is illustrated in this country. Pennsylvania, at a guess, does not know much Texas history. New England probably does not know much and cares less how Kentucky, Tennessee and Illinois were won. Illinois is blind to California except in the way of fruit and vacations.

Such of Mr. Baldwin's text as was cabled would indicate that he also is among the Englishmen who still pay insufficient attention to American history. Some scholarly English have interested themselves but they would not say that at the time of the American revolution England was preoccupied with revolutionary events in France. George III. and his ministers were concerned with France but it was with the French plan to break away from Great Britain its then most valuable imperial assets, the American colonies, and thus bring down the victor of 1763 and strip it of America as France had been stripped of Canada.

We imagine it would be a good thing if Great Britain knew more of American history. That is coupled with the thought that it would be a good thing if Americans knew more of their own history. The one might prevent the British from having some foolish presumption as to probable American conduct. The other might prevent Americans from doing some foolish things to themselves. The American theory of teaching history does regard the history of England at least to 1783 as essential to American history. Therefore it is taught, and if it is taught so that nothing much comes either of it or of the teaching of American history that is a fault in method.

Probably if Mr. Gladstone had not preceded Mr. Baldwin in regarding the American revolution as an episode in the French revolution he would not have been so sure that Mr. Jefferson Davis had made an army and, by gad, was about to make a nation and Lord Salisbury might not have had to go to bed sick on the news of Appomattox. The reverse of this may account for the fact that the prince consort was the safest director Victoria had.

We believe that a study of American history would have a good effect on British opinion. If the British view their own history institutionally this is a part of it just as their history is a part of ours. It would do Americans quite as much good to study their own and the British history to make a rediscovery of what their institutions really are and how they were carried forward and by what men.

Englishmen who knew the history of English liberty knew what was going on in the colonies and knew that if it did not prevail something would happen to make trouble at home. George III. was headed back to the Stuarts and the Tudors.

Americans who know the history of American liberty would not now head back in the same direction under what they conceive to be moralistic impulses.

THE PONS ASINORUM TO AMERICA.

In a recent issue of the New York Times we find a communication from one who signs herself "An American Woman Without a Country." This is her case:

She was born in America of colonial and Knickerbocker Dutch ancestry. She married a man who was a Frenchman by birth, but who is an Armenian citizen because the French laws in force at his birth obliged him to take the nationality of his father, who was an Armenian citizen. This woman and her husband wished to return and take up residence in the United States. She was informed that her husband could do so, but she could not.

Because he was born in France, the United States immigration laws said her husband could come in under the French quota. At the same time, the laws held that she had married an Armenian citizen and was therefore an Armenian, and the Armenian quota had been exhausted. Neither she nor her husband has ever been to Armenia, nor do they speak the Armenian language. The best this American woman could do was to get from the United States consul abroad a visa permitting her a six months' stay in this country, her native land and the land of her forefathers. At the end of that time, if she does not leave, she is liable to deportation.

There is no editorial to write about this. There is no need for comment. This woman's story writes its own editorial, makes its own comment. Officialdom, when it gets the bit of a law in its teeth, can and does make a unique kind of ass of itself.

NO VOLSTEAD JOKES IN THE MOVIES.

Will Hays has ordered the members of the Producers and Distributors of America to be certain no moving pictures "make light of prohibition on the theory that it is a type of humor." Mr. Hays is with the movies to make them moral, keep them moral, or keep people thinking that they try to be. The last is the most important.

There are some people who think that even comment on prohibition is immoral and a jest regarding it criminal. Jests can be made about burglary. In British and American comics the burglar is a standard figure of humor, quite as much as the plumber. The plumber objects. We have not heard of the burglar doing so. He accepts his place just as the golfer, tennis player, amateur gardener, amateur musician, and other sometimes comic elements of society do.

The humor of the Criminal court covers a wide and permitted range, but the humor of prohibition is taboo. It is there; but whereas there is nothing immoral in showing a man going home in the moonlight with a chicken not his, there is in showing a man coming out of the moonshine with a bottle. We do not often make a jest of murder. Nothing much humorous has been discovered in it, but we have the comic undertaker, the comic adulterer, and the comic wife beater.

The bootlegger, with his grand piano, his high-priced car, his game out of season, his opera subscriptions, and his other solvent conditions, is a part of real American humor, just as almost any dinner party in Washington is. Some of it may be sardonic humor, but it has permeated American life everywhere. The drys who would rather use machine guns on Volstead violators than on murderers, stickup men, and rapists may not know that they are funny, but they are, if you know what we mean by funny.

So is Mr. Hays when he says you must not have a wet joke in an industry which hires the help for sex appeal.

PINK POWDER PUFFS.

A new public ballroom was opened on the north side a few days ago, a truly handsome place and apparently well run. The pleasant impression lasts until one steps into the men's washroom and finds there on the wall a contraption of glass tubes and levers and a slot for the insertion of a coin. The glass tubes contain a fluffy pink solid, and beneath them one reads an amazing legend which runs something like this: "Insert coin. Hold personal puff beneath the tube. Then pull the lever."

A powder vending machine! In a men's washroom! Homo Americanus! Why didn't some one quietly drown Rudolph Guglielmo, alias Valentino, years ago?

And was the pink powder machine pulled from the wall or ignored? It was not. It was used. We personally saw two "men"—as young lady contributors to the Voice of the People are wont to describe the breed—step up, insert coin, hold kerchief beneath the spout, pull the lever, then take the pretty pink stuff and pat it on their cheeks in front of the mirror.

Another member of this department, one of the most benevolent men on earth, burst raging into the office the other day because he had seen a young "man" combing his pomaded hair in the elevator. But we claim our pink powder story beats his all hollow.

It is time for a matriarchy if the male of the species allows such things to persist. Better a rule by masculine women than by effeminate men. Man began to slip, we are beginning to believe, when he discarded the straight razor for the safety pattern. We shall not be surprised when we hear that the safety razor has given way to the depilatory.

Who or what is to blame is what puzzles us. Is this degeneration into effeminacy a cognate reaction with pacifism to the virilities and realities of the war? Are pink powder and parlor pinks in any way related? How does one reconcile masculine cosmetics, sheiks, floppy pants, and slave bracelets with a disregard for law and an aptitude for crime more in keeping with the frontier of half a century ago than a twentieth century metropolis?

Do women like the type of "man" who pats pink powder on his face in a public washroom and arranges his coiffure in a public elevator? Do women at heart belong to the Wilsonian era of "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier"? What has become of the old "caveman" line?

It is a strange social phenomenon and one that is running its course not only here in America but in Europe as well. Chicago may have its powder puffs; London has its dancing men and Paris its gigolos. Down with Decatur; up with Elinor Glyn. Hollywood is the national school of masculinity. Rudy, the beautiful gardener's boy, is the prototype of the American male.

Hell's bells. Oh, sugar.

LEGALIZED HOMICIDE.

[Aero-Digest, New York.]

The sad and untimely end of Maj. Moose and Cadet Point at Mitchel field is another chapter added to the book of sorrow of the air service of the United States.

This volume will continue to grow as long as our flyers are compelled to use the planes built during '16, '17 and '18.

D. H.s at least eight years old are being used to train pilots at the air service flying schools.

How much longer is this legalized homicide to continue? A certain amount of danger will always be found in training our youth to fly, but to compel this training to take place in a "flaming coffin" is beyond the pale of human intelligence.

The war department should issue an order forthwith, compelling the destruction of every war-built plane. To continue the use of this ancient aircraft is an assurance of a continuous loss of life. Stop it; and stop it at once!

A FUTURE DIPLOMAT.

Two small girls were playing together one afternoon in the park.

"I wonder what time it is," said one of them at last.

"Well, it can't be 4 o'clock yet," replied the other with magnificent logic, "because my mother said I was to be home at 4—and I'm not."—Toronto Globe.

THE CHURCHES AND LABOR

[By William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Green is a Baptist.]

We, the men and women who compose the ranks of labor, observe with pleasure the increasing interest which is being manifested by the Christian churches of our land in the social and industrial problems which so vitally affect the well being and happiness of all the people.

This attitude on the part of the churches has become more pronounced since the termination of the world war. Perhaps that great conflict quickened and awakened the smoldering fires of brotherhood and aroused the spirit of mankind to a full appreciaton of the fact that, after all, the whole world is akin. This interest in the well being of others should be stimulated and encouraged. We should be more and more conscious of the fact that the material prosperity of the few should not be acquired at the expense of the many. When gain and profit is wrung from the needy and helpless it becomes sinful and a thing of evil.

Society should not permit such pernicious policies to exist. Our sense of justice and our religious instincts should inspire the utterance of such a protest as to effectively prevent exploitation and oppression. In our complex civilization we find that our fortunes are so closely allied that to do one an injury impairs the happiness and welfare of the many. In like manner, if we practice right dealing and render exact justice, the beneficial results of such a righteous policy will accrue to all. The need of a moral and religious code to regulate the actions of men as they affect each other has existed through the world's history. Because of this need, rules of honesty, morality, and religion have been formulated and adopted by various groups and organizations. The application and observance of such rules was never more necessary than it is now.

The Bible says concerning Christ, "The common people heard him gladly." So it seems today the churches which are the most vital have attracted the masses to them. It is difficult to give expression to the spiritual emotions and feelings which move men to accept the teachings and doctrines of the Bible. It is impossible for the casual observer to understand the sacrificial acts of men and women who have been inspired and moved by the church.

Along with the growth of the church has grown up another organization which, in the domain of industry, has paralleled the work and service of the church. This is the trade union movement, an economic force which inspired the great philosopher, Carlyle, to say: "This movement they call organized labor is the universal, vital problem of the world."

As the representative of the great organized labor movement I present some of the outstanding reasons why there must be understanding between the church and labor.

They are both of the people. Their membership is drawn from the masses of the common people. Both are idealistic in character and founded upon the innermost feelings of the heart and mind. They both seek to promote the moral, spiritual, and cultural welfare of the people. Both are seeking to find a solution of social and industrial problems. Both are endeavoring to raise the standard of living and of citizenship.

My observation leads me to the conclusion that the need of the hour is to bring about a greater degree of confidence and a better understanding between the masses of the people and the church organizations as such, for we cannot ignore the fact that there is a lack of such contact. The cause for this state of affairs is found in the distrust that has arisen and developed out of the clashes that have occurred between capital and labor. If working men and women could be made to understand that the church is sympathetic to their righteous aspirations, and the church would show an interest in their material welfare corresponding to the interest they show in their spiritual welfare, there would no doubt be a much larger number of working men and women identified with the church.

The growth of industry and the increase in the wealth of earnings of corporations and individuals have tended to increase the difficulties of the church and labor. This is due to the fact that some men of wealth and power, highly influential in the business world and prominent members of the church, have failed to apply the principles of religion in their business dealings and in their relationships between employers and employés. The work of the church would be easier if the common problems of industry were correctly solved. For this reason it is clearly evident that the church cannot escape its responsibility, nor can it remain aloof, ignoring the problems which have developed out of our ever expanding industrial life.

As an illustration of this fact, we find the church is meeting with new and unexpected difficulties in China. With the awakening of the Chinese people have come the growth of industry and an increase in industrial development. During the last few years railroads have been built, mines have been opened, power plants have been erected, and the work of manufacturing has been established. The missionaries who carried the message of Christianity to the Chinese before the new era of industrial development found it easier to preach and teach than they do now. The relationship between the Chinese and the Europeans and Americans has changed, affecting the relationship between the Chinese and the missionaries. In too many instances when the Chinese sought better wages, humane treatment, and tolerable conditions of employment, employers, instead of listening to their entreaties, have continued to exploit the Chinese workingmen. Because all Europeans and Americans, in the eyes of many Chinese, come from Christian nations, the oppressive treatment has reacted on the relationship between the missionaries and the Chinese. The church at home and abroad must demand that Christianity should not only be taught and professed but also exemplified in human, industrial, and business relationships.

Labor has succeeded in some of its aims. It has succeeded in securing legislation for the compulsory education of children, the payment of compensation in case of industrial accidents, factory inspection and sanitary regulations. Sweat shops have been abolished and in some states child labor has been made unlawful. One of the unachieved objects of organized labor is the passage of the constitutional amendment protecting childhood from labor in all states of the Union. On the passage of this humane law the coöperation of all the churches is earnestly solicited.

There is one outstanding accomplishment of organized labor that has not sufficiently attracted the church. It is in the work of assimilation of the foreigner. Working men and women who have come to the United States from different countries and speak different languages, while having the common purpose to establish homes here, have been sought out in mills, mines, and workshops and given a welcome. It is amazing how organized labor has succeeded in a harmonious and coöperative way to weld into one organization so many people differing in language, nationality, and creed. These foreigners gain much of their education of America and American institutions from the trade union meetings which they attend. They are educated as to the duties of American citizenship and in some instances required to become naturalized American citizens. Organized labor invites the church to learn to know and understand the work it is doing to promote the brotherhood of man and toleration among different peoples.

KITCHENETTE HUSBAND.

The bride had but recently returned from her honeymoon and her mother was paying her first call on her since the wedding.

"Well, daughter," she asked, "is George good to you?"

"Just darling, mother!" exclaimed the young wife. "Only yesterday he showed me how to open a can of milk with a nail and a hammer."—American Legion Weekly.

LITTLE DANGER IN ZINC.

"ZINC is not a poison in the sense that lead and mercury are. There is no danger of zinc poisoning for the man who eats foods cooked in vessels which contain zinc, or taken from cans."

These are the opinions of Dr. Drinker, who, with his associates, has been studying the question for about three years. He disagrees with McCord and Friedlander on many points.

Dr. Drinker has found that the human animal is fairly rich in zinc. There is a possibility that it is zinc which galvanizes him into some of his activities. Zinc is found in all of his organs. He takes it in every day, and he eliminates it continuously. It is found in his food and in his excretions as well. It is stored in his tissues. When he eats a dozen oysters he adds to his stock of zinc.

And Dr. Drinker finds no evidence that any of this does any harm. He fed zinc in fair sized doses to laboratory animals for a considerable time, and he could find no evidence that it did them any harm. He examined very closely a group of men who had worked in zinc for a long time. They were sound in wind and limb, and their organs were without flaw.

On its face there seem to be two exceptions to the statement that zinc is harmless.

Men who inhale zinc fumes, in places where such fumes abound, do have a trouble that is commonly called "zinc chills." This Dr. Drinker holds to be due to the harmful effects of large numbers of particles acting on the air cells. He says an equal dose of any sort of heavy metal fume would have the same effect. He proposes the name "metal fume poisoning." The effect is not due to the poisonous effect of zinc as such, and differs in no way from the effects of similar doses of other metal as fumes.

All shops where metal fumes are made should be well provided with hoods and exhaust fans.

The other exception relates to zinc sulphate and zinc chlorides. These are corrosive substances and, like all other corrosive salts of the heavy metals, are quite poisonous. But these salts are not encountered by workers in industries, nor in foods nor water.

Some of the cases reputed to be cases of zinc poisoning and, beyond question, due to occupational exposures, Dr. Drinker thinks were due to exposure to other metals mixed with the zinc, and not to zinc itself.

In other words, zinc is pretty nearly given a clean bill of health by the research of Drinker and his associates. Such harm as comes from the use of corrosive salts is not to be counted in considering the question from the occupational standpoint. The harm due to zinc fumes is more to the point. But factories should always be freed from metal fumes of every kind. The notion that zinc taken up by ordinary water pipes was a cause of zinc poisoning fell into disrepute some time ago.

TOO MUCH WATER.

M. F. M. writes:

1. Is it possible to drink too much water?

2. Does drinking much water indicate a lack of some of the natural fluids of the body?

A schoolgirl living with us drinks a glass of water and a cup of cocoa for breakfast, three or four glasses of water at dinner, and the same amount at supper, besides little drinks between classes at school, and a final drink before going to bed. During the first semester she gained steadily a pound a week. Now she is losing, and is not drinking as much water.

REPLY:

1. It is.
2. It may be a habit.

Possibly the young lady has some form of diabetes.

Does she use salt or sugar to excess?

LANDLORD WOULD BREAK LEASE.

Chicago, July 10.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—We have been ordered to move from our flat by the landlord and our lease does not expire until May 1, 1927. Can we make him pay the expenses of our moving? W. W.

Since you are under no obligation to move until the expiration of your lease you can name your own terms.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

POOR PLUMBING.

Chicago, July 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I operate a tailoring and cleaning establishment in a store on which I have a lease. The tenants above have a lot of trouble with the plumbing in the sink, bathroom and ice box. The water leaks through the ceiling into my store, damaging the decorating and the merchandise. I reported this to the agent and the owner of the building, but neither has given it any attention. Can I break my lease or withhold the rent until the landlord remedies conditions? W. G.

Upon the facts that you state we would assume that the trouble is the fault of the tenant above you, in which case your remedy would be against such tenant and your obligation upon your lease would not be effective.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OLD AND NEW NAMES.

Chicago, July 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—M's mother died when she was an infant and the grandmother raised M. to womanhood under her name. Now M. wants to get married under this name of her grandmother. Would the marriage be legal or should she take her father's name? A. S. H.

The marriage will be legal if she uses the name she has been known by.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

STREET SIGN PLACED.

Chicago, July 6.—[Friend of the People.]—The street signs are missing on the corners of North and Lotus avenues. To whom should this be reported so that signs would be erected? M. S. K.

Our sign division reports that a street sign has been erected at the corner of North avenue and Lotus avenue.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 18, 1861.

WASHINGTON. — Gen. McDowell's Grand Army is on the move into Virginia. The columns pressed on to Fairfax Court House, which was taken with a loss to the federal forces of four wounded. The rebels numbering 6,000 fled precipitately on the approach of the Unionists. Col. Lewis Blenker of the New York German skirmishers, commanding the first brigade of Gen. Niles' division [the Fifth], led the vanguard of the whole column. The force moved numbered 53,000 by actual count of the regiments. A dispatch to President Lincoln from McDowell says the columns will camp three miles beyond Fairfax. He characterized the march as a hot and hard one. Large quantities of army stores, provisions, and camp equipage were left behind when the rebels retreated from Fairfax Court House. Intense anxiety prevails here. It is believed that McDowell will attempt to cut off Gen. Johnston, now in full retreat from Winchester. If so, McDowell will move toward Manassas Gap, leaving Manassas Junction and Richmond for another day. It is feared, however, that Johnston has been allowed time to effect a junction with Beauregard.

WASHINGTON.—The Intelligencer says that an officer who arrived here from Martinsburg reported that Gen. Johnston had broken his camp at Bunker Hill and was in retreat with his whole army, and that Gen. Patterson with his entire Union force is in close pursuit of the rebels. Patterson has 21,000 men. It is not believed Johnston will risk a battle.

CAIRO, Ill.—Secessionists at Nashville, Washington county, destroyed several dwellings belonging to loyal citizens. They also cut down the Stars and Stripes and hoisted a secession flag.

CHICAGO.—Brig. Gen. Pope left for Alton. The Great Western band also went to Alton to join the Hecker-Jaeger regiment as its regimental band.

EDITORIAL.—On McDowell's Army Movement—We are rejoiced that the forward movement has commenced. There is no other event in American history which gives us half so much satisfaction. Wherever the Union forces have marched with decent leaders against the enemy, they have routed them, and we believe they will do so now. And if they do not prevent Jeff Davis' congress from meeting on the 20th of July we are confident they will break up their session very soon afterward.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 18, 1901.

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia.—Count Tolstoi, who has been seriously ill, has suffered a relapse and his condition is grave. He is suffering from gastritis and his relatives and friends have been summoned to his bedside. He never completely recovered from an attack of gastric fever last winter. His physicians have no hope.

ALBANY, Mo.—The home of Hillman, a newspaper correspondent, was wrecked with dynamite last night. Hillman is charged with being the correspondent who wrote the story telling of a frog that ate dynamite, exploded and seriously injured or killed the three children of George McCurry. The trouble with the story was that McCurry was single, had no children, dynamite or frog. Some friends of McCurry decided to hoist Hillman by his own petard.

CHICAGO.—Abram Poole Jr. of the Onwentsia club and Princeton university won the "Teen" cup and the junior championship of the west yesterday at the Onwentsia club. With a score of 168 for 36 holes he finished first in a field of twenty-four.

CHICAGO.—The class in English literature at the University of Chicago was startled yesterday when Prof. Oscar L. Triggs, the man who compares Rockefeller to Shakespeare, declared that the hymns of the Protestant churches were doggerel and that dime novels were literature as compared to Sunday school books. Later in a conversation Prof. Triggs congratulated the world that paganism existed. "It would not be well," he said, "were all men Christians."

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 18, 1916.

LONDON.—The allied armies on all fronts pushed the Germans back. The most notable advances were made by the British in the Somme sector and by the Russians in the Volhynia district. The Italians claim against the Austrians, while the Slav offensive in the Caucasus is developing. The British lines in the Somme have been advanced to within five miles of Bapaume, the first objective of the present offensive, while the czar's forces during the day drove the Germans back and captured nearly 13,000 in the Volhynia region alone. On other fronts they captured 7,000.

LONDON.—The British government today will publish a list of from seventy to eighty business firms and individuals in the United States with which residents of the United Kingdom are forbidden to trade. This will be the first time that any American firms have been placed on what is known as the trading with the enemy blacklist. The order is aimed as a blow at the kaiser.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex.—Bertram I. Walker, private, I troop, 1st Illinois cavalry, died in the post hospital at Fort Brown. His is the first death that has occurred in the Illinois military organization stationed here. Walker lived at 6606 Glenwood avenue, Chicago, and was a student chemist for the Peoples Gas company before the President's call.

LONDON.—Great Britain again has refused a plea of the American Red Cross for permission to make conditional shipments of Red Cross supplies to Germany and Austria.

HUNDRED YEAR WAR FOR LEGAL REFORM

English Lawyers Fought Against Changes in System.

This is the second installment of an article by Prof. Edson R. Sunderland of the law school of the University of Michigan, in which he portrays the century of struggle through which the English public obtained their present system for the administration of justice, and describes the remarkable efficiency of that system. In today's installment he shows how the legal journals at first opposed all reform in the law, but finally became convinced that the legal profession would be crushed if it did not surrender to the demands of the public.

From the side of the legal profession the struggle may be followed through the pages of the law journals. The Law Magazine was founded in 1828, as a defensive measure for rallying the bar against the impending storm. The leading article in its first number was a brazen and undiscriminating panegyric of common law pleading, in which the criticisms of James Mill and the Westminster reviewers were referred to as "such ribaldry" that there was "no manner of reply which well-bred persons can employ." (1 Law Mag. 2.) The Legal Observer, established in 1830, and the Jurist, in 1837, joined forces with the Law Magazine in defense of the traditional privileges of the bar. None of them at first realized the extent of the popular revolt nor the intensity of public feeling, and were inclined to treat the matter rather cavalierly. Annoyance over the impudence of lay criticism gradually changed to resentment as the attacks on the profession increased in frequency and bitterness, and this in turn gave place to serious apprehension and alarm. Even the lord chancellor seemed to have deserted the profession and gone over to the enemy. (7 Leg. Obs. 321.)

The War Against Lawyers.

In 1843 the Law Times was organized as a new ally of the hard pressed forces of the bar. Its first editorial revealed the situation and defined the issue. It was entitled "The War Against the Lawyers," and was a rallying cry to the profession to awake to the dangers which pressed on every hand. The emoluments of the bar were seriously threatened, and energetic means of resistance must be promptly devised. (1 Law Times, 15.) Other appeals followed, in which the two branches of the profession were besought to forget their fancied differences, for, says the Law Times, "Surely lawyers have enough to do to repel the attacks of the common enemy, without turning their fratricidal hands against each other." (Same, 65.)

The defensive campaign was not an impressive exhibition of good strategy. But the position occupied by the profession was intrinsically very weak—much weaker, indeed, than most of its members were possibly able to understand. Many of the arguments advanced to meet the broad grounds of public complaint were striking instances of the unintelligent rationalizing by which instinctive or inherited prejudices are given a formal justification.

Defends Dilatory Procedure.

Perhaps the greatest scandal in the whole judicial system was the dilatory procedure of the Court of Chancery, yet the Legal Observer disposed of it with a wave of its wand. "For the last 250 years," it said, "the complaints against the present system have been continual and unvaried," yet "the Court of Chancery and its machinery . . . has remained nearly the same in every particular. It is obvious, therefore, that . . . the supposed evils . . . cannot, after all, have been very enormous, or they would not have been thus endured." (2 Leg. Obs., 401.) The delays in the queen's bench were shown to be a blessing in disguise. "What an incalculable benefit it is," says the Jurist, "that in the length of time which must elapse before a cause can be decided in that court, passions have time to cool, the angry feeling that prompts to litigation may subside, and if there are some obstinate spirits who are disposed to fight to the last, their ability to carry on the warfare is put an end to by the ruinous expense of the long protracted contest." (2 Jurist. 73.)

More Judges, Usual Remedy.

Such reasoning was worse than useless, and only demonstrated the bankrupt state of the profession as a social force. Hardly less pathetic was the argument for more judges. This was the standard solution for every judicial emergency, and was one which lawyers could always suggest with sincerity and contemplate with equanimity, for it required no change whatever in familiar practices and offered the additional attraction of more judicial appointments. But the British public, with its strong business sense, refused to believe the true remedy for defective machinery was the employment of more engineers to keep it going.

Reforms came gradually, by means of an incredible number of small bills and amendments, which not only familiarized the profession with new ideas during the slow course of the debates, but introduced actual changes at so moderate a rate that the bar became reconciled to one reform before the next was forced upon it.

County Courts Extension Bill Passes.

As demands for reform spread and their ultimate success became clear to the profession, self-interest urged participation in framing the rules for their operation. After all, the lawyers would have to use them, and no one would suffer so much as they from a crude and unworkable procedure. The line of resistance, therefore, varied. A few reforms, which might be defeated, were to be fought to a finish; those which were inevitable were to be brought under professional direction and control. Coöperation thus became a more effective method of self-protection than opposition. In 1850 the house of commons passed the second reading of the County courts extension bill with a staggering majority. It was an unexpected blow to the bar. But the Jurist said: "What is it that . . . the lawyers are afraid of? . . . We will answer for them. They are afraid of a legal revolution, and, without power to avert it, they are letting the conduct of it slip from theirs into other hands. . . . To sustain the actual [present] system . . . is impossible. To remodel it . . . may be possible, if the profession will stand forward to lead, not to obstruct, the reform." (14 Jurist, pt. , 117.)

Lawyers Forced to Take Lead.

The advice that it was better to lead than to obstruct the popular movement for reform represented the best opinion of a profession which had known nothing but defeat for a generation. In following it the lawyers were only submitting to the fundamental laws of social adjustment. As a result they presently found themselves enlisted with the reformers, presenting conservative views with which to temper the enthusiasm of the public, and supplying the technical skill necessary for the design of suitable remedial processes. It therefore happened that when the final major campaign opened over the Judicature act, the belligerent parties discovered that the war was really over. The issues had been fought out, and a sound basis for a mutual understanding was already at hand. The Judicature acts and the rules prepared under their authority codified the results achieved through the years of struggle for reform, and gave the administration of the law a new status and a new spirit. The people had taught the profession that its primary duty was public service, and the profession had convinced the people that it could meet the public demands.

There were three elements in the English situation which determined the course of the reform movement. They were the centralized bar, the centralized courts, and the centralized press.

Center on Inns of Court

The bar was not only concentrated in London but was further localized in the inns of court. It was a definite, tangible institution, heir of ancient tradition, and tenant of vast estates. Its members were not a mere aggregate of individuals, but an organized group, with a well defined social and political status. The administration of justice had for generations been committed to its care, and every one knew it. All the conditions therefore existed for focusing public attention upon the bar as the visible cause of the abuses in legal procedure.

But the abuses themselves required the emphasis of centralized aggregation to make them appeal to the imagination of the lay public. Popular opinion does not search far and generalize easily. Widely scattered courts might exhibit many judicial shortcomings without attracting public attention, but if all the defects were concentrated in one court or one closely affiliated group of courts, so that they could be seen and felt in all their cumulative magnitude, the situation would present dramatic possibilities. So it was with the superior courts of law and chancery in London. They were collectively chargeable with all the judicial mismanagement of the kingdom, and the aggregate of instances, when marshaled against them, made a most formidable indictment.

London Press Enters Fight.

There still remained the problem of publicity, and this was met by the centralized London press. The journalistic activity of England was concentrated in London, and with a few conspicuous exceptions, like the Edinburgh Review, English public opinion found its entire expression in the London newspapers and magazines. There was no other bar but the London bar to compete for the public attention; there were no other courts but the London courts to share the public interest, and there was no other press but the London press to discuss and criticize and condemn the administration of justice.

The striking feature of English reform was not the results accomplished, wonderful as they were, but the fact that legal procedure was brought under public, not professional, regulation. A definite and intelligent public opinion was developed as to the means and methods of judicial administration. Early in the struggle it became perfectly clear that delegation of the control of procedural technique to the legal profession was a policy which was socially unsound. "Improvements in it [procedure]," says a writer in 1843, "never can by possibility be effected, till definite opinions as to its real defects and the true modes of cure, shall prevail among those not in the profession of the law. As a science it is nearly where it was in the dark ages. . . . The mental accumulations which are the skill of the judge and the lawyer in their art, are heaps of prejudices, things prejudged, and stumbling blocks, when they begin to investigate procedure as a science. . . . We want, therefore, men of business, men of the world, and men accustomed to broad scientific researches, associated with lawyers in this work." (38 Westminster Rev., 107-120.)

The Times Assails Legal Profession.

The Times repeatedly pointed out the same limitation as a fact to be constantly remembered by the public. Thus in 1851, it wrote: "There would seem to be something in the profession of the law which blinds its votaries to the defects of any system which they are called upon to administer. . . . The example of their fathers, the tone of the treatises from which their knowledge is derived, the authority of the judges, the very atmosphere in which they practice—all are calculated to withdraw the minds of lawyers from any endeavor to reform the law." (London Times, editorial, July 19, 1851.)

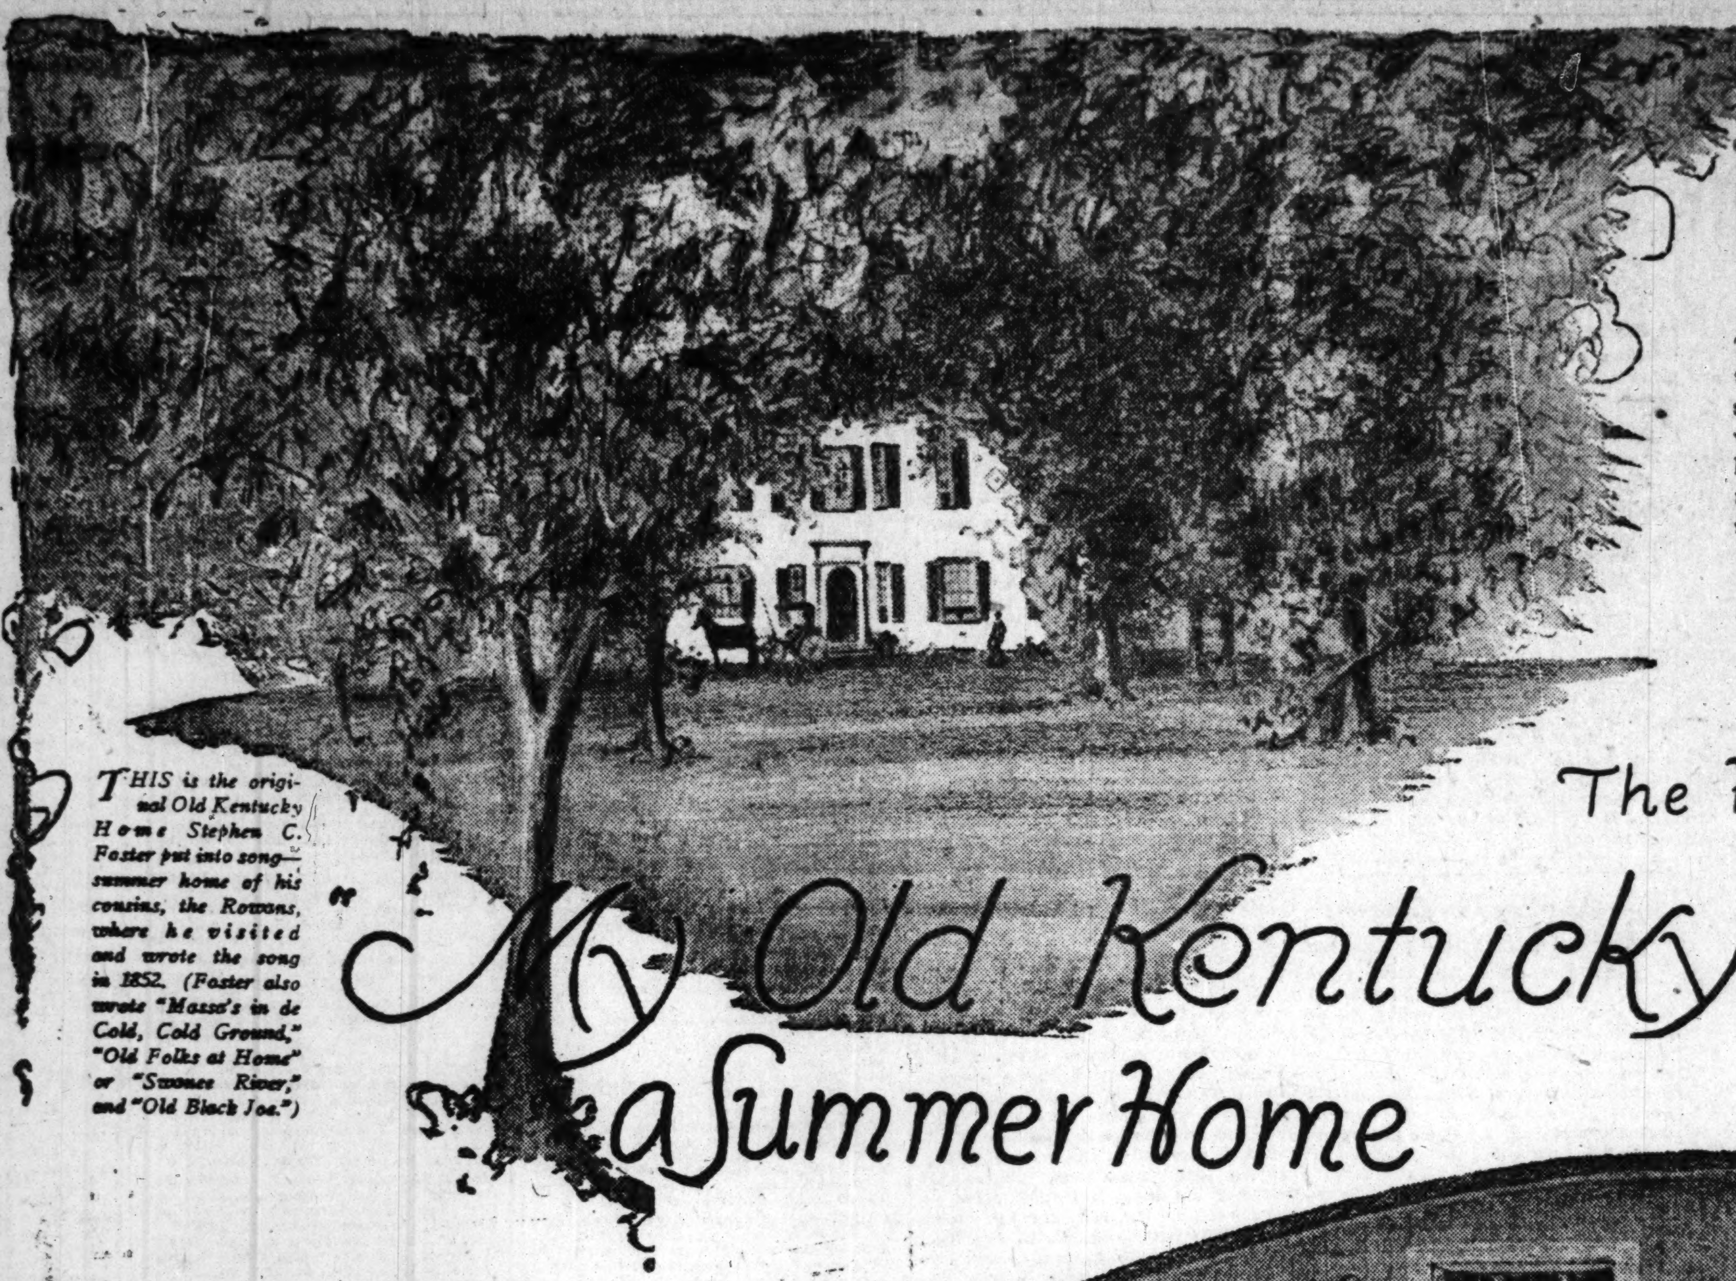
And the Edinburgh Review reminded its readers that the unanimous disapproval of the judges of proposed measures for reform should not be taken too seriously, because of "the direct interest which each of them must have in preserving the law . . . in its present state," an interest which inevitably blinded them to the needs of the public, for "there is no task so repulsive as that of unlearning in old age the lessons of our youth." (38 Edinburgh Rev., 574.)

Mistrust of Lawyers Grows.

Such views, which were widely held and frequently expressed, particularly exasperated the profession, and called forth the most sarcastic and cynical replies. (1 Law Mag., 349.) But the course of events indicated that the public was serious in its belief that reform of the law could not be safely left to lawyers. The numerous professional committees and commissions which were charged from time to time with the duty of investigating and reporting upon various aspects of administration of justice were soon appraised by public opinion as mere political pretenses.

As early as 1842 the Legal Observer was noting with alarm the growing tendency to exclude lawyers from parliament, saying that there were at that time only one prominent chancery lawyer and only one leading common law lawyer in the house of commons. (23 Leg. Obs., 354.)

Prof. Sunderland will continue his discussion in The Tribune next Sunday.



MAKES ME WANT TO HIKE RIGHT BACK HOME TO KENTUCKY

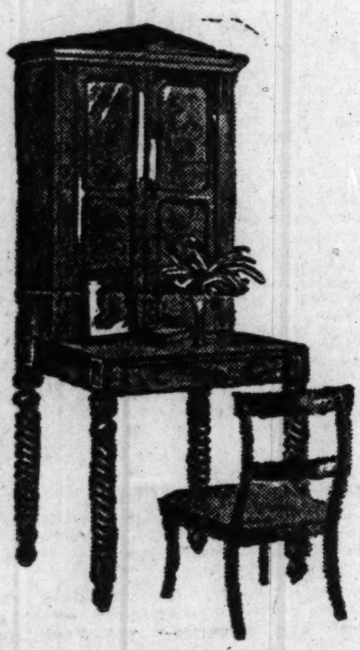
THE MAN WHO WAS TALKING was a Kentuckian through and through. He was driving one of our representatives up to "The Old Kentucky Home," over the Louisville road to Bardstown. About the song this home inspired he expressed the heart of all Kentuckians, saying, "The minute I hear it . . . no matter where I am, it makes me want to hike right back home to Kentucky . . ."

In this statement is the feel and hold for home and the home state that is a part of every real American. And, you understand why in 1923 "My Old Kentucky Home" was taken over by Kentucky to be preserved as a shrine forever.

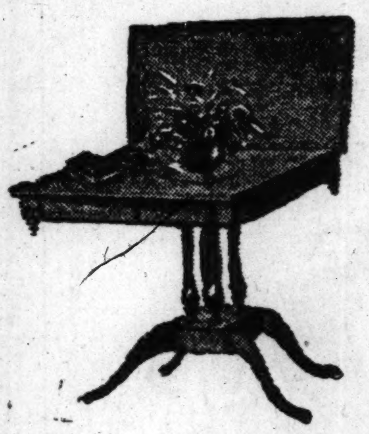
The Home is the Thing
Number Thirty

"My Old Kentucky Home" Was a Summer Home

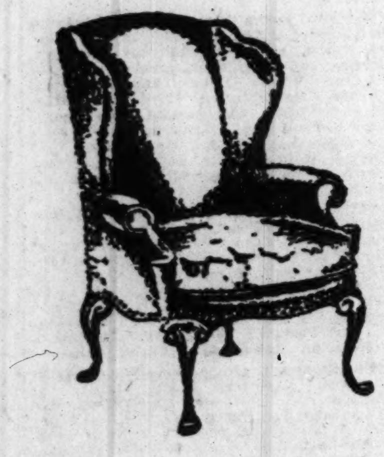
THIS is the original Old Kentucky Home Stephen C. Foster put into song—summer home of his cousins, the Rowans, where he visited and wrote the song in 1852. (Foster also wrote "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," "Old Folks at Home" or "Swanee River," and "Old Black Joe.")



"MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME" is near Bardstown (outside Louisville, over a fine new road. It is really worth seeing if you are motoring in Kentucky). It is the oldest large house in Kentucky, begun in 1795 by the composer's celebrated uncle, Judge Rowan. Until made a State Shrine to Home it never was out of the Rowan family, lived in and enjoyed by four successive generations, as a summer home.

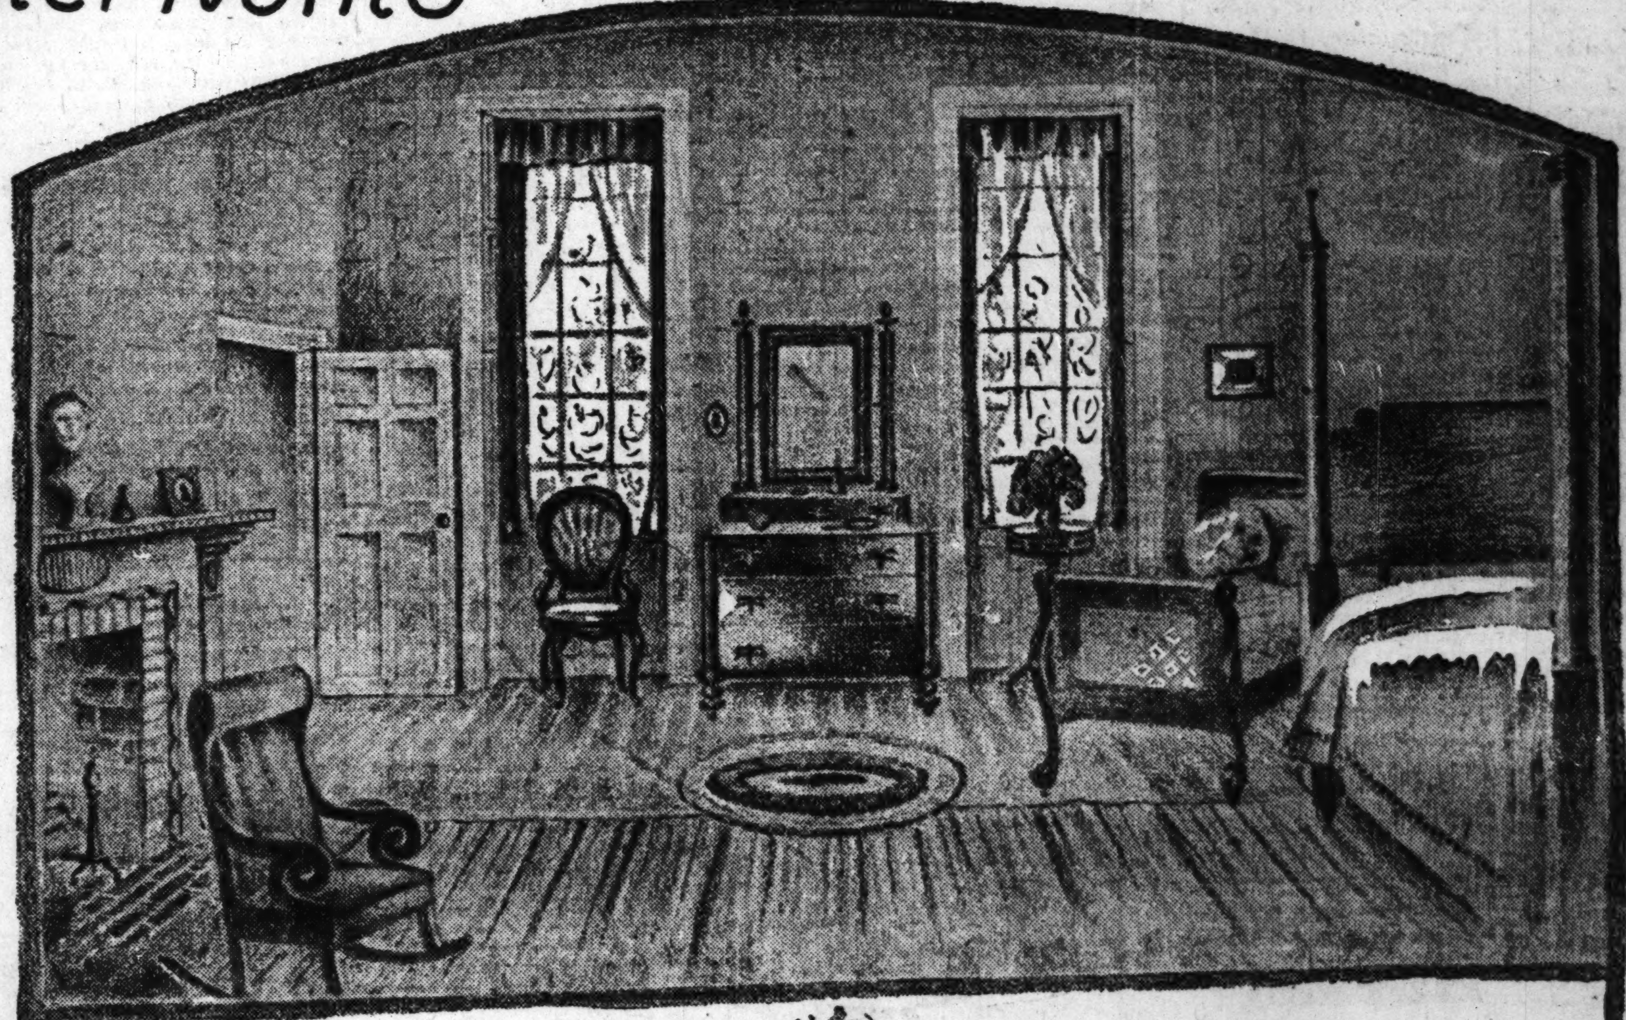


ABOVE — Desk upon which the final copy of "My Old Kentucky Home" was written. It stands in the great central hall where it has always stood. Mirrors are in the cupboard doors and glass knobs on the drawer. Opposite—old Duncan Phyfe table in the "Parlor."



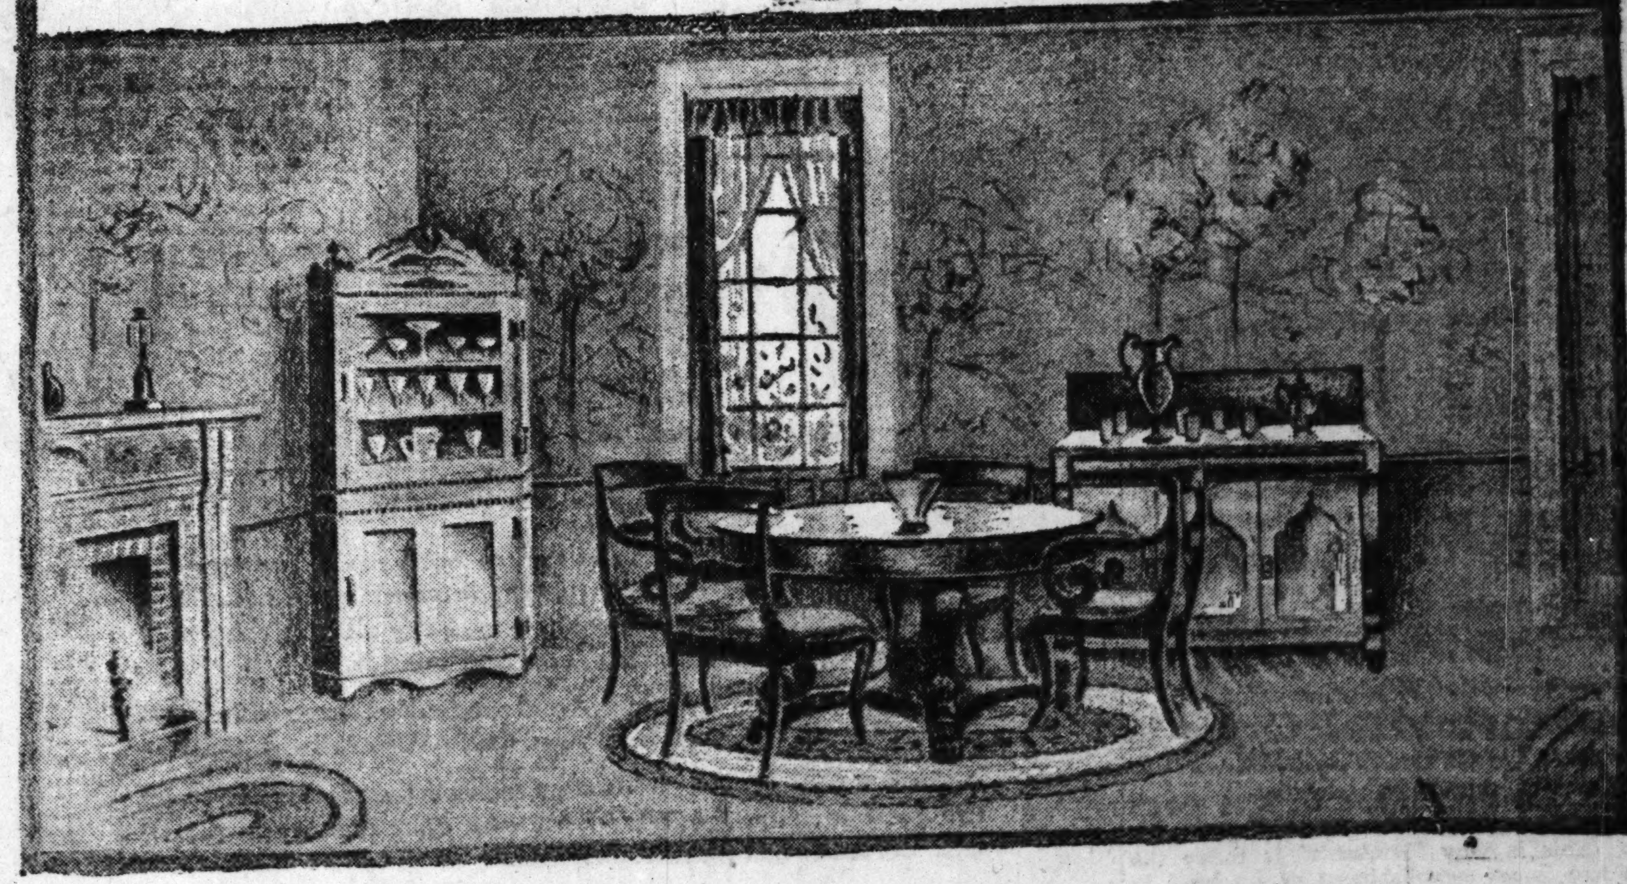
WHATEVER style of home you have and whatever period or scheme of decoration, this store has a variety of selection that fits practically every size of home and household budget. This is the largest furniture store in Chicago. Working with it is a decorating staff free to consult if you wish.

The Chair, typical of the Rowans, sketched from stock.



QUAINT old hospitable guest chamber which was Stephen C. Foster's room whenever he visited his cousins at "My Old Kentucky Home." It is exactly as you see it. That is the idea of the place—to bring back everything just as it was when Foster visited there and was inspired to write his great song of home.

DINING ROOM in the old home around whose table—the very one that is here—have gathered the most brilliant and fashionable of our past century. Here, Lafayette was entertained and no doubt Louis Phillipe, King of France, whose exile while in America was spent in Bardstown's monastery of St. Joseph, close by.



AS "MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME" was written in 1852, all the furniture placed in the home after that has been removed with the effort to reset the scenes room for room just as they were then . . . The reality of it all somehow catches you in your throat and the great significance of perpetuating such a Home as this for all time surges through you—root and fiber. Certainly, The Home Is the Thing. This you will feel, if never before, as you stand in this home around which a whole state has rallied to make its shrine. . . .

"My Old Kentucky Home" Is No. 30 of Our Series of Interesting and Historic American Homes, Emphasizing the HOME IS THE THING. This Series Is an Outcome of Our Study of Interesting and Historic Homes, Which Has Contributed to Our Tradition of 59 Years of Good Furniture, the Best of Three Centuries of American Home Furnishings.

PLAN NEW STATE LAW TO ABOLISH SPEED TRAP EVIL

Would Take Arrest Right from Villages.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

While Chicago agencies engaged in the general war on automobile speed traps worked overtime yesterday in preparing evidence of graft, extortion, and other charges against village officials to be presented to the gand jury Monday, first drafts were made of a proposed new state law which will take traffic control on state highways and trial of vehicle law violations away from village authorities and turn it over to state highway patrolmen and courts of record.

The bill, drafted by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club; Joseph H. Braun, general counsel, and Charles J. Mueller, assistant state's attorney in charge of the speed trap investigation, is designed to eliminate local constables and justices of the peace from the administration of traffic laws other than local ordinances and to abolish the fee system of arrests and justice court trials.

Much Carelessness.

An additional bill requiring justices and police magistrates to keep complete records and unabridged dockets of all motor law violation cases available for public inspection at all times was also drafted. The speed trap investigation, according to the prosecutor, has disclosed many instances of careless and incomplete arrest and court records, particularly in Broadview and Markham.

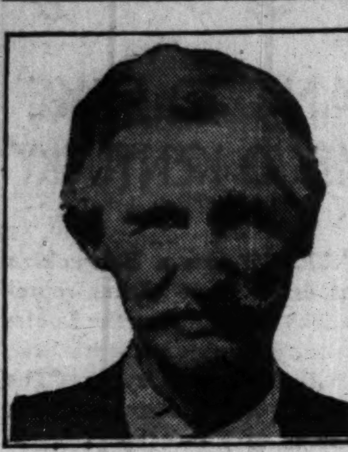
"Highway graft will probably continue as long as the state traffic control system allows the collection of fees by village authorities for the arrest and trial of motorists," Mueller declared yesterday. "We can check the evil by keeping close watch of police and justice court records and checking up on the entries of money received as bonds, fines, and fees, but the fee system is archaic and should be abolished."

214 Arrests in 2 Months.

The investigation yesterday disclosed that 214 arrests have been made in the little village of Specialville on Western avenue in two months. A total of 470 state's attorney questionnaires were mailed to victims of the alleged Specialville mill and 200 went out to those arrested in Niles.

At the same time reports reached the prosecutor of wholesale arrests being made at the construction barricade on the heavily used Dempster street road in Niles Center. Richard C. Roe, 620 Cornelia avenue, told Mr. Mueller that $10 was taken from him when he completed the marked detour on Dempster west of Evanston and drove back on the road in the traffic tracks that apparently guided traffic at the end of the detour.

PIONEER DIES



ISAAC RUSSELL.

Isaac Russell, 87 years old, a pioneer resident of Cook county, who celebrated his 65th wedding anniversary in January, died on Friday at his home, 2836 Walnut street, after a long illness.

Born in 1839 at East Northfield, Cook county, Mr. Russell was married at 23 to Miss Ellen I. Oliver, in her father's home, one of the first on Michigan street, as the boulevard then was known. Of late years they had been honored guests at annual old settlers' picnics. Twice they were awarded gold medals for attendance.

His widow, Mrs. Ellen I. Russell, three years younger, is the daughter of John A. Oliver, who witnessed the coming of the first train to Chicago. Mr. Russell also is survived by two sons, Oliver F. and John I., and a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the chapel at 2346 West Madison street. Burial will be in Oak Ridge cemetery.

G. T. Budach, Pioneer Stone Contractor, Is Dead at 75

Gustav Theodore Budach, 521 West 56th street, pioneer stone contractor in Chicago, died suddenly yesterday, supposedly of heart disease. He had been a resident of the south side for 60 years and was retired president of the South Shore Stone company, 9230 Burnham avenue. He was 75 years old. A widow and seven children survive him. Funeral services will be held Wednesday from the home of a son, Harry Budach, 607 West 54th place. Burial will be in Concordia cemetery.

Mrs. Ring Lardner's Mother Dies from Fall

Goshen, Ind., July 17.—[Special.]—Ellis Abbott Lardner of Great Neck, L. I., wife of Ring W. Lardner, arrived here tonight several hours after the death of her mother, Jeanette Hascall Abbott, 73, widow of Frank P. Abbott, lumberman. Mrs. Abbott, who fell at the home of her daughter in Indianapolis several weeks ago, fracturing a hip, died in an Indianapolis hospital. Three sons and five daughters remain.

GIRL KILLED AS AUTO HITS POLE; 2 DIE IN COUNTY

Policeman Is Victim of Mystery Crash.

A policeman and a woman died yesterday of injuries received in automobile accidents and a Chicago girl was killed in a motor crash at Whiting, Ind. The fatality total in the county since Jan. 1 was increased to 346.

Policeman Joseph O'Malley of the mounted police, one of the department's athletes, was found crushed to death under mysterious circumstances early yesterday near a wrecked automobile which had crashed into a light post on a safety island in the outer drive opposite Jackson boulevard.

O'Malley, who was 30 years old and lived at 3428 Hirsch street, is believed to have been one of several riding in the automobile. The others are thought to have fled after the accident. The car belonged to Benjamin Dunlap, president of the Dunlap Motor Truck corporation, 10 South La Salle street, who was being sought by police.

Woman Dies of Hurts.

Mrs. Jane Sherlock, 51 years old, 2444 Taylor street, died in the County hospital of injuries received when she was struck by a taxicab at Polk street and Western avenue on July 15. The driver, Stanley Kuzas, 3215 West Twenty-second street, is being held on a charge of assault with an automobile.

Miss Helen Cardin, 18 years old, of 6545 Parnell avenue, was killed and three other persons were injured when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into an iron pole at Indianapolis avenue and 115th street, Whiting, last night. Those hurt are H. A. Ford, Jr., 5744 Saginaw avenue, driver of the car, Miss Mary Nichols, and F. Ottoman.

Injured Boy in Second Crash.

A police ambulance carrying to a hospital a boy severely injured in an automobile accident was wrecked when it was struck by another automobile at Ashland and Taylor avenues. The injured boy, Bruno Kissel, 10 years old, 1843 South Ashland avenue, was transferred to a taxicab.

A coroner's jury held Thomas Kontius, a taxicab driver, to the grand jury after investigating the death of Mrs. Caroline Hewitt, 52 years old, 627 West 64th street. Mrs. Hewitt died of injuries received July 4 when an automobile which had been struck by a Yellow cab ran over the curb at 63d and Morgan streets and struck her.

OUTLAW UNION IN WAY OF ARBITRATION OF N. Y. SUBWAY STRIKE

New York, July 17.—[Special.]—Leaders of the Interborough strike and Herman A. Metz, the transit commission's peacemaker, met today to discuss the possibility of a strike settlement through arbitration.

The strikers had announced that they favored mediation and were ready to discuss all their differences but one—the question of their outlaw union, the Consolidated Railway Workers of Greater New York.

Their insistence that they can enter no negotiations until Interborough officials officially have recognized their organization apparently is the only serious obstacle at present in the way of peace conference.

Mr. Metz paved the way for today's meeting with the strike leaders by obtaining from Frank Hedley, I. R. T. president, the concession that the strikers might return, as individuals, at the rate of pay they received at the time they went on strike.

Mr. Metz told the transit commission that Mr. Hedley also had agreed to restore the men's seniority rights, but the company's chief counsel, James L. Quackenbush, later said this was not the case.

Still Openings in Citizens' Military Training Camps

Camp Sheridan is the largest military training encampment in the middle west this year, according to an announcement yesterday by Col. Noble Brandon Judah, aide to the secretary of war in the Sixth corps area. Accommodations have been added for 300 additional students in the course which opens Aug. 3. Some places are still open and Col. Judah stated that applications from men 17 to 24 years old will be received up to July 25 unless the quota is filled earlier.

Boy Dies in Hospital After Fall from Porch

George Martin, 9 years old, 3000 West Van Buren street, died in the County hospital yesterday of a skull fracture received last Wednesday when he fell from the second floor rear porch of his home. Martin was playing with several other boys when the banister gave way, precipitating him downward.

Wedded 51 Years, Wife, 66, Divorces Husband, 72

Omaha, Neb., July 17.—(AP)—After 51 years of married life, Mrs. Lorina Creeley, 66, Plattsmouth, Neb., was granted a divorce in District court here from Charles F. Creeley, 72. She charged nonsupport. They were married in Arizona in 1875.

Tho' Many Miles Away They Call Hursen

Not so long ago it was customary to call the "nearest" funeral director. There was little incentive to go beyond the neighborhood. The "Hursen" revolution in funeral methods, service, quality and equipment has changed this old custom completely.

The reason now why there are so many thousands who will call no one but "Hursen" is because "Hursen" lavishes on every funeral, large and small, that distinct Hursen method and elegance which it is impossible to secure anywhere else. It ceases to be a question of distance. Every day there are calls from homes as much as 15 or 20 miles away.

The Hursen organization wipes out distance. As proof of it, witness the many Hursen funerals even into the far suburbs of Chicago. Hursen is as near to you as your telephone. The desire for unexcelled elegance in every detail, the demand for the finest funeral limousines and for the Hursen limousine-hearses, is fulfilled only when the funeral is directed by Hursen.

Another powerful factor is this: the charges for Hursen funerals are always less than the charges made anywhere else. Extreme elegance is never sacrificed. This is why "Hursen's" is today the largest and finest establishment of its kind in America. When you demand the best, call Hursen, of course!

SOCIETY OUT TO CHEER HORSEMEN AT FT. SHERIDAN

More Spills Mark Close of Benefit Show.

Spirited contests, fine horsemanship and an enthusiasm that brought the spectators out of the stands and into the outside course marked the close yesterday of the Fort Sheridan horse show. Society was out in force, greeting the more spectacular performances with loud applause.

Falls were frequent throughout the day. Lieut. John B. Sherman Jr. was thrown in the polo pony scurry and suffered internal injuries when his mount stepped on him. He was taken to the Fort Sheridan hospital for attention. Several spills occurred in the officers' jumping class but without injury to the riders.

Hunter Ribbon to Birchwood.

The hunter championship, in which the entrants were restricted to the ten jumping classes, was awarded to Birchwood, an Edward J. Lehmann horse. Second place was won by Great Scott, owned by O. W. Lehmann. Events of special interest were the Olympia jumps, the hunt teams, shown over a longer course outside the ring, and the touch and out jumps. The riders of the hunt teams wore the red livery of the sport.

Miss Elizabeth Chase figured prominently in the jumping events, riding three consecutive entries in the hunters' team class. Miss Alicia Patterson won the trophy in the qualified hunter class, riding her own horse, Bozette, over the difficult outer course.

Some of the Boxholders.

Among the boxholders, all of whom were present for the afternoon events, were: Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Austin Niblack, Mrs. George H. Taylor, Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood, Capt. and Mrs. John Fore Hines, Benjamin L. Behr, Mrs. William E. Swift, Mrs. Scott Durand, John Cudahy, Stuyvesant Peabody, and Mrs. James Minotto.

Some of those who presented the trophies to the winners were Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. R. J. Perlly, Mrs. Douglas Green, Mrs. Lowell Chapin, Mrs. Robert Caldwell, Miss Virginia Insull, Mrs. O. W. Lehmann, Mrs. Bainard Rogers, and Mrs. John Cudahy.

ROYAL SWEDISH PAIR ENTERTAINED IN LAND OF CLIFF DWELLERS

Shiprock, San Juan Indian Agency, N. M., July 15.—(AP)—Swedish royalty rested tonight in the heart of the Navajo Indian country before continuing a journey that shall take them tomorrow into Mesa Verde National park, the center of some of the most historic of all aboriginal ruins in the United States.

Crown Prince Gustaf Adolph and Crown Princess Louise arrived here today after a 100 mile automobile ride across the western part of New Mexico from Gallup, where they were met by Jesse L. Nusbaum, superintendent of Mesa Verde park.

Tonight, on the banks of the San Juan river, the royal pair were entertained by a Navajo Indian "squaw" dance. In this dance the squaw becomes the aggressor, choosing her dancing partner from the bucks surrounding the dance ground and claiming a forfeit of money from him in the event he is unwilling to continue as her partner.

Since his arrival in this country the prince has been looking forward eagerly to an inspection of the cliff dwellers' ruins in the Mesa Verde.

Collins Transfers Four Lieutenants, 11 Others

Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins yesterday issued an order transferring four lieutenants, two sergeants, eight patrolmen, and a police stenographer from their present assignments to other stations. No reason was given for the changes. The lieutenants affected are George De Mar, who goes from the Cottage Grove avenue to the Chicago avenue station; David Fitzgerald, from Lawndale to the detective bureau; Leo E. Carr, from the Central station to the detective bureau, and James B. Kerr, from the bureau to the central station.

FOOLS

A real fool is one who thinks he is not and all others are.

A wise man tries not to seem wise—least of all with himself. All having large experience know that fools abound, yet how few there are who even suspect that he himself may be one, not occasionally, but quite too often.

If one would think a little along these lines, a measure of humility may arise. Humility is a maker of quality.

Quality generates fine business ethics and is helpful toward success.

BRENNAN RAPPED AT METHODIST CAMP MEETING

Dr. Thompson Defends Old Time Preacher.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, the Chicago Temple, who preached yesterday morning at the Des Plaines camp meeting and presided at the all nations program in the afternoon, defended the old time Methodist preachers against the charge of preaching hell as their chief business.

He gave a tongue lashing to fathers, including some ministers, who put on pious looks in church and displayed irascible tempers in the home. He gave George E. Brennan, Democratic candidate for the senatorship, several sharp raps for his advocacy of the modification of the Volstead law. He declared attendance at the churches surpassed that at the theaters if the special circumstances surrounding both the theaters and the churches are taken into consideration.

More Happiness Than Hell.

"Old time Methodists preached more about happiness in religion than they did about hell," said Dr. Thompson. "'O Happy Day' was always a favorite hymn. Once when I said something in prayer meeting that made the people smile and some of them laugh a woman rose and said she had a vision to the effect that unless the pastor quit making people laugh while preaching, Ichabod, the glory of the Lord hath departed, would be written on the church. 'What you saw, my sister, was not a vision but a nightmare,' I replied.

"The trouble with many, especially young people, is they think of religion as a mere suppression of things they must not do, when, in fact, it is an enlargement of life pointing to greater pleasures than the world can possibly give.

Raps Brennan.

"We have a leading politician in Chicago who is advocating the modification of the Volstead law in the interest, he says, of childhood. There never has been a greater benediction to childhood than prohibition. A young woman told me before prohibition she had never been given a Christmas present, a Christmas tree, or a Christmas dinner. Her father and mother both drank and used up the money. Since prohibition, she said, she had all these good things. The modification of the Volstead law may indicate intellectual blindness, a lack of moral perception, a cauterization of humane feelings, but let no one be so perverse as to call the modification of the Volstead law a blessing to childhood. It would be childhood's greatest curse."

The other speakers of the day were the Rev. W. J. Schuerman, pastor of the Lincoln Street Institutional church; the Rev. N. D. Shamborguer, pastor of South Park church; the Rev. W. B. O'Neil, pastor of work among the Mexicans; the Rev. W. N. Clark, pastor of Community church, and the Rev. Robert Stephenson, pastor the Halsted Street Institutional church. All of these ministers are engaged in work chiefly among foreign populations They agreed in stressing the value of the social service and publication work in reaching the foreign born.

Colored Singers Today.

Today it is expected the camp ground will be thronged. Provision, it was announced, will be made for all who come. A testimony meeting will be led at 9:30 by the Rev. F. F. Farmiloe. At 10:30 Dr. King D. Beach, pastor elect of St. James church, Chicago, will preach and at 2:30 and 7 p. m. Dr. Charles A. Tindley, a colored pastor and orator of Philadelphia, will preach. Colored singers will sing spirituals and a united choir of 150 will lead the music. Other meetings for children and young people will be held.

CHILDREN FIGHT DES PLAINES CAMP FIRE

Three English Methodist Churches Agree to Unite

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 17.—Representatives of three Methodist churches, the Wesleyan Methodist, Primitive Methodist, and United Methodist, at a conference at York, England, today agreed to unite to form one church, the Wesleyans, agreeing definitely to join the merger at today's meeting. The amended scheme for the union will be sent to the May synods next year for provisional legislation.

FIRE DESTROYS STOREHOUSE AT METHODIST CAMP

Big Bucket Brigade Saves Other Buildings.

Methodist devotees, attending their annual camp meeting at Desplaines yesterday, witnessed a fire in the late afternoon which wrecked the camps' store house, causing several thousand dollars' damage. Under the combined efforts of the fire departments of Desplaines, Park Ridge, and Elmwood Park, the blaze was extinguished. No one was injured.

Supposedly caused by a burning match thrown carelessly behind the storehouse, the fire gained rapidly, at one time threatening the large camp dining room which adjoins the burned building. A volunteer bucket brigade functioned before the departments arrived and saved the latter.

Scout Arson Theory.

Wild rumors that the fire was of an incendiary origin were emphatically denied by camp trustees and other witnesses. Spontaneous combustion among cans of oil and gasoline, which partly filled the building, was given as the probable cause by T. W. Stanek, trustee of the camp meeting association. He discounted the arson theory by pointing out that the cottages are so close that their inhabitants would certainly have seen vandals starting the fire if such were the case.

When the firemen arrived a controversy arose between Chief Peterson of Des Plaines and Chief Moritz of Park Ridge, the dispute caused by Peterson's ordering the rival department off the grounds on the theory they might present a bill for their services if allowed to assist. Chief Moritz took no heed, however, and ran a line of hose into the Des Plaines river with the other departments, staying until the last spark was extinguished.

Klansmen Aid Fire Fighters.

Adjoining the camp meeting grounds is a large encampment of the Ku Klux Klan under the leadership of Gail S. Carter, grand dragon of the Chicago realm and Scott E. Berridge, grand representative. More than 1,000 men, women and children are encamped there.

When the fire broke out the entire klan delegation rushed to their neighbors' grounds and helped extinguish the blaze. Adjoining cottages to the storehouse and dining hall caught fire a number of times but were successfully extinguished.

PUT SAFETY CONTROLS ON 1,500 LOCOMOTIVES TO WARD OFF DANGER

New York, July 17.—(AP)—Devices were placed in operation today on more than 1,500 locomotives operating on a trackage of 3,000 miles, which are designed to keep a mechanical eye on the engineers and, if necessary, take control of their engines away from them.

The New York Central announced that a system of automatic train control had been installed on its lines and those of the Boston and Albany, the Michigan Central, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad.

The safety device, the announcement states, is "of a simple character, permitting the engineer to retain full control of his engine as long as he obeys the rules in regard to operation, but taking that control away from him and operating on the side of safety if he disregards those rules."

Lonely Masher Didn't Know It Was a Policewoman

Louis Nemo, 25 years old, 1437 Taylor street, pleaded to Judge John A. Bugee yesterday that he was lonesome and he really didn't know it was a policewoman he was pestering to ride with him in a rowboat in Lincoln park. Judge Bugee gave him a bit of advice and sent him on his way.

FRANKLIN SEDAN

NEW PRICE $2790
FULLY EQUIPPED F.O.B. FACTORY

A Matchless Concentration of All that is Finest and Farthest Advanced in Motor Cars

PAY more if you want to. But you cannot get finer materials—more careful workmanship—smarter and more enduring style. And you cannot get as much comfort—as easy handling—or cover as many miles in a day!

Pay less if you have to. You can get transportation. You can get a good standardized appearance. You may possibly equal Franklin's 18 to 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline. But you cannot get the true and eventually greater economy that lies in Franklin's ability to keep out of the repair-shops, and in its exceptionally low depreciation—you cannot get the serene satisfaction and pride that only a fine car can give!

Concentrated in the Franklin Sedan today are more clear-cut performance advantages—more advanced construction and design—more sheer owner delight—than in any other car in the world. And its new price is the lowest by far at which any fully equipped Franklin Sedan has ever sold!

Aviation Proves Supremacy of Air-Cooling

No other sedan is cooled as the newest airplanes are—as Byrd's North Pole engines were—by air: no radiator worry, work or expense!

No other sedan has so many means of dissipating road bumps—of securing comfort. Franklin has not only balloon tires, Watson Stabilators, four-point body suspension and the deepest seat-cushion springs, but—far more important—full-elliptic springs, a flexible chassis frame, less proportionate weight below the springs than any other!

Exclusive Features Give Greatest Roadability

No other sedan has so many features to take the strain and exertion out of driving. It has less bulk—less weight—to hamper the driver, than any other of equal size—it has a steering-gear that allows it to turn with one-finger pressure—it has an extremely low-hung body—it has the marvelous non-skid transmission brake: surest, fastest, easiest-operating of all!

What these features mean in sustained speed over the road, Franklin's long list of road records bears witness. What they mean in economy, Franklin's life-long reputation for low upkeep costs testifies. And what they mean in endurance is shown by this: 75% of all Franklins built in 25 years are still in service!

A trial drive will demonstrate what Franklin principles do—and what an amazing value the Franklin Sedan at $2790 is. Come in and make the motoring discovery of your life—today!

The latest Franklin can be owned on terms which make it the wisest investment and the easiest fine car purchase today.

"SOMETHING IS HAPPENING IN THE AUTOMOTIVE WORLD"

OLDSMOBILE ANNOUNCES

ADDED POWER : LONGER LIFE : SMOOTHER PERFORMANCE : ADDED DRIVING EASE AND SECURITY : GREATER ECONOMY : FINER APPOINTMENTS : ADDED BEAUTY :: AT NO INCREASE IN STANDARD PRICES

"... that the American family may have, at a moderate investment, a car which gratifies their finer tastes as well as satisfies their every need ...."

Today Oldsmobile keeps faith with its public trust—

... confirms its declaration of principles published a week ago—

... returns to you the benefits of manufacturing advantages and economies created by the greatest year in Oldsmobile history!

Today Oldsmobile presents brilliant progress without basic change in the car which has won its way to public preference by sheer surpassing merit—

... new features of known value—

... improvements of demonstrated worth —proved in tests on the General Motors Proving Ground to provide even livelier, smoother performance, even longer life, even greater operating economy, than already characterize Oldsmobile Six!

Today this even finer Oldsmobile goes on display, and you are invited to see it—

... to view the beauty and luxurious new appointments of its Fisher Body—

... to go over the car, point by point, feature by feature—

... to know, as only seeing can tell you, what a truly great car this is!

Today, more than ever before ... no matter what car you now favor or what price you are willing to pay ... you owe it to yourself, your pocketbook and your sense of satisfaction to see the Oldsmobile Six!

ADDED POWER .. LONGER LIFE SMOOTHER PERFORMANCE

Enlarged Engine The L-Head Oldsmobile engine, that has already won such praise for its performance has been enlarged in the bore of the cylinders from 2¾ inches to 2⅞ inches, increasing its displacement from 169 cubic inches to 185 cubic inches—providing increased horsepower and more spirited performance in the car that asks no favors, fears no road!

Dual Air Cleaning Dust and dirt from the road form an abrasive or cutting element in the working parts of an engine. In this new Oldsmobile a master air cleaner eliminates the injurious particles from two-thirds of the air before it enters the carburetor direct—while the second cleaner in connection with the feature of crankcase ventilation (described later) cleans the balance of the air that passes through the carburetor.

Crankcase Ventilation Here is a new feature of design hitherto found only in one car—and that car of the three thousand dollar class. In all internal combustion engines water is formed by condensation. Cold engines do not burn all of the fuel on starting. This water and liquid fuel pass into the crankcase and form crankcase dilution.

Excessive dilution is eliminated by crankcase ventilation. One-third of the air that passes through the carburetor is drawn through a breather port in the left side of the engine. This air, cleaned of dust and injurious material by a second air cleaner on the breather port, passes through the crankcase before entering the carburetor. It draws off with it water vapor and unburned fuel that may have passed into the crankcase—thereby eliminating excessive dilution. This air also carries with it a small amount of the oil vapor created in the crankcase, which aids inmore efficient lubrication of pistons, upper cylinder walls, and valves. Crankcase ventilation improves performance and gives longer life in the engine and longer useful life to the oil.

Oil Filter An oil filter has been added to this Oldsmobile, prolonging still more the life of the engine and the useful life of the oil. Sediment and foreign substance are removed as the oil passes through the filter and filter bag from the rear camshaft bearing. Should the filter become clogged with sediment the lubricating system functions in the common manner, there being no danger of shutting off the supply of lubricant. All principle parts are pressure lubricated.

Harmonic Balancer The Harmonic Balancer, developed by General Motors engineers, counteracts vibration and gives Oldsmobile a smoothness you will quickly recognize when you take the wheel.

High Velocity Hot Section Manifold The manifold design of the Series "E" Oldsmobile retains the high velocity given the incoming gases as they leave the carburetor and pass on into the combustion chambers. To further promote complete vaporization of the incoming fuel, an improved jacketing of the intake manifold by the heated exhaustmanifold is effected in the vertical section of the intake passage above the carburetor. The intake manifold being above the exhaust manifold and heated by it, retains the highly explosive state of incoming gases.

Stronger Center Bearing The center main bearing that supports the balanced crankshaft has been made more rigid and stronger to provide still smoother performance in this Oldsmobile.

New Axle Ratio The gear ratio of the rear axle has been reduced to 4.73 to 1. This contributes to smoother performance in that fewer revolutions of the engine are required to drive the car a given distance. Normally a reduction in gear ratio means a loss of power, but this change in the new Oldsmobile does not require a sacrifice of power because the added power derived from the enlarged engine leaves a new surplus, even after the change in gear ratio, to provide smoother performance.

Dome Shaped Combustion Chambers A slight change in the contour of the tapered, dome shaped combustion chambers gives greater turbulence to the incoming gases. This change produces smoother engine performance and contributes materially to surplus power in the Oldsmobile, Series "E."

Two-Way Cooling Oldsmobile has been praised for its ability to be driven forty, forty-five, fifty and more miles an hour—hour after hour, without the slightest overheating. But Oldsmobile engineers have not been content with even this high efficiency in cooling design. Now Oldsmobile offers "two-way" cooling which incorporates the best features of the two accepted types—pressure cooling and thermo-siphon cooling. At the points where greatest heat is generated,—around the valves, valve seats, spark plugs and combustion chambers—pressure-circulated water is driven through a manifold-type passage. Cylinder walls do not heat as rapidly as do the parts near the combustion chambers. A full flow of cooling water about the cylinders would cool them too much. Therefore the circulation is restricted and retarded. In other words, parts at the points of greatest heat are cooled by the manifold method of circulation, while the slower thermo-siphon type of action, in which the rate of circulation is largely governed by the reaction of heat upon the water, maintains about the cylinders sufficient warmth for efficient operation. This also aids in eliminating crankcase dilution. Here is a new type of cooling design, incorporating the best features of all past engineering practice that maintains an even temperature of cooling control, one that will prove its value to users in longer life, greater power and smoother performance.

Other Improvement Other changes contributing added power, longer life and smoother performance, form a long list of features such as slight change of cam contour, double valve springs as in aircraft and racing car engines—and others equally important.

GREATER ECONOMY

Manifold Design The manifold design that contributes to smoother performance, also improves the operating economy of the Oldsmobile Series "E." On the General Motors Proving Ground, where this Oldsmobile had to measure up to unusually exacting standards, this car established new records for Oldsmobile operating economy. The features that contribute to higher efficiency and engine performance also effect improved operating economy.

Other Economy Features The dual-air cleaning, the crankcase ventilation, the "two-way" cooling and other features that are attributes of longer life, power, efficiency and smoothness, are also factors of operating economy.

ADDED EASE AND SECURITY

Thermostatic Charging Control When on the road there is a sense of security in knowing that your electrical system is functioning properly and that your generator is giving an adequate charge. Oldsmobile now has thermostatic control on the generator that automatically increases the charging rate when the engine is cold and decreases the charging rate as the temperature rises. The spark control is full automatic.

Twin-Beam Light Control Head lamps with double filament bulbs, one filament for "bright action" and one for "dim action", assure extra vision for night driving without sacrifice of safety for approaching drivers. The diffusion and double angle of the light control conforms to all state law requirements. On "dim action" the light is bright but thrown at a downward angle that protects the oncoming driver and gives ample vision to the Oldsmobile driver.

Steering Wheel Light Control The twin-beam Oldsmobile headlights are operated without the driver shifting his position, as the light control switch is a neat lever, exactly like the hand throttle, centered on the steering wheel. It may be operated with perfect safety as it is not necessary to remove hands from the steering wheel, slacken speed or take eyes from the road.

Instruments Indirectly Illuminated From behind the glass face of each instrument in the unit-grouped dash panel, an indirect light glows whenever any of the lights are lighted. This subdued indirect-lighting arrangement individually illuminates each instrument without glare or reflection in the driver's eyes. This feature is not only one of safety but one of beauty.

Instrument Panel Fuel Gauge The new grouping of the instruments on the dash is a noticeable improvement. A reliable instrument board fuel gauge, now standard on all Oldsmobile body types, accurately indicates the supply of gasoline and adds to security and peace of mind in driving.

Thief-Proof Car Lock A new design in thief-proof car locks is a feature of this Oldsmobile. With this thief-proof control the engine cannot be started when the key is left in the lock. Turning off the ignition positively locks the car. This is far from the ordinary ignition lock—an entirely new and exclusive method of positive locking. It reduces the hazard of thieves who commonly "cut over" on other types of locks, for switch and coil are built integral in a vault-like steel housing. The ignition key also operates the door locks.

FINER APPOINTMENTS

Interior Features Only seeing can give you a real appreciation of this truly fine car. New mohair upholstery of a taupe shade in all closed body types has a lustre and wearing quality not expected in a car so moderate in price. The satin nickel fittings are of rich, period design. Their beauty is but one feature, while their utility is equally as pleasing. The quick-acting window lifts, large interior door handles, conveniently centered, an ash receptacle in the five-passenger closed types, the V. V. windshield, automatic windshield cleaners on closed cars, instruments unit-grouped in a walnut panel centered on the satin finish black instrument board, walnut steering wheel, heavy rug and rubber mat floor coverings, genuine leather upholstery in open cars, deep spring-cushioned seats at angles of greatest comfort, and many features that would form an imposing list if enumerated in their entirety, cannot be adequately described.

ADDED BEAUTY

Fisher Two-Tone Duco Bodies New beauty without basic change in body design describes this Oldsmobile. The hood line has been raised slightly, producing a longer and larger appearance. The radiator, finished in the new permanent-lustre chromium that is exclusively Oldsmobile's, retains its familiar beauty with a slight change in the sweep of the symmetrical side lines to add more massive and attractive lines. The fenders are now full-crown type, with additional dust shields in black enamel to protect the body from road dirt. The sweep of the fenders add to the grace and length of the car. The Fisher bodies are finished in lustrous two-tone Duco, polished to a finish distinctively beautiful yet in conservative good taste.

NO STANDARD PRICE INCREASE

You Gain By The Benefits of Success All these features of greater value, and all those others that will impress you as you go over this Oldsmobile point by point—are yours at no increase in Oldsmobile's low standard prices. In these features Oldsmobile returns to you the benefits of manufacturing advantages and economies, created by the greatest year in Oldsmobile history. The economies of General Motors are passed back to you. The quality advances —but the low prices remain unchanged, with the exception of a ten dollar addition to the list price of the DeLuxe Coach and the DeLuxe Sedan. And if you please, you may drive an Oldsmobile Series "E" as you pay for it from your income—on the G.M.A.C. plan of deferred payments.

THE NEW LANDAU

Built for the Man Who Could Pay More It has long been a fact that a certain number of people who are accustomed to owning only the best, have recognized that all the qualities of luxury, which they instinctively prize, may now be enjoyed in a car moderate in size and moderate in price. To meet this demand Oldsmobile now introduces the new Landau—complete, tasteful and beautiful beyond the power of words to describe. The rear quarter of the upper body is finished with fabrikoid over the metal sheathing of the body, rounded to a graceful curve and given additional character by black enameled Landaubars. The graceful contour is retained in the rear window without sacrifice of vision. The Landau is finished in lustrous three-tone Duco. Natural wood artillery type wheels or steel disc wheels in body colors are optional. The equipment on the Landau includes all the features of the standard closed models with the additon of bumpers front and rear, motometer and bar cap, black enameled steel trunk mounted at rear on rigid platform, rear traffic signal, snubbers all around, genuine long-nap mohair upholstery of a neutral grey. Here truly is a car to suit the tastes of the man who could pay much more but finds all that he wants in Oldsmobile.

TEN BODY STYLES

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

$10,000,000 CUT IN U. S. GENERAL OUTLAY SHOWN

But Ordinary Expenses Gained $55,000,000.

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.—Increased expenditures in many of the departments of the government during the fiscal year 1926 are shown in itemized figures made public today. There were increases in the legislative and executive branches of the government and also in the state, treasury, justice, postoffice, and commerce departments, the veterans' bureau, miscellaneous agencies, and the District of Columbia. To offset these were decreases in the war, navy, interior, agriculture, and labor departments.

The figures show that while the total expenditures chargeable against ordinary receipts, as made public immediately after the close of the fiscal year at the end of last month, increased by $55,000,000 over the fiscal year 1925, the aggregate outlay by governmental departments decreased by about $10,000,000.

Total Is $3,584,987,873.

Total ordinary expenditures were $3,584,987,873, as against $3,529,643,446 in the fiscal year 1925. Eliminating from these totals public debt retirements and expenditures from various miscellaneous funds, including interest on the public debt, refunds of internal revenue taxes and customs duties, payments under the soldiers' bonus act, and items relating to the railroads, the shipping board, alien property, and the Panama canal, the aggregate for governmental departments was $1,826,959,870, as compared with $1,836,657,359 in the fiscal year 1925.

The legislative branch of the government expended about $2,000,000 more last year than the year before, its total increasing from $13,855,664 to $15,776,230.

Expenditures of the executive department went up from $411,898 to $488,768; the state department from $15,054,408 to $16,521,348; the treasury department from $128,232,421 to $136,578,723; the justice department from $23,495,738 to $23,774,129; the commerce department from $25,782,961 to $29,132,015; the veterans' bureau from $364,715,796 to $404,692,185; independent agencies from $27,682,657 to $32,069,356, and the District of Columbia from $32,713,000 to $34,410,707.

Few Show Decreases.

Departments which showed decreases included the war department, whose expenditures fell from $361,887,888 to $355,072,225; the navy department from $346,142,001 to $312,743,409; the interior department from $302,440,633 to $301,759,049; the department of agriculture from $164,644,283 to $155,350,432, and the department of labor from $9,677,841 to $8,544,899.

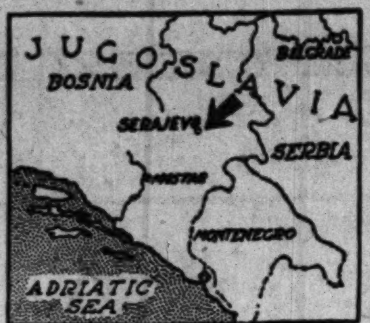
The amount paid as interest on the public debt decreased by $50,000,000, the total being $831,937,700 as against $881,806,622 last year.

Tax refunds showed a considerable increase, amounting to $182,220,053, as compared with $147,777,030 the year before. The amount paid from the treasury to make up the deficit in postal receipts also showed an increase, amounting to $39,506,490, as compared with $23,216,783. Another item of increased expenditure separate from the departmental outlays was for the soldiers' bonus, officially designated as the adjusted service certificate fund, which amounted to $120,152,238, as compared with $99,458,769.

Public Debt Retirements.

Public debt retirements during the year included $317,091,750 through the statutory sinking fund, $165,260,000 received from foreign governments under debt settlements, $4,393,500 in purchases of government bonds from foreign repayments, $567,900 from federal reserve and intermediate credit bank franchise taxes, and $62,900 in forfeitures, gifts, etc., a total of $487,376,050. This is in addition to the surplus of about $380,000,000 which automatically went toward debt retirement.

SLIDE KILLS 117



VIENNA, July 17.—(AP)—One hundred and seventeen persons were killed by a great landslide which buried a railroad train near Serajevo, Bosnia, according to latest reports. Masses of earth had been loosened by the torrential rains, and the passenger coaches were caught up in the avalanche, and swept along with mountains on top of them.

Further advices from Belgrade report that 49 persons were drowned July 15 in the region of Ipek. A family of 10, surprised by the rising waters in an open field were drowned. Lightning killed 2,000 sheep and various wild animals.

[Serajevo, "the city of palaces," near which today's landslide is reported to have occurred, will long be remembered as the place of the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife on June 28, 1914. It was this tragedy which brought to a head the long standing conflict between Austria and Serbia and in time brought to a focus the conflicting national controversies which ultimately resulted in the world war.]

FIGHT TO STOP SMOKE STILL ON, BUNDESEN WARNS

Spikes Report of Summer Truce for Violators.

Smoke law violators who think they are safe from prosecution during the summer months, due to a reported let-up of activity by city enforcement officers, received a sharp warning yesterday from Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen.

"Chimneys belching soot and cinders are just as unlawful in July as in January," Dr. Bundesen declared. "And every time our inspectors find one smoking over the time limit it means quick and serious trouble for the responsible party.

"We are not easing up on our campaign in the least. There are more inspections, arrests and prosecutions this summer than ever before. The result is certain to be cleaner and purer air in every part of the city this fall."

Calls Speed-up Conference.

To speed up the progress of the anti-smoke drive Dr. Bundesen called in Frank A. Chambers, head of the smoke abatement division, for a conference yesterday.

The attack of the smoke evil, Chambers explained, is now being concentrated on three classes of violators: Vessels on the lake and river, railway engines and round houses, and stationary plants in factories, buildings, and apartment houses.

Captains, engineers, and owners of approximately fifty lake shipping concerns, operating an average of two vessels each, have been warned against violations in the last four weeks, Chambers reported. All were told they would be prosecuted for excessive smoke.

"We find most of our trouble with ships from other ports," he said.

Oil Burning Vessels Used.

The Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, operating 16 boats on the river, Chambers said, is burning oil in half of them and expect soon to stop smoking altogether by the other eight. All ten steamers of the Goodrich Transit company carry bunkers of smokeless coal to burn in Chicago waters. Other shipping concerns have taken similar measures, Mr. Chambers said.

Five railroads with the largest round houses in the city limits either have prepared or are drawing up plans for smokeless equipment, Dr. Bundesen was informed. They are the Grand Trunk line, the Chicago and Northwestern, the Pennsylvania, the Rock Island, and the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul.

Among the stationary plants which are being rebuilt to stop smoke are those of the Congress and Morrison hotels, the postoffice, Otis building, International Harvester company, and the Armour, Swift, and Wilson packing companies.

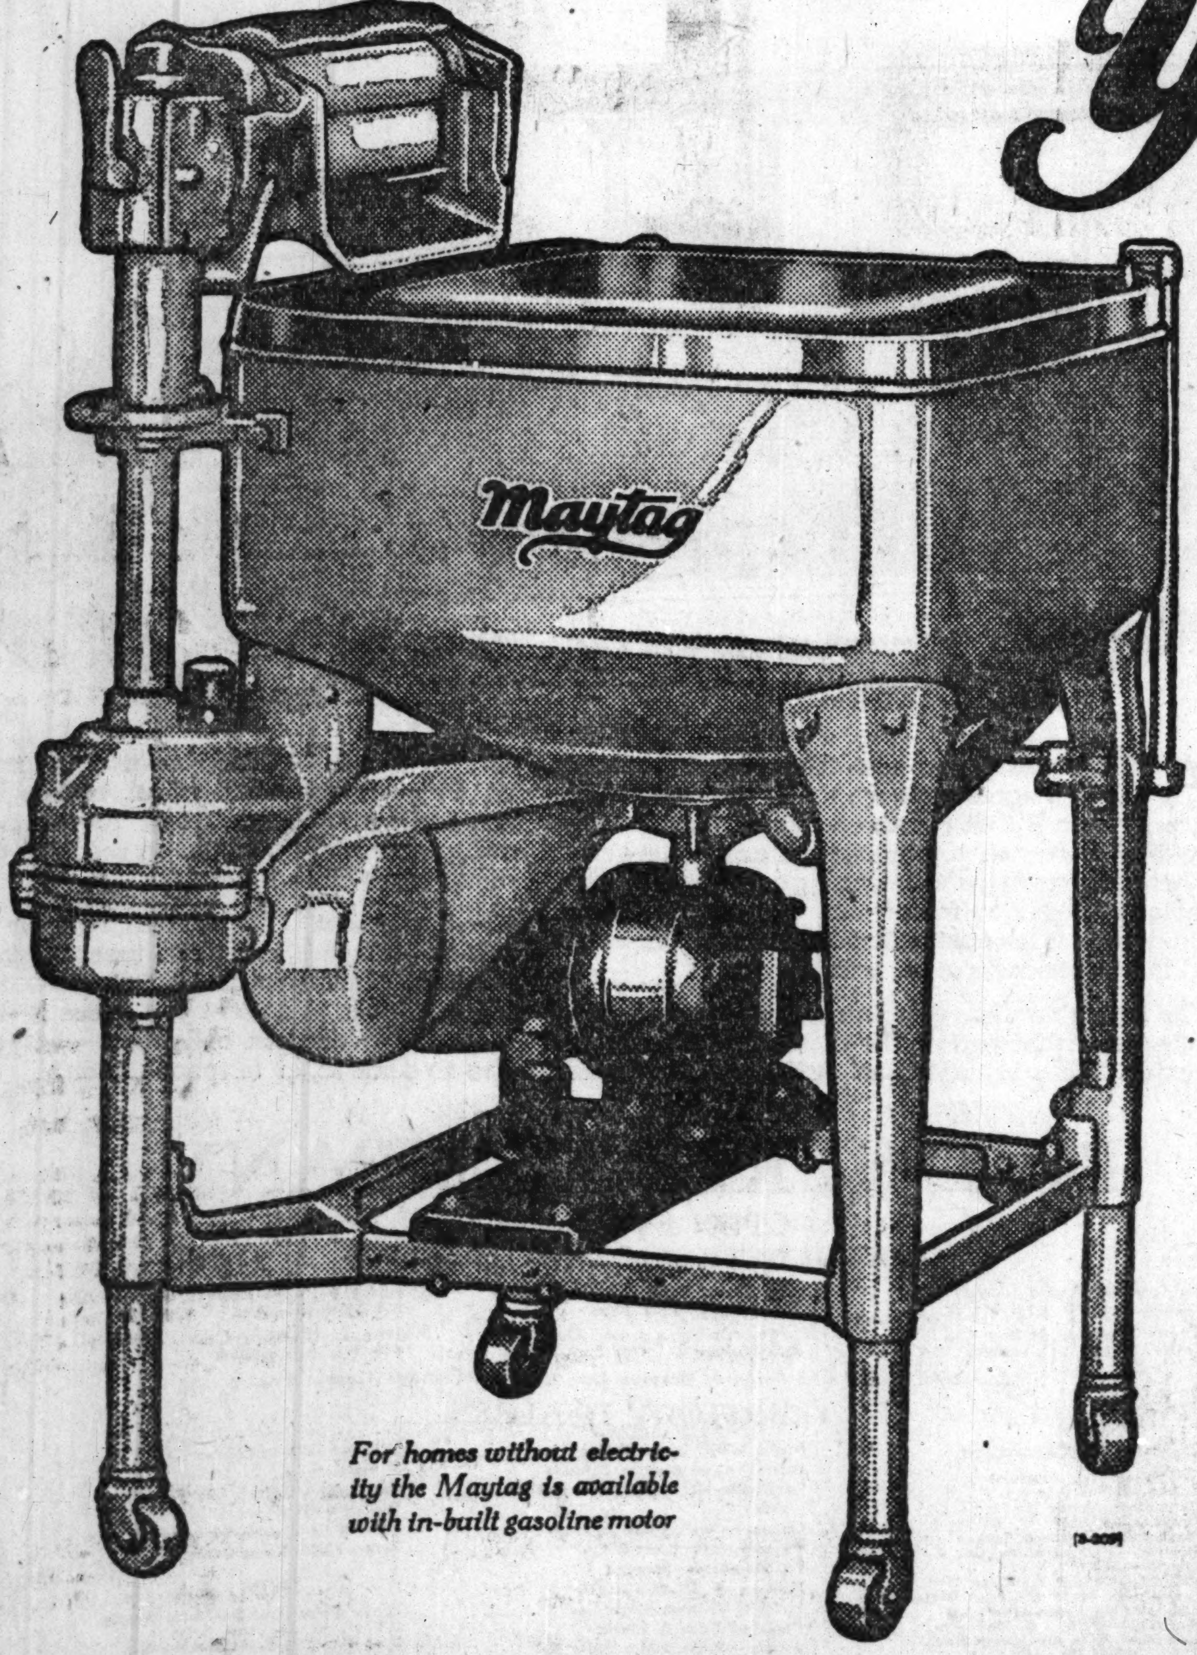
Aluminum Washer



For homes without electricity the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor

[3-209]

Your Baby's HEALTH

HAPPY, healthy childhood calls for as much outdoor recreation as possible.

And don't worry about the dirty clothes—with a Maytag you can wash the dirty play-clothes in a jiffy. You can wash one piece or a tubful—it makes no difference.

Three to seven minutes in the Maytag's cast-aluminum tub and everything is clean, without hand-rubbing a single garment. The Maytag's gyrafoam action assures you plenty of sweetly-clean clothes, with almost no labor—it is so much faster, easier and more thorough than any other washing method.

If the Maytag doesn't sell itself, don't keep it

$123,000 GIFTS SWELL FIREMEN'S PENSION FUNDS

Drive Called a Success; Donors Announced.

Widows and orphans of Chicago firemen, for a time threatened with the prospect of poverty, were assured of relief yesterday when the financial drive for the firemen's pension and other benefit funds was reported to have gone well over the top.

A total of $123,000 has been contributed to the funds, it was announced by Fire Commissioner Joseph F. Connery and donations are still coming in. The final grand total, the commissioner estimated, will reach a much larger figure.

"This is going to be of untold assistance," declared Mr. Connery. "It means that pensions now extremely low can be raised to the point where they will at least keep the wolf from the doors of families of deceased firemen."

The drive for funds began about six weeks ago, and Mr. Connery intends to continue it for about three weeks longer. Every cent contributed, he said, will go to the benefit funds, and he hopes that a total of $200,000 will be reached.

Some 10,000 Give.

Although many large contributions were listed, the fire commissioner stated that the vast bulk of the fund came from comparatively poor people in small amounts, the total number of contributors so being more than 10,000.

Distribute Fund This Week.

Mr. Connery said that a meeting of the commission appointed by Mayor Dever will be called this week to handle the fund collected and allot it to the pension fund, the Benevolent association, and the Mutual Aid association.

Contributions of $100 or more were made in the drive by the following persons and firms:

Illinois Steel company, $1,000; Boston store, $500; Consumers company, Alfred R. James, $500; Chicago Transfer and Clearing company, $400; Florsheim Shoe company, $300; Hillman's, Central Trust company, Union Trust company, $200; Link Belt company, $150; Chicago Board of Underwriters, $130.

Contributions of $100 were made by:

George F. Getz,
R. M. Eddy Foundry company,
Lord & Bushnell company,
Peoples Trust and Savings bank,
Thomas E. Dennehy,
Charles N. Strotz,
The Meyercord company,

CONSIDER BEST SIZE FOR SITE OF NEW POSTOFFICE

Officials to Decide the Issue This Week.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—Discussions relative to the selection of a site for the new Chicago postoffice got underway today.

Limitations on the area to be specified in the advertisement shortly to be published by the treasury department asking for proposals from real estate owners were considered at a conference. Those participating were Postmaster General New, First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett and subordinate officials in charge of the selection of postoffice quarters.

The conference took place after Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett had received from James A. Wetmore, supervising architect of the treasury, a request for a recommendation as to the area to be specified in the advertisement.

While the exact area under consideration was not divulged it was indicated that it included the section just west of the Chicago river convenient to the Northwestern and Union railroad stations.

Further conferences of postal officials will take place early next week, and it is expected that the department's recommendation will be furnished to the treasury by the middle or latter part of the week.

MULE'S KICK FATAL.

3 CHINESE TO BE CONSECRATED AS BISHOPS BY POPE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 17.—Pope Pius announced today that he himself will consecrate the three newly named Chinese bishops, the first native bishops of China. The consecration will take place on Oct. 24 at St. Peter's. It will emphasize the holy father's confidence in the Chinese as being able to conduct their own religious affairs and eliminate the difficulties created by complaints against the Catholic church foreign element in China. Cables were sent today to Peking informing the bishops to report at St. Peter's. This is the second time church control in the far east has been entrusted to native clergy. The first time was in India, in 1923, when the Hindu bishop, Tuticorin, was elected.

POP EYED CROWD SEES OPENING OF RINGLING CIRCUS

Trained seals from Neptune university playing volleyball; "the world's greatest bareback rider" performing breath taking stunts on a plump white horse; whirlwind aerial acrobats balancing in mid-air; woolly black dogs racing pell mell down a sawdust trail—these and a hundred other features thrilled yesterday's audience at the opening performance of Ringling Brothers' circuit in Grant park.

In a fluffy puffy costume of near-ermine and pink silk, Miss Bertha Beeson, with dainty resined feet, danced at breakneck speed on a thread of taut steel wire, and Mlle. Lillian Leitzel, suspended from the tent top by one arm, twirled her body in 70 revolutions while a band played firm, shrill music and everybody gasped.

Camel Man a Tragic Sight.

There were freaks, funny faced comedians and sad eyed grotesques, but the most pathetic freak of all was the Camel Man, a being evoluted since prohibition, who waddled fearfully up and down, a tragic sight to see.

Pop corn boys screamed their wares among wild animal cages and people stared with all their might at everything, for a new world was brought very close to Chicago folk.

An age-old show and a brand new show it was; a show for grandfather and for the tot he brought along. There were artists from the Antipodes, from Alaska, from the Argentine, and from Australia, and animals from even wider ports than these.

Ringling Family There.

The American Showman's league sent a giant floral horseshoe, a good luck token, to the first performance and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ringling themselves, residents of Evanston, as well as their son, Robert, an opera singer from Munich, were present for the fun.

Among the additions to the circus this year is Monty, the first baby sea lion ever born on tour, who came to light a couple of weeks ago at Montreal. He will greet visitors at both afternoon and evening performances during the nine days the circus is in town.

Shortage of Cars to Move Kansas Crop Denied

St. Louis, Mo., July 17.—(AP)—Newspaper accounts to the effect that Kansans are frantically clamoring for cars in which to move the wheat crop from that state are exaggerated, in the opinion of officials of the Missouri Pacific, which operates extensive mileage throughout the entire state of Kansas. "There is not now, has not been, and it is not anticipated that there will be any car shortage at any Missouri Pacific points," President L. W. Baldwin of the Missouri Pacific lines declared today.

WANTED
Two Branch Managers of extraordinary ability

Few men will apply for these positions. Probably less than twenty could qualify for a second interview.

The requirements are very high.

We expect to hear only from the man who normally never thinks of answering a blind advertisement.

If that man is buried behind politics or routine, waiting for "Dead Men's Shoes" or in any way cramped in his present place, he is dreaming of just such an opportunity as this.

The chosen two will identify themselves with a sound product that has an unlimited market . . . with a stable organization of the highest character . . . with a financial backing that rates in the many millions . . . with an advertising campaign of great power, national in scope.

The work is broad and free in operation. Action is offered . . . the chance to advance by sheer merit to larger jobs which rapid growth is continually opening.

Experience in the line is not essential, though knowledge of building materials may be of advantage. The work is allied with construction and the building trade.

You will find associates of the kind you like to work with.

You would deal with substantial business men.

You would be in an atmosphere that would assist you to do your best work and you certainly would get paid for doing it.

Outline in full your personal history, education and business experience. Tell your whole story. It will be held confidential, of course.

But do not spend the time unless you are going some place . . . and know it . . . and want recognition.

AFTER you've seen and driven this Brougham—you'll agree with the many thousands who already own it that the same money simply cannot buy more real automobile value anywhere else. There is a growing and deepening conviction among those who know motor car values that this Brougham is the outstanding dollar-for-dollar value on the motor car market today.

The Brougham has the same powerful and capable motor that powers the most expensive Paige models. It is a beautiful car. It is one of the easiest cars to handle. Its acceleration is instantaneous. Its Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes insure safe and positive braking always. Its wonderful roadability and comfort would do credit to the costliest motor car built.

The Brougham is larger and roomier than most sedans—it is finished in two tones of gray polished lacquer; upholstered in soft, lustrous and long wearing materials. We want you to see it—and to drive it—entirely without obligation—at your leisure. Try to come in, or telephone, soon!

BALDWIN SPURNS CHURCH PLAN TO END MINE STRIKE

No Chance for a Further Subsidy, He Says.

BY DON SKENE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 17. — Hopes for a definite move toward a coal mine peace were smashed this afternoon with the publication of Premier Baldwin's answer to church leaders in regard to their plea for a settlement of the coal strike. The premier, in his letter, agrees to meet the church delegation Monday morning at the house of commons, but he points out firmly that the government cannot accept the church truce proposals, adding that it would be useless for him to communicate them to the mine owners.

Rejects Church Leaders' Plea.

"The terms and conditions on which work can be resumed are not within the power of the government to determine," the premier writes. "They can only be settled by an agreement between the miners and owners. But the disastrous effect of this prolonged stoppage on national finances has made any further subsidy in the aid of wages out of the question."

The church leaders suggested that the miners return to work, on the basis of the old wages and hours, for four months, the government to supply a subsidy estimated at £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) to enable the owners to maintain the old wage scale while a solution of the problem was sought.

Women Protest for Strikers.

LONDON, July 17.—(AP)—Women labor sympathizers today staged a demonstration in Hyde Park in behalf of the striking British coal miners.

More than 3,000 of them marched from the Thames embankment to Hyde Park through London's fashionable west end, covering the same route which had been followed by the women's great peace parade and the equal suffrage parade. The women gathered around three speakers' platforms in Hyde Park and passed resolutions expressing their "deep indignation" at the government's handling of the coal strike.

On the way to Hyde Park the marchers swept past the exclusive club district of Piccadilly and St. James street, where they taunted the clubmen with cries of:

"Why don't you do some work," and "Go and earn your living."

Sing "The Red Flag."

The women, wearing miniature miners' lamps and red rosettes, were led by Mrs. W. M. Adamson, wife of a laborite member of parliament, who carried a banner on which was printed the miners' slogan, "Not a penny off the pay; not a minute on the day." The marchers occasionally broke into various communistic songs such as "The Red Flag" and the "Internationale."

The government's eight hour bill was assailed by Miss Maud Royden, well known preacher and social worker, who spoke in Hyde Park. "It is like asking the miners to go back to the trenches injured and exhausted," she said.

Dr. Marion Phillips said money for the relief of miners' families not only was coming from Russia, but also from Germany. She appealed to the public to offer their homes for short holidays for the miners' children and asked that clothing be donated.

ADMITS HE LED SIX IN $281,000 BANK JOB IN '24

Milwaukee, Wis., July 17.—(AP)—Matthew McNeil, arrested several days ago in Superior, confessed today to participation in the robbery of the Northwestern National bank in Milwaukee's suburbs in December, 1924, when seven robbers escaped with $281,000 in cash and securities.

McNeil was arrested with four other men, loitering in front of a Superior bank with shotgun, waiting for the doors to be opened for business.

Arriving here last night he was identified by Henry A. Deigman, cashier of the bank, as the man who had held a pistol on him during the robbery. After eighteen hours of questioning he admitted that he was the man.

"I was there and was the one who jumped over the railing and grabbed Mr. Deigman," police quote McNeill as saying. "The man who went over the railing with me was the one who slugged Mr. Deigman, and I was the one who carried the black bag and went into the vault and scooped up all there was there."

This bank robbery was the first in the history of Milwaukee. Approximately $220,000 of the amount stolen was recovered in Chicago and New York, when bonds known to have been part of the Milwaukee loot, were seized. The $60,000 not recovered was in cash.

McNeil said there were only six men in the gang.

Later today McNeil told the police that he was ready to go to court Monday and plead guilty to a charge of robbery while armed.

URGE IOWA SLAP AT COOLIDGE BY G. O. P. MEETING

State to Mix Politics, Farm Aid This Week.

Des Moines, Ia., July 17.—(AP)—Farm relief and politics, which have been closely related in Iowa since the beginning of the spring primary campaign, are subjects that will hold sway here next week.

On Monday the heads of a dozen or more farm groups are to meet to outline a definite agricultural relief program they wish pressed upon congress next winter.

Tuesday, the "Committee of 22," which unsuccessfully sponsored the McNary-Haugen farm relief plan during the last session of congress, is to confer here on methods of renewing the fight when congress reconvenes.

G. O. P. to Draft Platform.

Wednesday the state Republican convention will be in session. With no nominations to be made the convention's platform will be the center of interest. There is a strong probability that its pronouncement on the agricultural situation will reflect, in no small degree, the result of the recent primary which has been widely heralded as Iowa's protest against the failure of congress to assist the state's chief industry.

Since the calling of the farm organization conference a week ago there have been numerous reports linking up the political and economic aspects of the subjects. These culminated today in the definite announcement by William O. Payne of Des Moines that a resolution would be advocated in the convention criticizing President Coolidge for failure to aid in obtaining passage of a satisfactory farm bill and indorsing Frank O. Lowden of Illinois as Republican presidential nominee for 1928.

Conservatives Oppose It.

Conservative party leaders are frowning upon any attempts to inject national politics into the state convention and the concensus is that the proposed Coolidge-Lowden resolution will never come before the convention

The platform, however, will contain a definite statement on agricultural policy and is expected to strongly support the stand of Senator Albert B. Cummins and Col. Smith W. Brookhart that the party has neglected to carry out its promises to the farmers made in 1924. Should the Committee of 22 outline a new farm relief bill Tuesday the convention may even add its indorsement of that.

The Committee of 22 is expected to outline a program acceptable to all farm interests of the midwest and also to bid for the support of other sectional groups and to immediately launch a campaign that will continue up to the convening of congress.

Brookhart Will Speak.

Col. Brookhart defeated the veteran Senator Cummins for renomination largely on a farm relief platform. The voters thus reinstated Col. Brookhart and at the same time forced his chief plank upon the party as a leading issue for the coming campaign. The result has been a tendency to make peace in the party among the factions headed by the "regulars" and Col. Brookhart.

The colonel will attend the convention and probably will be asked to speak for the first time since he broke with the party organization six years ago.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUBS GIVE THEIR '27 MEETING TO OAKLAND

Des Moines, Ia., July 17.—Oakland, Cal., was awarded the 1927 convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs here today. Invitations also were extended by Lexington, Ky., and Miami, Fla.

State rights advocates won a skirmish at the final session when they defeated a motion to bind all individual clubs and state groups to the action of the national federation on questions of policy.

Another effort of insurgent forces to remove national headquarters from New York to the midwest was tabled and two motions interpreted as criticism of the management of the convention were lost.

"SPIRIT OF '26" TO HELP NEEDY FAMILIES OF '26

Pageant Benefit to Swell Ice and Camp Funds.

The "spirit of '76" portrayed in such dramatic episodes as feature the pageant and spectacle of that name at Lincoln park arena, tomorrow night's proceeds from which will go to THE TRIBUNE free ice and the Camp Algonquin funds, is not the only spirit being displayed in connection with the two charities.

There also is the spirit of '26, as demonstrated by the large number of donations reaching THE TRIBUNE for these two projects, which are bringing untold happiness and relief these warm days to the helpless little children and the weary mothers of the tenement districts. Every facility of the two philanthropies is being taxed to the utmost at present, and the donations are more than appreciated.

Card Party Nets $36.

Chief among the latest gifts to be received are $36 raised through a bunco and card party held by the young people of the Universalist church of the North Shore, and $30 sent by a wealthy, but lonely old lady in Michigan in memory of her departed dear ones.

"I shall be thinking of some unknown needy ones as enjoying the grand treat and benefit of Camp Algonquin," she writes.

Tickets for the benefit of tomorrow night may be purchased at the Garrick theater lobby, the arena, and at leading hotels and clubs. They are fifty cents and one dollar, plus war tax. The entertainment is exceptionally good, the fireworks alone being worth the price of admittance.

QUESTION AND FREE JACOBSON ON GANG MURDER

Police officials yesterday were questioning "Sammy the Greener" Jacobson, west side fixer and bootlegger, relative to the murder of Jules Portugese. Jacobson had promised to surrender yesterday but failed to do so. Later he was arrested by Lieut. Richard Barry.

Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker and Deputy Superintendent Matthew Zimmer had Jacobson alone in Schoemaker's office for an hour, but said he had not given them any helpful information. He was released when it appeared he had no connection with the murder.

HIS DEATH A MYSTERY.

Alex Parker, 29 years old, 509 East 44th street, died at the county hospital yesterday of injuries sustained in an unexplained manner a week ago. He was found unconscious, with his skull fractured, behind a garage at 57 East 22d street. His brother, Harley, who made the discovery, believes he was slugged.

EASY PUNISHMENT FOR ABD-EL KRIM PLEASES RIFFS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, July 17.—Native opinion in Morocco is amazed at the leniency being shown Abd-el Krim, according to official reports from Tetuan. The Riffian chieftain would be most ungrateful, they hold, if he did not show appreciation for the generosity the French and Spanish displayed in punishing his rebellious activities only with banishment to an island, while similar rebels had been put in cages with wild lions and left there.

Abd-el Krim, however, is sad over his fate. Sentinels stand guard over him constantly, preventing him from communicating with his former retainers.

Tetuan reports that all is quiet in the district. Spanish aviation, the only branch left there, now is routing the few groups of rebels hiding in remote corners.

Elks' Balloon Drifted 825 Miles; Record Is Not Set

Although the balloon "Detroiter," in winning the Elks national race from here, was credited with establishing a national record by traveling 852 miles to Jennings, Fla., dispatches from Washington yesterday gave its official flight as 825 miles. This does not establish any record, the National Aeronautical association contends, because of the flight made at Little Rock, Ark., in April of 848 miles.

FILIPINO CHIEFS TIE WOOD'S HANDS IN LEGISLATURE

To Block Passage of Any Laws He Asks.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, July 17.—The Philippine legislature, under weight of the apparent hostility of some leaders to Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood, has created a situation which will preclude the enactment of any legislation which the governor general proposed in his message yesterday.

"An impasse exists and will continue to exist as long as Gen. Wood is governor," said one of the most influential politicians in the Philippine islands. "Whoever is to blame, that is a fact, and there is no getting around it.

"The legislature will not pass any law asked by Gov. Wood because of the feeling against him. Since it is impossible to remove the legislature, the only cure for a bad situation, hurtful both to the United States and the Philippines, is the removal of Gov. Wood."

Back Thompson, Attack Wood.

The contrast in the feeling of the natives toward Gov. Gen. Wood and Col. Carmi A. Thompson, President Coolidge's representative, was shown in the applause given the latter and the silence that greeted the former before the legislature; also the manifest attitude of the leaders that they will join Col. Thompson to support any legislation he recommends, insuring its passage.

Some of the more radical independence advocates sometimes say that any step for the development of the country with American capital will be blocked until independence is assured, but this is considered more the result of emotionalism than cool judgment. It is realized by the leaders that American capital is needed greatly, especially to develop rubber growing.

Guests of Navy.

Today the Thompson party were guests of the Cavite naval station at a luncheon at the invitation of Rear Admiral George W. Laws. Unfortunately Admiral Laws is at the hospital, suffering from a slight illness, but Commander Herndon B. Kelly acted as host in his absence.

In his inspection of the navy yard Col. Thompson was interested in seeing how American purchases here help the islands, the navy alone buying more than $20,000,000 worth of goods last year. Army purchases probably passed this mark.

Old Chicago Settlers Hold Reunion Today

Chicago's early days will be lived over again in reminiscence tomorrow at Brand's park, where the fifty-second annual reunion of the old settlers of Chicago and Cook county will be held. Prizes will be awarded in the usual competitions, contests being held to decide on the oldest residents—those who have lived longest in Chicago. The honor was awarded last year to James Frederick Marshall, 3024 Prairie avenue, who arrived in 1844. Susannah Hand, 1526 North Clark street, was the oldest woman settler residing in the city, coming here in 1843.

German Finds Cheaper Way of Making Alcohol

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 17.—The discovery of a new alcohol for motors costing only a fraction of the present day motor fuels has been reported by Prof. Classen of Aix la Chapelle. The fuel is distilled from sawdust and other cellulose holding waste. It is heralded as a harbinger of a great revolution in the paper and artificial silk industry.

Public Buys 18 Million Dollars' Worth of New Lower-Priced Lighter Six, Chrysler "60" in First Sixty Days

In the first sixty days following its introduction an enthusiastic motoring public has paid more than eighteen millions of dollars for the newest Chrysler, the new lighter six, Chrysler "60".

Unfilled orders for many millions more are being rapidly met by vastly expanded production facilities.

This overwhelming success was inevitable for never before in the lower-priced six-cylinder field has the public been offered such compelling value as the new Chrysler "60".

In no other car approximating these low prices can you match the combination of these noteworthy features—

Sixty miles, and more, per hour; unprecedented acceleration; extraordinary gas economy, easily exceeding 22 miles to the gallon; the striking beauty of Chrysler dynamic symmetry—

Astonishing riding ease and roadability; the safety of Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes; oil-filter and air-cleaner; full pressure lubrication; 7-bearing crankshaft; impulse neutralizer; road levelizers front and rear; roomy and luxurious bodies.

Unit for unit, in the new lighter six, Chrysler "60" you have the same standardized quality which has given such dominance to the famous Chrysler "70" and to the superfine Chrysler Imperial "80" in their respective price groups—in engineering design, in materials, in craftsmanship, in rigidity of test and inspection, and in all characteristics of dependability and long life.

We are eager to demonstrate these and scores of other superiorities.

See the new lighter six, Chrysler "60". Drive it. Convince yourself that nowhere will you find another six approximating it in price that can compare with this newest Chrysler achievement.

The new prestige in motoring

Hupmobile Eight Becomes the Center of a Rising Aristocracy Grouped Around Its Superior Principle

The day is passing when price and name alone are reason enough for distinction in motor car ownership.

It began to pass with the coming of the beautiful Hupmobile Eight—the new interpretation of a superior engineering principle—and its going is being accelerated with every passing month.

There is a rising aristocracy of motoring, now, and it centers around the Hupmobile Eight.

It is an aristocracy which grants allegiance to a principle—to the newest and best as expressed in super-excellent quality and performance—as well as to a fine and distinguished name.

Its ranks are made up of those who instinctively take unto themselves the finer and better things of life.

And it has given over the idea that mere high price, unsupported by other eminent and superior elements, is the beginning and the end of prestige.

So it is today a mark of distinction to own and drive a Hupmobile Eight.

Not alone for its illustrious name.

Not alone for its beautiful coachwork.

But also for its magnificent performance, and the fact that eminent engineers pay it the honor of terming it the most perfect development of the straight-eight principle in America.

The first time you drive the Hupmobile Eight yourself, you will understand the subtle change that is taking place among buyers of the finer cars, and why it is taking place.

For you will find in this beautiful Eight the final luxury of smooth motoring—

A rythm of engine action and road action that leaves you eager to go on, even at the end of a long day's tour—

A car so fine in every phase and detail of behavior that you would invent reasons for quite unnecessary trips here and there, in town and country, just for the pleasure of driving it or riding in it.

You still are subject to the thrill of being away first at the traffic signal; of sailing up a hill as though it wasn't there at all, of taking the rough stretches surely and smoothly without relaxing your pressure on the throttle.

You still like to swish in and out and around—when you can—and the quick-footedness of this Eight means all of that; with brake deceleration the full match for its remarkable acceleration.

Even if this Eight were not the sleek, beautiful thing it is, its magnificent smoothness and performance would give you pause, were you to consider some other type at some other price.

But with its beauty, and with everything that its perfected straight-eight principle means in luxury and in distinction, there remains no alternative—everything points to the Hupmobile Eight for your car.

POLICE CHIEFS OF U. S. TO MEET HERE THIS WEEK

Officers from Canada to Attend.

Police officials from 300 cities in all sections of the country and Canada start assembling here today for the 33d annual meeting of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

With Vice President Charles G. Dawes and Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, as leading speakers, a unique exhibit of anti-crime devices, and an elaborate entertainment program, the conclave, its sponsors say, will be the greatest gathering of law enforcement heads in history.

From the opening session at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow until the closing banquet Thursday night, Chief Morgan A. Collins, who has general charge of arrangements, said yesterday, the convention will be a continuous series of speeches, reports, and discussions covering the control of every phase of modern crime. All meetings will be held at the Congress hotel.

Wants Public's Help.

"Every detail of the convention is ready," the chief reported. "All we need now to make the conference what it should be is the coöperation of the public in helping to entertain the visitors and prove to them that Chicago isn't a crime center, but a big hearted, progressive city."

Samuel J. Dickson, chief constable of Toronto, Canada, and president of the association, arrived here yesterday to aid Chief Collins in completing reception arrangements. He expressed himself as pleased with the preparatory work already done by the Chicago police department and business men.

Mayor Dever will open the convention tomorrow morning with an address of welcome, followed by officers reports and reports of special committees. Secretary Hoover will speak at 3 p. m. His subject will be "Traffic Regulations," dealing especially with the proposed model safety law code adopted at the recent street and highway conference in Washington.

Chief of Red Coats to Talk.

Among the speakers Tuesday will be F. Trubee Davison, chairman of the national crime commission, New York; Col. Cortlandt Starnes, commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Ottawa, Canada; Col. A. W. Barber, director of street and highway safety, Washington, D. C.; and Dr. D. A. Clark, deputy minister of the department of health, Ottawa, Canada.

Wednesday's program will take up criminal identification, juvenile delinquents, extradition proceedings, scientific aids to police, paroles, and the work of policewomen with J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau of identification, Washington, D. C.; Justice Arnold, Juvenile court judge, Chicago, and Mrs. Mabel Rockwell of the Chicago police department, as the principal speakers.

Elect Officers Thursday.

The final business session Thursday will be given over to committee reports, election of new officers, and choosing the next place of meeting. The convention last year was held at Indianapolis.

Vice President Dawes will speak at the closing banquet Thursday night. He will be introduced by Mayor Dever. The entertainment program of the convention is under the personal direction of Mrs. Morgan A. Collins and will include luncheons, dances, sightseeing tours, and theater parties. Mrs. Collins is being assisted by her daughter, Miss Charlotte Collins.

Among the sponsers for the convention who have guaranteed it financially are Stuyvesant Peabody, Melvin A. Traylor, W. R. Abbott, James A. Patten, Mark W. Cresap, John Hertz, C. H. Markham, Louis F. Swift, Britton I. Budd, and William Wrigley Jr.

T. H. SYMINGTON, RICH GOTHAMITE, ASKS DIVORCE

Belair, Md., July 17.—(AP)—Thomas H. Symington, millionaire New Yorker, has filed suit here for an absolute divorce from his wife, Mrs. Ida May Symington, it was learned today. Mr. Symington charges misconduct on the part of his wife with Talbott W. Chambers and Maurice Fatio of New York City and "with divers others unknown to him."

The suit is the second brought by the clubman against his wife within the past two years. Divorce proceedings instituted in New York in 1924 charged Mrs. Symington with misconduct and also named Chambers and Fatio.

Predict Bulgar King Will Marry Italian Princess

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, July 17.—It is understood that King Boris of Bulgaria, who at present is sojourning at Lucerne, during his recent short stay at Milan was visited by the Duke of Acosta on the question of the marriage of the king with the Princess Jeanne, the youngest daughter of the king of Italy. It is expected their engagement will be officially announced shortly.

PART OF SCIENCE IN SOCIAL WORK TOPIC OF GROUP

Pondering whether or not scientific methods may be applied successfully to the study of social problems, the subcommittee of the Social Science Research council, of which Prof. Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago is chairman, met yesterday at the Hotel La Salle. Prof. J. L. Gillian, professor of psychology at the University of Wisconsin, presided at the meeting.

"This is a study of methodology and not of the problems themselves," Prof. Gillian explained. "We are trying to determine the value of the interview method, the case method, and to what extent statistics may be relied upon in pursuing the study of social problems."

Commenting on the difficulties involved in attaining concreteness in the work, Prof. Gillian observed that chemists may watch the reactions of their subjects in a test tube, and bacteriologists have perfected the mechanism of research, but that humans cannot be caged and experimented on, and that methods have lagged in the study of human elements.

British Company Makes Big Oil Strike in Mexico

Tampico, Mexico, July 17. — (AP) — What oil men declare to be the greatest well in the northern petroleum district has been struck in the Tampasoa field, north of the famous Panuco oil region. The well, which was brought in at a depth of 1,607 feet, has produced 15,000 barrels. It is the property of an English oil company.

They'll never leave your house . . alive!

FLIES fly in mosquitoes fly in and roaches crawl in but they're swept out . . DEAD . . every one of 'em when you use BLACK FLAG—deadliest of insect-killers.

No survivors—that is the beauty of BLACK FLAG. The pests breathe it—they die. And they all die. The secret ingredient in BLACK FLAG strangles them. It is the surest, swiftest death ever discovered for flies, mosquitoes, and every kind of bug which elects to live indoors.

Fleas are wiped out by BLACK FLAG. This master insect-killer rids a house of ants, bed-bugs, roaches and moths, too! Fatal for bugs—absolutely harmless to humans and animals. Try it in the form you prefer—liquid or powder. Buy it at drug, grocery, hardware or department stores. Powder is 15c up. Powder Gun, 10c. And the low liquid prices will astonish you. DRY SOUTH GETS BEST BOOZE, U. S. AGENTS ASSERT

Put Dixie "Moon" Above Liquor of North.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—Study of an accurate bootlegger's map of the Union would disclose that citizens of Florida get the purest liquor in the country, prohibition authorities said today.

According to reports received by Frank Dow, acting federal dry chief, 85 per cent of the booze sold in the state of Florida is smuggled goods. Comparing this condition with that existing in other states, Mr. Dow asserted that less than 5 per cent of the liquor consumed outside of Florida is smuggled in from other countries.

Mr. Dow estimated that 95 per cent of the liquor used for beverage purposes in this country last year was manufactured in the United States. Dry investigators report that the smuggled goods are much safer to drink than the manufactured liquors.

Dry Chief Praises Corn Liquor.

The whole south, according to the dry officials, is faring better than other sections of the country in the character of the booze it is getting. Reports received by Mr. Dow indicate that high powered, biting corn liquor, with the proper bead on it, is being manufactured in Georgia, South Carolina, and many of the other southern states. This liquor, dry experts say, barring its rawness, is sound and better to drink than the synthetic drinks of the north. Chicago and other large cities, with the exception of Detroit, are the great sufferers from bad liquor concoctions, according to Mr. Dow.

Mr. Dow's study revealed that Detroit, and the Pacific coast get better liquor than is sold generally throughout the country. Along the coast it is estimated that about 15 per cent is smuggled through the lines.

Anti-Saloon League Slipping.

Assertion that the Anti-Saloon league has suffered a tremendous loss of prestige within the last few months and is still slipping was made in a statement issued today by Representative John J. O'Connor [Dem., N. Y.].

"Indications are growing stronger that congress will refuse to yield much further to the dictation of the Anti-Saloon crowd," Mr. O'Connor said. "It will be a hopeful sign indeed when congress resumes its own responsibility in the premises, drives the Anti-Saloon crowd from its doors, and sets down to a serious and sensible consideration of a sane solution of the prohibition problem.

"If the ends and aims of the Anti-Saloon league could not be accomplished before the country found out something about the Anti-Saloon league itself, its methods and its policies, it is morally certain that cannot be accomplished now after the exposures made by the Reed committee."

Famous Composer to Lead Orchestras in America

MILAN, Italy, July 17.—(AP)—Arturo Toscanini, composer and orchestral conductor, plans to leave for the United States in October, where he will conduct orchestras.

LA GUARDIA MAKES PILSENER IN DRUG STORE BEER LESSON

New York, July 17.—[Central News.]—"Don't go away, Paul. All ready, boys. A little pilsener, major."

REPRESENTATIVE LA GUARDIA.

Representative La Guardia smacked his lips and then smacked them again.

"How's that, boys?" he asked quickly, adding: "Stay where you are, Paul."

The scene was the small pharmacy at 95 Lenox avenue; the occasion, Representative La Guardia's famous beer test, first tried out at Washington.

Paul incidentally, was Mr. La Guardia's bondsman.

Mr. La Guardia was lavish in his generosity. "A pinch of salt and light beer makes pilsener," he said juggling glasses and bottles, "providing you fill the glass two-thirds with malt and one-third with the near-beer.

DRY RAIDS NET MUCH LIQUOR IN FLORIDA CITIES

Miami, Fla., July 17.—(AP)—Thirty-nine prisoners were taken, 9,600 quarts of liquor and 15,000 bottles of beer were seized and other valuable property confiscated in a vigorous three day government drive against alleged prohibition violators in Tampa, Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach which ended today.

Working under the supervision of J. H. Lee, acting prohibition administrator of Florida, forces of secret service men, narcotic inspectors and prohibition agents coöperated in the raids, which began Thursday in Tampa when eleven unnamed persons were arrested, 3,600 quarts of liquor, four automobiles and one boat seized.

The government agents today concentrated around Fort Lauderdale where Mr. Lee reported the arrest of twenty-four men and the seizure of 15,000 bottles of beer and 6,000 quarts of liquor, valued at $47,000.

POPE WILL HONOR LEADING MEN IN CONGRESS HERE

ROME, July 17.—(AP)—American Catholic laymen and prelate who tok important parts in the Eucharistic congress at Chicago are to be honored after Cardinal Bonzano's return here, the newspapers say. The laymen will be granted decorations, and the prelates honorary titles.

Cardinal Thanks Protestants.

MADRID, July 17.—(AP)—Cardinal Reig y Casanova, primate of Spain, sees in the help extended by Protestants to the recent Eucharistic congress at Chicago, a "symptom of approximation." The cardinal expressed gratitude for this coöperation. He stated that notwithstanding his advanced age, the trip to Chicago did not tire him. He is 67 years old.

BANK MESSENGER ROBBED.

Vincent O'Rourke, 18 years old, 1819 South Leavitt street, a messenger for the Hamilton State bank, 3845 Broadway, was robbed of $15, his own money, yesterday by a bandit at 3926 Sheridan road.

ITALY PRESSES SCHEME TO CUT OUT MIDDLEMAN

Mussolini Seeks to Pare Workers' Living Cost.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 17.—How the government and employers will get rid of the middleman and sell the necessities of life to workers at bottom prices is the problem which a committee consisting of leading bankers, industrial leaders, and experts in political economy, appointed by Premier Benito Mussolini, has to solve. The dictator has given the committee until July 25 to make its report.

At a meeting attended by Premier Mussolini, the minister of economy, industrial chiefs, bankers, and experts, it was decided that the shops where the workers will get cheap food and clothes should not be in the factories, but in the center of industrial districts.

Huge Power in Prospect.

While the government is waging an economic battle against the natural poverty of the country, the announcement was made today that Italy is developing 6,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of electric power, of which all but 300,000,000 kilowatt hours is produced by hydro-electric plants. It is expected that in the next few years this will be tripled, as the potential hydro-electric power is estimated at more than 20,000,000,000 kilowatt hours.

Contributing also to Italy's wealth is the expected increase in tourists as a result of the projected highway from Venice through Milan to Hamburg.

Russia and Italy Dicker.

ROME, July 17.—(AP)—Improvement of trade relations between Italy and Russia has been arranged through a conference here between Count Volpi, Italian finance minister, and Ambassador Kerkenzeff, assisted by N. Dutusoff, soviet trade delegate. The Russians asked that Italian banks be more liberal in granting credits and accepting as payment drafts and bills of exchange issued by the soviet commissary for foreign trade. Count Volpi declared the large banks would be instructed to fulfill the request.

DOUG AND MARY AID IN SETTLING WARSAW STRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, July 17.—This is the first time in their lives that Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, when visiting the capital of a country, found not a single movie running. All the movies of Warsaw are closed by a general strike called by the showmen in protest against the government taxes.

The popular clamor aroused by the arrival of Doug and Mary resulted in the strike being called off. The movies will resume on Monday.

The American movie king and queen were scheduled to see Marshal Josef Pilsudski and President Ignace Moscicki today, but neither appeared. They have decided to extend their visit in Warsaw until Monday, hoping to see Poland's leaders before their departure for Moscow.

[All of these portions are big enough for two people, and there is no added charge for sharing them.]

And for Breakfast:

Honey Waffles 30c
With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey.

Bacon and Eggs . . . 35c
Two fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon.

If we followed the plan of other good restaurants and hotels we would be forced to charge just about twice that price. But this is the "Common Sense" dining place where you "serve yourself". We don't need to add anything to our prices to cover waiter's salaries. You save the difference.

Every day we are told that this Chefs Steak Dinner is the greatest food value in all Chicago. It consists of a tender, juicy steak which in most cases is big enough for two people, plus delicious tomato salad and French fried potatoes. An in spite of the liberal portion, and the very low price, you can't beat the quality—no matter how much more you pay.

And this is only one example of the amazing food values you get here any time of the day—from an early breakfast to midnight.

These 100,000-Mile Studebakers are proof of One-Profit Value

In March we published a roster of 274 Studebaker owners who had driven their cars from 100,000 to more than 300,000 miles—a few of the veteran Studebakers throughout the world. Since then, hundreds of new names, voluntarily submitted, have been added to this record of Studebaker dependability and stamina. The list below contains 817 hundred-thousand-mile Studebakers. And almost every day new names are added to this honor roll of service. Here is conclusive proof of the thousands of miles of excess transportation built into every Studebaker.

Studebaker proves stamina by smashing transcontinental record

On June 17th, a stock model Studebaker Big Six driven by Ab Jenkins and Ray Peck of Salt Lake City, established a new transcontinental record, bridging the 3471-mile gap between New York and San Francisco in 86 hours, 20 minutes. It lowered the previous automobile record by 16 hours and 25 minutes—beat the fastest time by train, 6 hours and 25 minutes. An average speed of 40.2 miles per hour was maintained in spite of terrific rainstorms, fog and deep mud. Even under the extremely unfavorable conditions encountered throughout the gruelling trip, gasoline consumption averaged 13.4 miles per gallon and oil, 315.5 miles per quart.

It is doubtful if you will ever demand such severe service from your car as this transcontinental run required. Yet it proves why Studebaker performs so unfailingly in every-day use—why hundreds of owners have testified mileage records ranging from 100,000 to 300,000 miles.

CUBS BEATEN, 8-3; SOX LOSE, 3-2 AND 4-3

20,000 SEE CAPT. HAL BREAK TRACK RECORD

CLIPS MARK FOR MILE TO NOSE OUT ROTHERMEL

Shark Disqualified at Homewood.

BY FRENCH LANE.

More than 20,000 Chicago race-goers got their first real touch of metropolican turf thrills at Washington park yesterday when Captain Hal, one of America's greatest handicap horses, took nearly a full second off the track record as he raced to a thrilling victory in the mile Curran handicap. He won by a nose from Senator J. N. Camden's Rothermell, while Edward R. Bradley's Beneficient was third, but not even crowding the two leaders.

E. R. BRADLEY.

Five went to the post in the biggest race staged since the thoroughbred sport was established two weeks ago at the new Homewood course. Captain Hal, despite the big reputation he brought here, won by only the narrowest of nose margins from Rothermel which crept up inch by inch after coming from far back until she was all but on even terms with the favorite.

Captain Hal was a bit short in this race and he looked high in flesh but Jockey Earl Pool, getting the last ounce of run out of the son of Black Toney-Wavering, managed to come past the finish line on the front end of the parade. But Captain Hal didn't do any of the things expected of him. He let Senator Norris make the early pace, went into the lead on the turn into the stretch, but instead of opening up a gap of a dozen lengths as his backers predicted, staggered on to win by a margin of inches.

Victor and Trainer Cheered.

Captain Hal ran the mile in 1:37 4-5, by far the fastest trip ever made over the course and when he came back to be unsaddled by Trainer Roscoe Goose, both Goose and the big black horse, owned by a half dozen clerks down on the Kentucky tobacco market, were roundly cheered.

The coal black son of Black Toney stole the feature place on the card away from a band of smart 2 year olds which raced in the $5,000 Homewood stakes.

Don Diego, brought here for this race by the Keene brothers of Kentucky and acclaimed as the greatest juventile in the west, proved a bitter disappointment, for he folded up like an accordeon a sixteenth out after being three lengths in front. Then the H. G. Bedwell colorbearers, Chairman and La Morte, took up the running and finished one-two. Dr. Maxon was crowding them in the last strides and was third.

Shark Is Disqualified.

The card carried about every kind of a racing angle, for a disqualification came in the first race after Shark had led a field of seven across the finish line. The ruling was made after Jockey Danny Jones had engaged in alleged foul riding, forcing out Gad with Jockey G. Johnson in the saddle and generally roughing it through the stretch struggle. The displacement brought victory for Gad, heavily played, whose backers cheered the granting of the foul. Shark had been almost as stoutly supported and his backers booed when the decision was announced. In his morning gallops here Shark has been bearing to the outside, and it seemed to be a weak excuse for so drastic a ruling.

Captain Hal wasn't the only one to crack a track record as Edward R. Bradley's sprinter, Clonaslee, the only horse in the Idlehour stable whose name doesn't begin with the letter "B," ran 5½ furlongs in 1:06 1-5 to beat Banter in the third race. Goldie Johnson gave him a splendid ride.

ARREST RACE CHIEF

Warrants charging gambling were served yesterday upon County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, Thomas E. Bourke, and Thomas Curran, officials of the Illinois Jockey club, when they voluntarily appeared at the Evanston police station and surrendered to Constable George W. Harrison.

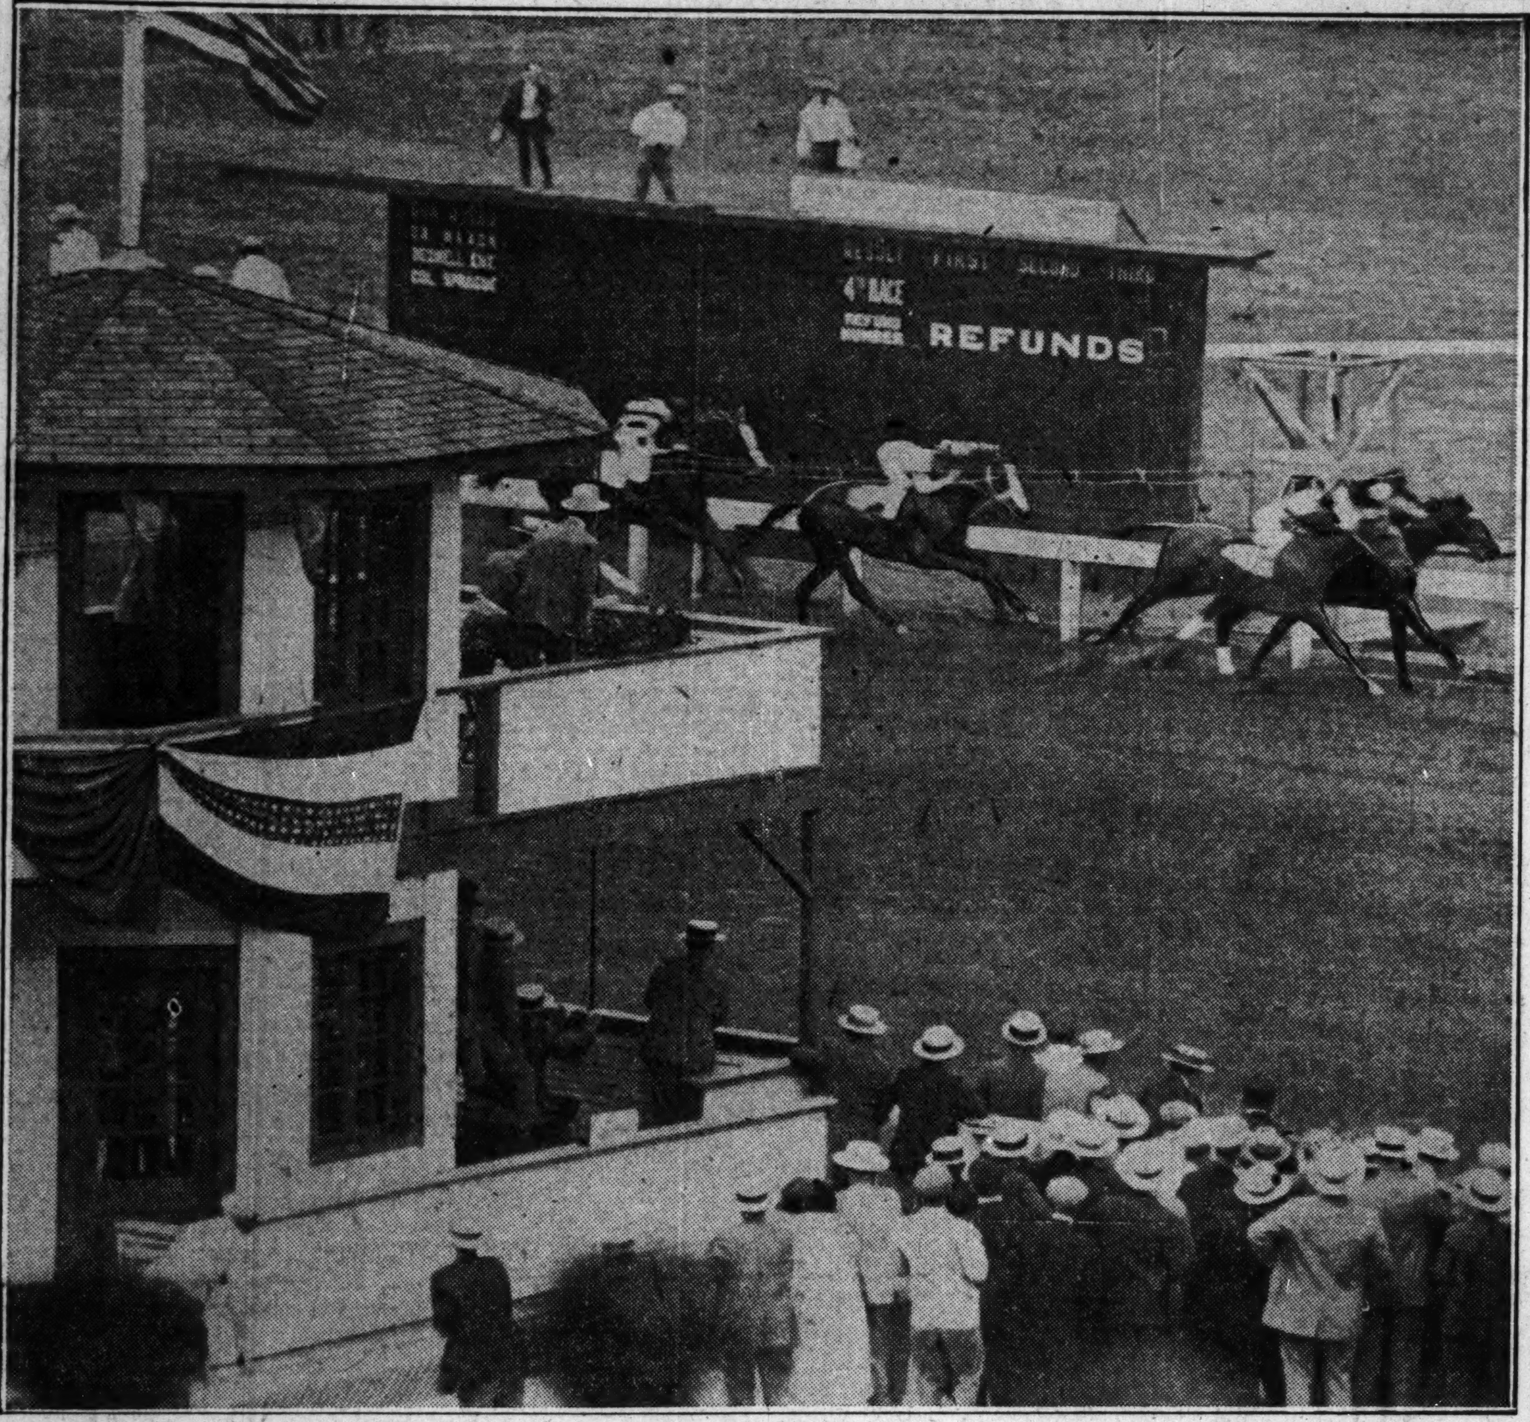
The warrants were obtained Friday night by the Rev. Elmer E. Williams, vice crusader and director of law enforcement of the Better Government association.

Bonds of $500 each were furnished by the three defendants and they were released. Justice Harrison set a hearing on the charges for July 26.

If the grand jury indicts the three officials and they are then found guilty at a trial in the Criminal court, a penalty of six months in jail or a $200 fine, or both, may be imposed by the presiding judge.

A decision by Circuit Judge Ira Ryner on the legality of the modified mutuels at the Homewood track is expected tomorrow or Tuesday.

NOSING WAY TO TRACK RECORD AND $2,500



Captain Hal took the Curran mile handicap from Rothermel in the fourth race at Homewood yesterday and clipped nearly a full second from the track record by his victory. The great handicap horse got the decision by a nose and gave the 20,000 Chicago racegoers their first touch of real turf thrills. Beneficent, a Bradley entry, took third place.

Malcolm B. Jr. Beats Carlaris at Raceland

Ashland, Ky., July 17.—[Special.]—Carlaris, the speed marvel running in the colors of the Chula Vista stables of W. T. Anderson, suffered his first defeat this afternoon since Sandy Man showed his heels to the imported son of Phalaris and Carnival, way back in the early part of last winter's meeting at Tia Juana. In the third running of the $5,000 Raceland Derby here over the course of a mile and a quarter Carlaris was beaten a length and a half by W. C. Baxter's Malcolm B. Jr.

Carlaris was beaten, but not disgraced by any means. He conceded 18 pounds to the winner, led all the way to the final furlong where he tired under his stake weight of 126 pounds. It was the first time Carlaris had been under silks since last March, and in the interim he had been thrown out of training.

Works Speedy Mile.

It is possible that Carlaris, who has shown tremendous speed in all his races, was short for this grilling test, or he may have left his race on the track on Thursday, when he worked a sensational mile in 1:38 4-5, finishing out a mile and a quarter in 2:11 4-5, pulled up to a walk.

Only five faced the barrier for the feature event of the meeting, which attracted a great crowd anxious to get a view of the winner of the Coffroth handicap, the Tia Juana Derby and had been unbeaten in his last five starts. Carlaris, of course, was an overwhelming favorite and no show tickets were sold in the mutuels.

Carlaris Takes Lead.

When the barrier rose Carlaris raced into an early lead. He was running easily and soon opened a big gap on the others, among which Malcolm B. Jr. was the only one considered capable of giving Carlaris more than a gallop. Carlaris showed the way throughout and at all times appeared to have the race cinched. But in the drive down the homestretch the weight and lack of recent racing began to take its toll and Malcolm B. Jr. closed with a rush to win going away.

The time was 2:05 1-5, only three-fifths seconds slower than the track record for the distance.

Net Player Collapses in Heat; Forfeits Title

Sioux Falls, S. D., July 17.—(AP)—After winning the first two sets of the South Dakota men's singles tennis championship and dropping the third set, Horace Barton of Sioux Falls suffered a partial heat prostration today and had to forfeit the state title to Bernstedt of Rapid City.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

MOTORING AND CUSTOMS.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., July 17.—Friend Don: Well, Don, we got back into the States all right after a short technical delay at Rouse's Point, where we came across. It seems we neglected to get some papers when we left, so we had to prove to the United States immigration officials that we were not Armenians, or Turks, or Russians, or Italians, or natives of some country whose quota is filled.

With that accomplished, we went to customs, and about twenty cars were lined up while officers went through the baggage and felt around the side of traveling bags for flasks and emptied out suitcases, but I did not notice them looking under any seats.

My inspector asked if we bought anything in Canada, and I said, "Yes, linens." You remember I spent my time in Toronto in linen shops. So he said, "Well, go upstairs and declare them." While I was there an inspector came in with eight bottles and a victim. [I think they shot the victim the next day.]

Then I went down and said to the inspector, "Want to see our baggage?" And he said, "No, I'm too busy with these other cars. Go on along." Then he handed me a cigar. He didn't open a single piece of luggage, examine the linen, or even look in the car.

Now I must confess what will surprise and no doubt disappoint you. There was not a single pint in all our baggage, which was not opened.

We stopped at Paul Smith's to leave the little Wakes at Camp Boulder Point, where a number of Evanston girls are summering. It's about three miles from President Coolidge's camp. Paul Smith's is the headquarters, as you know, for the presidential official staff.

I wondered how Paul Smith's got its name, so I asked the owner of the hotel. It seems Paul Smith went up into the Adirondacks about 1858, before the railroads, and acted as guide for sportsmen seeking fish, deer, bear, elephants, lions or whatever was there then. Well, Paul saw a future for this wild country and bought all the land he could at ridiculously low prices until he had 25,000 acres.

His place became a noted resort for prominent people, and he also sold camp sites like the one the President is visiting. These camps are really elaborate country estates. Well, anyway, the place was always referred to as Paul Smith's, and when there was a little town it was Paul Smith's, too.

Paul had two sons, one of whom lives in California and the other conducts the attractive hotel, which accommodates 350 guests, and the real estate, and the Paul Smith interests own the telephone line and supply electric light to Saranac Lake and that whole section of the country.

From here I'm coming straight home, stopping only at Canandaigua, N. Y., for a little visit with I. E. (Sy) Sanborn, who reported baseball for THE TRIBUNE for more than 25 years and has now retired, and at my grandparents' old home in Ohio. See you about Monday. Regards.

Miss Weltman Wins State Public Parks Golf Title, 9-8

BY MORROW KRUM.

Miss Virginia Weltman, former municipal champion of New York, won the Illinois state women's public parks tournament at the Lincoln park golf course yesterday. Miss Weltman defeated Mrs. Florence Jacobs, Jackson park, by the score of 9 and 8 in their 36 hole match.

There are two versions to the story of Miss Weltman's victory. One was to the effect that her golf was so superior to the game of Mrs. Jacobs that the result was never in doubt. The other theory came from "Sure Shot" Gillett, the articulate caddy employed by the champion to tote her bag and clubs.

"Golf had a little to do with it, I'll admit," said Sure Shot in giving the final summing up after the tournament. "My lady was there. She stuck 'em down the middle and onto the green, and she got up on her first putt and down in her second, but the real story is this:

Lucky Dice Caddy's Reason.

"I have in my left hand pants pocket a pair of dice. A lucky pair of dice. They throw nothin' but naturals. They never turned a pair of box cars in their life. Say, how could we lose? In addition to that, Miss Weltman, my lady, had a rabbit's foot that is almost as lucky as my dice, and her best friend as a lucky ring. Say, I want to know—how could we lose?"

But the gallery does not agree with Sure Shot. They insist a brand of golf a little better than the game shown by Mrs. Jacobs gave the tall, slender trophy to Miss Weltman. It cannot be said either played a game that would cause Miss Glenna Collett to lose any sleep, but despite the sixes and sevens on their cards they did well enough to keep the gallery interested.

No Razzberries at Final.

Mrs. Jacobs, in defeating Miss Florence Beebe Friday, was accorded a rousing razzberry when she missed putts. Yesterday Mrs. Jacobs, who hails from the south side, came to the links supported by fifty or sixty members, male and female, of her home club, who were there to root and not to jeer. The Lincoln park women had taken the jeerers of Friday by the neck and headed them out of the golf preserve, so the crowd of yesterday was enthusiastic, but well managed and polite, with never a jeer rising, not to mention razzberries.

Miss Weltman got off the fairway and lost the first hole. They fought back and forth, trading holes with ease on the first nine, but Miss Weltman finished that round 3 up.

Halve Twenty-eighth Hole.

On the next nine Miss Weltman's short but precise shots began to work her way to victory, and they finished the eighteen with Miss Weltman 7 up. It was the short iron work and the putting of the Lincoln park player that made the difference.

In the afternoon Mrs. Jacobs won the first hole with a 6, when Miss Weltman took three putts. The Lincoln park player took the second hole and they halved the next three. Mrs. Jacobs missed putts on sixth and lost the hole. The next two were halved, and Miss Weltman won the ninth after Mrs. Jacobs' putter had failed again. That put Miss Weltman dormie 9.

The twenty-eighth hole was that 582 yard first hole. Both got on this green in four shots, but Mrs. Jacobs laid a stymie for Miss Weltman, and they halved the hole in sevens, ending the match.

The consolation tournament was won by Miss Ruth Perner, Lincoln park 19 year old player.

TEX WILL TELL US TOMORROW IF WE GET JACK'S BOUT

Talks of Dempsey Fight in Fall.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Whether or not Chicago will get the bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney for the world's heavyweight championship will be known by 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

GENE TUNNEY.

Tex Rickard, who has the signed articles of champion and challenger, said this after a conference with Chicagoans on his arrival here yesterday.

According to Rickard half a dozen Chicago men are willing to underwrite the contest, even offering to build an arena if neither of the ball parks or stadium are available.

It has been suggested to Rickard that part of the proceeds go into the fund to care for widows and orphans of Chicago policemen killed in the line of duty, and Tex will urge the fight underwriters to agree to this.

Dempsey Will Fight!

Rickard asserts Dempsey really will fight and that the contest will take place sometime between Sept. 10 and 16. Tex added he has been in almost daily touch with the champion and Dempsey is extremely anxious to know the date and place of the bout. Tunney, according to Rickard, is just as anxious to resume training but will not need nearly as much work as the titleholder to get fit.

Rickard is enthusiastic over bringing the fight to Chicago. He said it will draw a larger gate than the one for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, which drew $1,600,000 from 80,000 boxing fans.

"It is my opinion the Dempsey-Tunney match will draw more money in Chicago than in either New York or Jersey City," Rickard said yesterday in his suite in the Congress hotel. "When Dempsey won the title from Willard at Toledo the gate was $552,000.

Seat Prices Would Be Low.

any one to attend. I think a scale of $3 to $50 would be about right.

"If the fight is held in Chicago, prices would be low enough to enable any one to attend. My present opinion is a scale of $3 to $50 would be about right. If an arena is built, plenty of the lowest priced seats will be provided, as there also will be if the match is held in a ball park or in the stadium. I will know by 6 o'clock tomorrow night whether the fight will be staged in Chicago or in the east."

Chicago has never been the scene of a heavyweight championship bout. In past years Chicago fans have gone to New Orleans, where Jim Corbett took the title away from John L. Sullivan. They journeyed into the far west for the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, and they went to Reno, Nev., where Jim Jeffries attempted a comeback, but was defeated by Jack Johnson. Some even went to Havana, Cuba, where Jess Willard took the title away from Johnson, and they also traveled to Toledo to see Dempsey wrest the crown from Willard. Some of the ardent fans journeyed to Shelby to see the fight with Tom Gibbons, and they had previously traveled to Benton Harbor, Mich., where Jack successfully defended the title against Billy Miske.

Confer Again Today.

If Chicago gets the match, Rickard is going to make sure there will be no opposition. This is one of the reasons for delaying the announcement. He does not anticipate any trouble from the boxing commission.

Rickard intends to have another conference with the committee of Chicagoans today. By tomorrow night all details are expected to be arranged so an announcement can be made that Chicago has been given the championship contest.

Just what attitude New York boxing fans and business men will take if the fight goes to Chicago is not known. It is said that New York wants the fight, but the New York boxing commission ruled that Dempsey must meet Harry Wills before Tunney. This decision has left Rickard free to do as he pleases.

Rickard was emphatic in saying his visit to Chicago is not being used as a club to force the New York commission to reverse its decision.

HUFF GAINING IN STRENGTH, DOCTORS SAY

LONDON, July 17.—[U. P.]—George Huff, athletic director of the University of Illinois, is steadily improving during his convalescence after an operation for appendicitis, July 1, authorities of the nursing home where he is being treated told the United Press today.

GIANTS SCORE 5 IN NINTH INNING; ERRORS GIVE BOSTON TWO WINS

Collins, Lyons, and Harris Play for Red Sox.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., July 17.—Eddie Collins and White Sox were in a most generous mood today and presented the downtrodden Boston Red Sox with two games. The first one was handed to them, 3 to 2, and the second 4 to 3. They were both close and exciting games, but it was an error by Collins that handed the enemy the first victory and bobbles by Ted Lyons and Spencer Harris that laid the second one on the silver platter.

SPENCER HARRIS.

On the other hand, the Red Hose played a sparkling defensive game and came through on numerous occasions with a punch when a punch meant business. They may be tail enders, but today the looked like world champions.

Both Teds Fall.

In achieving this double victory the Beantown warriors defeated the two aces of the White Sox pitching staff, Ted Blankenship in the opener and Ted Lyons in the aftermath. It wasn't that they were not pitching good ball, though each was outpitched by his rival. The tall Slim Harriss trimmed Blankenship in the first and Fred Wingfield took the measure of Lyons in the second.

However, Wingfield was knocked off the rubber in the ninth when Boss Collins called out the militia with the hope of pulling the game out of the fire. Ray Morehart stepped up and poled a single for Schalk and Bill Barrett slammed a double against the left fence for Lyons. Wingfield was removed and Ruffing stopped the rally.

As early as the second inning, Boston counted in the second game. Shaner opened with a double, went to third on Regan's bunt and came home on a single by Stokes. As round after round was fought, it looked as if that one run would be the winner, for nothing more happened until the seventh.

Lyons Makes Wild Throw.

Stokes began with a double and should have been out at third on Wingfield's bunt, but Lyons pegged high and both were safe. Then Flagstead singled to right, scoring Stokes and sending Wingfield to third, and when Harris booted the ball, Flagstead scooted on to second. Rigney hit a long fly to Mostil that let Wingfield score and Flagstead take third after the catch. Then Flagstead came home on Todt's sacrifice fly.

Right after that the White Sox became vicious. In the eighth Boss Eddie tripled and scored when Falk tripled. Falk came home on an infield out, but that attack ended there, and the ninth inning rally didn't last long enough.

The Collins' men got off in front in the first game when three hits produced a run in the first inning. After one was out, Hunnefield slapped safely to center and stole second. Boss Eddie brought him in with a single.

Shaner Doubles, Scores.

In the second the Red Sox tied it when Shaner doubled, moved to third on Regan's out and came in on Haney's sacrifice fly. It was the fifth when the Red Sox went into the lead. One was out when Gaston doubled. He came home when Rigney singled.

Harris and Crouse tied the score again in the seventh. After one was out the former singled and stole second, from where he romped in on Crouse's single. Todt was first up in the eighth and rolled to Collins, who fumbled. Jacobson bunted him to second and Shaner came through with a single that sent Todt home with winning run. The White Sox almost tied it in the ninth when Sheely opened with a two bagger. Morehart ran for him and dashed to third after Harris had flied to Shaner. Then with Kamm to do the bunting, the squeeze play was put on, but Kamm's bunt was caught on the fly by Todt and Morehart was doubled off third.

Master Minding Bows to Power of Base Hit.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

For eight rounds yesterday the master minds of Joe McCarthy and John McGraw provided a pleasing, even thrilling, spectacle for some 20,000 cash customers at the north side park. Then the base hit that is far more potent than mental gymnastics took hold of the situation in the ninth and the Giants slammed the ball without regard to strategy and shoved over a knockout bunch of five runs to flatten the Cubs in the opener of the series. The count was 8 to 3.

CHARLEY GRIMM.

Prior to the ninth the fight had been one of those tense affairs in which every move was a picture. Line drives had been picked off the fences, double plays had checked batting rallies, and Charley Grimm had provided the biggest kick of all when, with the Cubs trailing by 3 to 2 in the eighth, he lammed the ball into the right field seats for a homer with nobody on base. It was his fourth successive smash, but it proved a mere gesture, because once the count was knotted Fred Blake, the sheriff, blew up like a toy balloon and carried with him some of his pals, notably Riggs Stephenson and Bob Osborn, who tried to do a rescue act, but failed.

Giants Score 5 in Ninth.

The opening wedge of the Giants' juicy drive in the ninth was a triple by Jackson. It seemed to upset Blake and he walked Florence. Osborn was hustled out of the bull pen to pitch to ancient Jimmy Johnston and the latter caromed a fluke single off Freigau's glove, Jackson scoring. Then Stephenson muffed an ordinary fly off Mueller's bat and the sacks were jammed, with nobody out and with the 20,000 either moaning to the heavens or beating it hastily toward the exits.

Three on bases with none out was too happy a circumstance for Frisch to overlook, so he pelted a single to left and Florence and Johnston ran home. Stephenson booted the hit, so Frisch moved to second and Mueller to third. Both tallied when Young singled, whereupon the rally subsided and the Cubs went through the motions of getting nowhere in their half against the pitching of Jack Scott

Double Steal Scores.

The giants did their first bit of scoring in the third, but it was mainly because the Cubs erred. Jackson opened with a single and Florence strolled. Barnes fanned and Mueller forced Florence. A double steal was put on and Cooney's return throw to the plate was in ample time, but low. Hartnett gave the ball a fight as usual, so Jackson scored and Cooney was given an error he didn't deserve. Then Frisch singled Mueller across the counter.

The Cubs treated Barnes to five hits in the first three innings and couldn't get anywhere. In the fourth they managed three more blows and this tied things up at two apiece. This was brought about by doubles by Grimm and Hartnett and a single by Blake.

From the third to the end of the sixth Blake, with tight fielding behind him, went along steadily. Then that Jackson fellow, who started the trouble in the third and was destined to start it in the ninth, opened the seventh with a single. Florence put him on third with a two bagger and a fly ball by Mueller scored him This was all, except for Grimm's tying smash off Greenfield in the eighth and that bombastic ninth.

Hartz Wins Race with 123 Mile Speed

Amatol, N. J., July 17.—(AP)—Harry Hartz, Romona, Cal., made a field day of the sesquicentennial motor races on the speedway here today, winning the 120 mile feature event and the opening 60 mile dash.

His time in the longer race was 58:20:50, an average of 123.41 miles an hour. The time was said by officials to be a record for motors of 91 cubic inches displacement.

Fred Comer was second in the main event; Norman Batten, third; Cliff Woodbury, fourth; Phil Shafer, fifth.

Hartz' time for the 60 mile dash was 27:58:85, an average of 128.66 miles an hour.

Bennet Hill, New York, was second and Eddie Hearne, Chicago veteran, third.

The second 60-miler was won by Norman Batten in 29:48:75, with Frank Elliott second and Ben Jones third. Batten averaged 120.75 miles an hour.

Fred Comer of Los Angeles piloted the winning car in the third dash in 28:51:58, an average of 125.74 miles an hour. Dr. W. H. Shattuck was

In a morning trial De Palma, in a car having 122 cubic inches displacement, set an unofficial record of 151 miles an hour.

Notes of the Sox

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOSTON, Mass., July 17.—The White Sox have nothing to do except rest tomorrow and will resume battle with the Red Hosed men on Monday.

Tommy Thomas is slated for slab duty in the Monday game, and Red Faber should be fit to handle the final combat here Tuesday.

Boston fans are a bit disappointed in the Red Sox this year, but have renewed their intesest somewhat since the team began playing better ball during the last few weeks. There was a crowd today for the bargain show, which numbered almost 15,000.

Local fans were generous with applause for Hunnefield the first time he came to bat. He grew up in the suburbs of this city and began his baseball career on local sand lots.

Whispering Bill Barrett is staying at his home in Cambridge while the White Sox are playing here, and his pal, Johnny Mostil, is expecting to have his fill tomorrow of home fried chicken.

Flagstead made a whale of a catch of Hunnefield's drive in the ninth of the second game or the White Sox might have won. It was meant for a triple to right center, but Flagstead snared it after a great run.

Bib Falk was leading the league in batting before the double header began, but he had a bad day, getting only one blow in eight times up.

Notes of the Cubs

THE second game of the Giants-Cubs will be staged on the north side this afternoon. Hugh McQuillan is McGraw's likely hurler and it probably will be Root or Kaufmann for the Cubs.

One thing the Cubs have all themselves is double plays. They made three yesterday and are leading the league with a total of 101 for the season. This makes Cooney and Adams look good.

Stephenson singled in the second and tried to make third on a hit by Grimm but Young's throw nailed him. In making the play Lindstrom was spiked on the left foot by Stephenson, but the injury was patched up and he continued to work.

Tolson appeared as a hitter for Osborn with one out in the ninth. He singled and Beck, just back from the Milwaukee club, ran for him. Then Adams beat out a hit to Frisch, but the next two could do nothing of note so the show ended.

Both Mueller and Meusel made catches that saved Barnes some trouble. In the first inning, with Freigau on first, Mueller crashed against the bleacher screen in center and made a glove handed stab of Wilson's drive. Hack lost another hit in the fifth when Muesel raced to the brick wall and flagged the ball.

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS WIN.

Hornblower & Weeks' baseball team won its second game in the Brokers' league by defeating Thomson & McKinnon, 7 to 1.

Washington Park Racing Notes

AMONG the notables in yesterday's big crowd was United States Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who viewed the races from a grand stand box, the guest of Herbert G. Shimp, owner of the International stable.

Charley Graffagni of New Orleans claimed Escolane out of the sixth race.

W. M. Wright, the Harry Payne Whitney of the trotting horse game, was a Washington Park visitor yesterday and rumors have it that he is about to engage extensively in thoroughbred racing.

The stables of Pete Coyne, Harnes Brothers and R. S. Clarke will arrive from Latonia early this week.

A ton of money was sunk in Chicago yesterday when Don Diego failed to account for the Homewood stakes. But it isn't the first time the Keene Brothers have failed to deliver for Chicago backers.

The Illinois Central race trains as usual on a big day were running off schedule. The last race special arrived at the track after the second race was run. Race fans were packed into the trains like so many sardines in a box.

Eckersall's Gossip of the Boxers

ALL fighters scheduled to appear at Jim Mullen's show at the White Sox park next Saturday afternoon must submit to preliminary physical examinations tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. This is a commission rule, and Dr. John P. O'Connell has been appointed to subject the fighters to the required examinations.

Johnny Coulon, former world's bantamweight champion, who will conduct a show at White City on July 26, has signed Pal Moore to meet Tiger Jack Burns in the main event. Two six-round bouts and three four-round encounters will complete the card.

All fighters who will appear at Kid Howard's show in his gymnasium, 62 West Madison street, Tuesday night are in active training at the Arcade. Bill Hall and Haaken Hansen, local welterweights, meet in the main event to be supported by thirty rounds of boxing between boxers of known local ability.

Tom Jones, manager of Johnny Adams, the coast lightweight, who meets Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D., in one of the ten-round bouts at the Sox park next Saturday, has received an offer from New York for Adams to meet Phil McGraw Aug. 5. If terms are satisfactory, Jones will take the match. Adams also is wanted on the coast, but Jones is anxious to stay in the middle west and east if he can find enough work for his fighter.

Napoleon Dorval, the coast heavyweight, under the management of Jack Kearns, and Jim Savage, the west side heavy, under Jack O'Keefe's management, will meet at one of Jim Mullen's future shows. The bout may be put on as a semi-windup to the Mickey Walker-Shuffle Callahan bout, to be held in September.

Mique Malloy, local promoter, expects to arrange his affairs satisfactorily with the boxing commission Tuesday, the next regular meeting day of the commission. Mique wants to run a show at his park, 74th and Aberdeen streets, on Aug. 2.

Bud Taylor, Wolcott Langford, Spug Myers, Billy Bortfield, and Johnny Adams, fighters who appear on Saturday's show at the Sox park, engaged in strenuous workouts at Mullen's. Jack McVey, of New York, who meets Langford, will be here today and Tommy Ryan, of McKeesport, Pa., Taylor's opponent, is due to arrive tomorrow morning.

Oakbrook and St. Louis Polo Teams Victors

Oakbrook polo team defeated the Crusaders 19 to 7 yesterday in the first game of the elimination tournament for the Central Circuit championship at the Onwentsia club, Lake Forest. In the second contest of the day St. Louis beat the North Shore quartet, 10 to 6.

The next game will be played Monday, when the Onwentsia team lead by Capt. John Borden will tackle St. Louis in the semi-finals. Crusaders will hook up with North Shore in a consolation contest after the semi-final game.

Oakbrook Easy Winners.

Oakbrook had little trouble beating Crusaders, although they gave them three goals handicap. Crusaders have not played together much as Capt. Reynolds only recently returned from Europe and consequently the team was comparatively easy prey for the Oakbrook team. The winners scored eleven goals in the first half while the Crusaders were unable to count. In the last half, however, Reynolds' team got going better and scored four goals to Oakbrooks eight. Lineup:

OAKBROOK [19].		CRUSADERS [7].
Wetmore	No. 1	Simpson
Crites	No. 2	Strotz
Crawford	No. 3	Bering
Butler	No. 4	Reynolds

Goals—Crites, 8; Wetmore, 7; Crawford, 4; Reynolds; Strotz, 2. Goals from handicap—Crusaders, 3. Umpire—Borden. Referee—Balding.

St. Louis Has Hard Fight.

The contest between St. Louis and North Shore was much more fiercely fought, the score standing 3 to 2 in favor of St. Louis at the end of the third period. Then North Shore fell to pieces and the lads from Missouri slammed in four straight goals. That was the finish for North Shore. Lineup:

ST. LOUIS	Position.	NORTH SHORE [6].
Gardner	No. 1	Grady, Schuh, Mellen
Wallace	No. 2	Barger
Wight	No. 3	Lorber
Niedringhaus	No. 4	Schultz

Goals—Wallace, 3; Gardner, 3; Wight, 3; Niedringhaus, 1; Lorber, 3; Grady, Schuh, Barges. Umpire—Borden. Referee—Balding.

The tournament is open to the public.

Turf Revival Creates Race Center Here

BY FRENCH LANE.

Thoroughbred racing has come back to the Chicago district on a big scale. And chiefs of the turf are beginning to wonder what effect it will have on future meetings at long established racing centers in America.

Will Kentucky, Maryland, New York or Canada suffer the most as a result of the revival in a city which once held the topmost place in American racing affairs?

This question is frequently heard these days with turf leaders from both the east and the west in Chicago watching developments.

Race Conditions Unsettled.

From late May to early October is the way this year's Chicago season shapes up, but conditions were so uncertain until it actually got under way none of the other tracks suffered the loss of racing timber or followers of the sport.

But if a similar season is carried out next year, Chicago may not only cut in on New York, Kentucky, Maryland and Canada, but actually become the leading racing center in the country.

It may hurt Maryland and Kentucky by keeping stake and handicap stars engaged which ordinarily would be filling engagements at these tracks during the late spring and early fall racing.

New York Tracks to Suffer.

It will cut into New York's patronage because the system of wagering adopted in Chicago will make it possible for Chicago tracks to offer more and richer stakes than the oral system around the Metropolitan circuit will justify.

It will make big inroads into the Canadian turf because numerous big tracks there are already suffering from heavy taxes imposed by the government. Several have been taxed so much they have announced there will be no meetings this fall. This will make it possible for Chicago to draw all the horses ordinarily engaged there.

There are now four tracks in the Chicago district, Lincoln Fields, Washington Park, Hawthorne and Aurora. Another season will find all of them running, it is believed. And if the higher courts find that the certificate mutuel form of wagering is within the law, or the legislature next winter writes a pari-mutuel racing bill into the statutes, there may be one or two other new tracks come into the Chicago circuit.

Sir Roch Wins Free for All Circuit Pace

Toledo, July 17.—(AP)—Sir Roch, driven by George Loomis, paced the fastest heat of the year in winning the third heat and the free-for-all pace here this afternoon.

Anna Bradford's Girl and the Loomis gelding, after each had won a heat, settled down to a spectacular speed duel in the final mile. Sir Roch led most of the way, turning the quarter in 30 seconds, the half in one minute, the three-quarters in 1:30, winning by half a length in 2:01 in a furious driving finish.

J. L. Dodge, Lexington trainer, uncovered a promising filly by Peter Volo, which won the Steadman, annual two year old fixture in straight heats. Grey Worthy, veteran trotter and slightly lame, showed speed in the open trot, winning in straight heats.

The exodus of horses and horsemen for Kalamazoo and the east started before nightfall.

MEETS PAL MOORE.

Muscatine, Ia., July 17.—[Special.]—Frankie Jummati of Chicago has signed to meet Pal Moore of Memphis, Tenn., in a 15 round bout in Muscatine, July 26.

BUD TAYLOR EYES BOUT WITH RYAN AS STEP TO TITLE

Bantams Mix in Chicago Ring Saturday.

Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., known for the last two years as the uncrowned king of the bantamweight division, will meet Tommy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., in the principal bout of the boxing show to be staged by Jim Mullen in Chicago Saturday afternoon. It will be the second legalized boxing show held in the state of Illinois in twenty-five years.

Boxing fans in the middle west have seen Taylor in action on several occasions and they are almost a unit in stating he is about the best in the 118 pound division. He has been ready and willing to meet such champions as Johnny Buff, Joe Lynch and Charlie Phil Rosenberg, but for reasons best known to the title holders he has never achieved his ambitions.

In meeting Ryan, who gave him a hard battle at Louisville on the night before the Kentucky Derby this year, Taylor hopes to show the world he is entitled to the match with Rosenberg.

In practically every appearance Taylor has given the fans their money's worth. The little Hoosier does not know how to pull punches. He does not know how to coast. When the bell rings fighting is his business and his one thought is the man in front of him. He takes chances. He will take a punch to land one and he seldom retreats, no matter how closely he is forced. He likes to mingle in the rallies and can hit with either hand.

One of the supporting bouts on the Taylor-Ryan card will be a ten rounder between Johnny Adams of California and Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D.

Cuban Flyweight Champ Fights Draw with Gill

New York, July 17.—(AP)—Black Bill, Cuban flyweight champion, fought six rounds to a draw with Micky Gill of San Francisco in the feature bout at the Commonwealth A. C. here tonight.

Chicago Host to Masters of Chess Aug. 21

Chicago will be host to more than a score of both nationally and internationally known chess masters, as well as hundreds of other players, when the Western Chess association opens its twenty-seventh annual convention at the Hotel La Salle, Aug. 21.

Among those who already have accepted invitations to attend the convention and to participate in the national and sectional tournaments, according to Samuel D. Factor, secretary-treasury of the organization, are the following:

Frank J. Marshall, United States champion; Edward Lasker, former western champion; Samuel D. Factor, former western champion; Abraham Kupchick, present western champion; Samuel Resgevsky, "boy wonder"; Geza Maroczy, Hungarian champion; Carlos Torre, Mexican champion; A. J. Frick, Pacific coast champion; Jackson Schowalter, former United States champion; Charles Jaffo, N. W. Banks, and Lewis J. Isaacs.

The convention, which will last through Sept. 2, is expected to draw a large attendance from the middle west as well as from other sections of the country.

In addition to the title of western champion, the winner of the tournament will receive a substantial prize. Various prizes will also be given to the masters who participate in the national tournament.

PHIL ROSENBERG SIGNS TO MEET MIDGET SMITH

Cleveland, O., July 17.—(AP)—Charley [Phil] Rosenberg, bantamweight champion, will appear on an all-star card at Taylor bowl July 28. He is slated to box Midget Smith, Chicago, ten rounds to a decision, but his title will not be in danger as the men will weigh in above the bantamweight limit.

In other ten round bouts Eddie Shea, Chicago, meets Johnny Leonard of Allentown, Pa., and K. O. Phil Kaplan takes on Larry Estridge, former middleweight Negro champion.

PIRATES GET CATCHER.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 17.—(AP)—The first new player obtained by the Pittsburgh [National league] Baseball club for the 1927 season is Ike Danning, catcher, of Idaho Falls, in the Idaho-Utah league. Danning

32 AUTO PILOTS RACE TODAY AT CROWN POINT

4 Contests on Program; Start at 2:30.

Thirty-two of the best race drivers in the middle west will compete in the auto race meet at Crown Point today under the auspices of the American Legion. Chicago leads in number of entries with seventeen; Indianapolis has six; Detroit three; and Springfield, Joliet, Milwaukee, Frankfort, Ind.; St. Charles, Ill.; and Marengo, Ia., one each.

Four races are on the program which will start at 2:30 o'clock.

A feature of the meet will undoubtedly be the battle between Chicago and Indianapolis drivers. Rivalry has existed between pilots of these cities since the start of the current season with the Hoosiers usually coming out on top.

The Indianapolis faction, although small in numbers, is powerful in quality. Heading the invasion will be Dutch Baumann, sensation of local tracks this season. Dutch will be accompanied by Wilbur Shaw, Jimmy Copple, Louis Schneider, Bill Cummings, and Ray Wallace.

Chicago will rely on Sonny Talmont, Harry Nichols, and Ralph Eckstrom among others to cop top honors.

HAWTHORNE OPENS AUG. 1

The opening meet of the automobile racing season at the Hawthorne race track will be staged Aug. 1. Three additional meets are planned, the last to be held late in September. All races will be held under the auspices of the International Motor Contest association and the feature events will carry national circuit points awarded by that organization.

In preparation for the invasion of the gasoline jockeys and their steel steeds the outer fence of the track on both turns has been removed and treatments of the surface of the track with calcium chloride solutions will begin tomorrow and continue until dust has been eliminated.

Expect two things from your Ford lubrication. Smooth starting alone isn't enough.

The smoother starting and stopping which follow the use of today's Mobiloil "E" in your Ford engine result from the ability of this oil to keep the transmission bands soft and pliable. The band surfaces do not become hardened and glazed. Thus jerky action in starting and stopping is ended.

Even more important: The life of the bands is greatly increased. Thus replacement cost is lowered—a very substantial saving.

You should get the greatest obtainable freedom from carbon, too—because—

Only such an oil will give you quiet operation, fullness of power, free valve action, clean spark plugs and general smooth running.

To combine this freedom from carbon with freedom from glazed bands in Ford lubrication has taken years of study on the part of the Mobiloil engineers and chemists.

In this combined effect, we sincerely believe that the Mobiloil "E" of today stands alone.

An economical demonstration

It will cost you only a little over a dollar to fill your Ford crankcase with the new Mobiloil "E." Any Mobiloil dealer will be glad to assist you in discovering for yourself the new smoothness of operation that follows the use of this unique lubricating oil in your Ford car.

DELANEY VICTORY MAY SEND PAUL TO HEAVYWEIGHTS

But Ex-Champion Wants Return Bout.

JACK DELANEY.

New York, July 17.—[Special.]—When he took the world's light heavyweight title from Paul Berlenbach at Ebbetts field Friday night in fifteen rounds, Jack Delaney sent the Astoria assassin into the heavyweight division.

Dan Hickey, experienced manager of the former champion, whose skill as a handler of athletes was the medium for the transposition from the obscure station of a wrestler to the fistic heights for Berlenbach, declared today that the beaten title holder now will devote his attention to the heavyweight class And in this division Hickey expressed confidence Berlenbach will be an even greater success than he was as a light heavyweight.

Paul Seeks Return Bout.

There is a conflict between manager and boxer on this important detail, but the decision of the manager undoubtedly will obtain. Berlenbach himself admitting that he was beaten, but smarting under the loss of his title nevertheless, wants another chance at his conqueror, Delaney He expressed this desire immediately after the fight and again today at his home and among his friends as he discouraged expressions of condolence over the result of the Ebbets field battle.

Delaney to Take Rest.

Delaney went back to Bridgeport, Conn., today with the championship, a purse of $100,000, and a sprained left thumb. He has called off all engagements for a month, postponing his proposed matches with Francois Charles, European light heavyweight champion, at Ebbets field Wednesday night until August.

Table of Points

Columbus	52	Eckhart	9
Douglas	27	Dvorak	4
Union	25½	Franklin	3
Holstein	22½

Three records fell yesterday in the nineteenth annual junior west parks track and field championships at Eckhart park. By amassing 52 points, Columbus Park captured first place. Douglas Park was second with 27, and Union Park third with 25½.

The records broken were in the high jump, shotput, and the pole vault. S. Casian of Holstein Park won the shotput, heaving the ball 48 feet 5½ inches. In the running high jump C. McEllroy of Union Park cleared the bar at 6 feet even, and easily took first place. E. Kranczynski lifted himself 10 feet 3 inches in capturing the pole vault. McEllroy bettered the old high jump mark by five inches; Casian added a half inch to the former shotput record, while Kranczynski raised the old pole vault figures 9 inches. Summaries:

Calypso Wins Yacht Race for R Class Boats

Order of Finish

Yacht.	Class R.	Time.
Calypso		2:11:10
Sari		2:12:04
Fantome		2:13:25
Nancy		2:14:41
Ariel		2:14:57
Colleen		2:22:29
Yank		2:23:44
*Mitzi.
	Pups.
Naiad		1:32:15
Alert		1:35:03
Arab		1:37:06
*Minnow.

*Failed to finish.

Aided by strong northeasterly winds, Calypso, owned by Commodore Hollis Potter, yesterday won the Chicago Yacht club's race for R boats over the twelve nautical mile course off Belmont harbor.

Edward Kirkeby's Sari finished second only fifty-four seconds behind the victor, while Fantome, owned by Bill Faurot and piloted by Keith Previer, raced into third position in 2:13:25. Sam Dauchy's Nancy copped fourth place, Ariel finished fifth, Colleen sixth, and Yank seventh. For some unknown reason Mitzi dropped out of the race on the second leg.

Nancy Takes Lead.

The boats remained on even terms throughout most of the sail, the winds favoring each alike. Calypso was first over the line, but was closely followed by Fantome, Yank and Colleen.. When the yachts reached the three mile buoy and were making the turn which would send them on the second leg of their voyage Nancy shot into the lead and for a short time held a slight advantage.

Calypso, however, was coming up to the north and seemed to pick up speed as it took a swing to the south on the seventh mile. While Ariel was coming up from fourth to second place Nancy fell back and relinquished the leadership to Yank, which almost immediately gave way to Calypso. The latter spurted to the front and held the lead to the finish.

Naiad Wins Pup Class.

After that it was more of a race for place positions, even though the racers were still grouped, for the winner was heading to the finish line and was receiving the full value of the winds.

Naiad continued to display its championship makeup by marking up another triumph in the pup event, raced over a six nautical mile course, by beating out such racers as Alert, owned by Fred Porter, Arab and Minnow. Naiad sailed over the course in the good time of 1:32:15.

Japan Wants Weissmuller for Swimming Exhibition

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONOLULU, July 17.—Nippu Jiji, a local Japanese newspaper, says the Tokio Hochi, and the Japanese Swimming association are negotiating with the Illinois Athletic club of Chicago to bring Johnny Weismuller to Japan at the same time the ten Hawaiian swimmers visit there in September.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question The Tribune Ice Fund was awarded $5.

The Question.

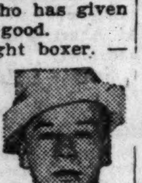
Which are you more interested in, the veteran ball player or the rookie?

Where Asked.

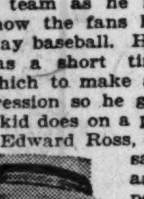
Cubs' ball park.

The Answers.

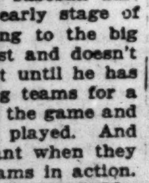
Mrs. E. H. Siepicka, 3705 North Ridgeway avenue, cashier.—I am more interested in the rookie player because he still has a name to make for himself in baseball and therefore trys all the harder to make a deep impression on the fans and his manager who has given him the chance to make good.



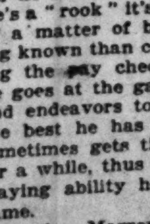
Ernie Peters, lightweight boxer.—The rookie player, of course. He always puts forth his greatest effort when he first joins a team as he has to show the fans he can play baseball. He only has a short time in which to make an impression so he goes at the game like a kid does on a prairie diamond.



Edward Ross, 919 Glengyle avenue, salesman.—The veteran player, for he is experienced and knows how to play the game. Although the rookie usually plays a good brand of baseball during the early stage of his coming to the big circuit, he is a little lost and doesn't know what it's all about until he has been with one of the big teams for a while. The "vet" knows the game and plays it as it should be played. And that's what the fans want when they travel out to see the teams in action.



Miss A. P. Collignon, 1658 North Mozart street, home girl.—The rookie. He shows more fighting spirit and plays the game for all he is worth. When he's a "rook" it's more of a matter of becoming known than collecting the pay check, so he goes at the game in the real spirit and endeavors to give the spectators the best he has in him. A veteran sometimes gets tired and slows down for a while, thus failing to put all the playing ability he possesses into the game.



Charley Marrow, 2457 Leland avenue, automotive engineer.—The youngster is always more ambitious than the veteran player. The "vet" has made a name for himself and the fans know him and are familiar with what he is capable of doing. It's not that way with the newcomer, who has to show the fans that he can play ball and play well, so, therefore, he's out to become an expert in his chosen line of endeavor and will play the best brand of ball he knows. Yes, the rookie is my selection.

BEUTNER WINS IN PLAYGROUND TRACK GAMES

Commercial Club First in Junior Events.

Table of Points

JUNIOR.		INTERMEDIATE.
Commercial club	22	Beutner	37
Wrightwood	9	Adams	2½
Beutner	7	Wrightwood	6½

Sarazen and Smith Tie for Golf Crown

Garden City, N. J., July 17.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen of Fresh Meadow, defending champion, and Macdonald Smith of Lakeville, western and Long Island open titleholder, finished in a tie for first honors with a total of 286 strokes at the end of 72 holes in the metropolitan open golf championship today at the Salisbury Country club. They will play off the tie in 18 holes at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Sarazen, after leading the field by three strokes at the end of the third round, had a putting slump in the afternoon, going out in 37 and coming home in 38 for a 75. Smith, on the other hand, was out in 37 and back in 35 for a 72, sinking a 9 foot putt on the last green for a 4 to tie Sarazen.

Johnny Farrell of Quaker Ridge finished third with 288 and William Mehlhorn of Chicago fourth with 289. Behind them came Bobby Cruickshank, Progress, 290; William Klein, Wheatley Hills, 290; Joe Turnesa, Fairview, 293; Jim Barnes, Rockwood Hall, 203; Tom Armour, Congressional, 295; Tom Harmon Jr., Hudson River, 297.

Opal Bicycle Derby Draws Entry of 150

More than 150 bicycle riders will start in the Opal A. A. bicycle Derby at 9 o'clock this morning in Douglas Park, 16th street and California avenues, according to the announcement of Robert J. Little and George Herrman, directors of the races.

The feature event is the ten mile handicap race. There will be races in all classes. The team scoring the most points will be awarded the Anton J. Cermak cup, and the Charles V. Barrett trophy goes to the winner of the class A two mile race. The trophy offered by the Cycle Trades of America is the award of the feature race, while two gold watches are time prizes offered the riders in this event. Medals and bicycle accessories are listed as prizes in the other events.

Arthur Gardiner will referee the races, and Julian T. Fitzgerald is the starter. Lieut. Roger F. Shanahan of the west parks police will be marshal of the course.

CHICAGO SOCCER CLUBS TO FORM 4 TEAM CIRCUIT

The big teams of the local soccer game have terminated their season but the junior teams are still playing.

This afternoon at De Paul field, Sheffield and Webster avenues, the Ravenswood United will meet the Swedish-Americans in the final of the Immigrant State bank cup competition.

The Bricklayers, Sparta, Thistles and Canadian club have withdrawn from the major league of Chicago and are going to form a four team circuit of their own. Plans will be completed soon.

CHICAGOANS WIN ALL WISCONSIN TENNIS TITLES

Milwaukee, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—Chicagoans won in the finals of the Wisconsin state open tennis tournament here today in both the singles and doubles. Emmett Pare, University of Illinois star, defeated his doubles partner, George O'Connell, also of Chicago, in the singles championship, 6—3, 6—1, 6—1, and Pare and O'Connell annexed the doubles championship in a hard fought win over Charles Barnett and John Rolley, Chicago, 4—6 6—4, 6—0, 1—6, 6—1.

Marian Leighton, Chicago, is the women's champion, defeating Mrs. Ruth Riese Saginaw, Mich., 6—1, 6—2. Miss Leighton and Mrs Reise won the ladies' doubles from Miss Kommenda, Chicago, and Virginia Watson, Milwaukee, 6—3, 7—5.

SENATORS TRADE OGDEN, PALMERO FOR KID PITCHER

Memphis, Tenn., July 17.—[Special.]—Alvin Crowder, young right handed pitcher who has won 17 games and lost 3 this season, was tonight traded by Birmingham to the Washington club. The Birmingham club will get Emilio Palmero, the Cuban left hander, and Curly Ogden.

The deal was closed here tonight after a lengthy conference between Clark Griffith of the Senators and W. D. Smith, president, and Johnny Dobbs, manager of the Barons. It was announced no cash was involved.

Argentine Polo Team Wins in England, 9-8

LONDON, July 17.—(AP)—The El Gordo polo team of Argentina today captured the king's coronation cup in the final of the Ranelagh club tournament, defeating the Seventeenth and Twenty-first lancers, 9 to 8.

TILDEN DEFEATS LOTT IN 5 SETS FOR NET TITLE

Cincinnati, O., July 17.—(AP)—William Tilden II. of Philadelphia defeated George Lott of Chicago in the tennis singles of the tri-state tournament today, winning a five set battle, 4—6, 6—3, 7—9, 6—4, 6—3.

Lott held two legs of the silver trophy, and, had he won the match, would have retained it permanently. Lott drew first blood and slipped through for the next two games. Tilden's game improved in the fourth set, and he won by sharp placements. From then on he was master, although Lott put up a stubborn battle.

Grange Leaves Movie Colony for Home Today

Hollywood, Cal., July 17.—(AP)—Harold Grange, football celebrity and erstwhile movie star, will leave Hollywood tomorrow for Wheaton, Ill., his home.

MISS LEIGHTON, PARE WIN BADGER TENNIS CROWNS

Milwaukee, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—Emmet Pare of Chicago won the Wisconsin open tennis championship here this afternoon by defeating George O'Connell, also of Chicago, in straights, 6—3; 6—2; 6—1. Pare displayed a flashy and consistent game, while O'Connell was unusually erratic, double faulting several times.

Miss Marion Leighton, also of Chicago, won the women's championship for the second consecutive year by defeating Mrs. Ruth Riese of Saginaw, Mich., in straight sets, 6—1; 6—2.

Fellman, Chicagoan, Loses in Memphis Tennis Meet

Memphis, Tenn., July 17.—[Special.]—C. Fellman of Chicago was eliminated in the opening round of the annual Tri-State tennis tournament here today by Early Maxwell, local player. The scores were 6—2 and 7—5.

FAR WESTERNERS WIN GOLF TEAM MATCH, 9 TO 7

White Bear Lake, Minn., July 17.—(AP)—By finishing all square in the last doubles match of the day Pacific northwest golfing stars defeated the mid-west group, 9 points to 7, in the intersectional play today over the White Bear yacht course.

Eight straight singles victories for eight points and the one point scored in the final doubles match gave the far west men their points.

It was a stirring finish, as the Pacific coast men had taken a commanding lead by their singles victories and needed only one doubles win to give them the honors by a decisive margin.

Victories by 4 and 3, 4 and 3, and 5 and 4 attended the midwest group in the three doubles matches, and the decision in the intersectional rivalry hung on the match in which Dr. O. F. Willing and Frank Dolp, Portland, opposed Russell Martin, Chicago, and Donald Carrick of Toronto.

15,094 MILES IN 30 DAYS!

18.38 MILES PER GALLON—NO REPAIRS
NO REPLACEMENTS—3 PUNCTURES

Here's one of the greatest road records ever made by an automobile — 15,094 miles in 30 days — 14 days of fair weather and 16 days of rain. ¶ This unprecedented performance has been established by Mr. John Karel, Automotive Editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel. Mr. Karel drove a stock car, a Diana Advanced Straight Eight Roadster, averaging 503 miles a day for 30 days through Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, where every conceivable condition of road was encountered. ¶ A total of 821 gallons of gasoline was consumed on the tour, the average being 18.38 miles per gallon. No oil was added to the engine throughout the run. The crankcase lubricating oil was changed 27 times, averaging 559 miles to each change. No mechanical repairs or replacements of any kind. There were three punctures. A speed of 50 miles an hour was generally maintained, regardless of the highway or weather condition. Traffic ordinances were observed. The actual running time was 337 hours — a great record by a great automobile, the Diana Eight for 1927.

The Straight Eight is the most perfect motor the automobile industry has produced to date. If you are contemplating the purchase of a new car, if you want the very ultimate in power, flexibility, smoothness and comfort, then try out some make of Straight Eight—there are 27 different makes to choose from.

There are thousands of Dianas in service. You see them everywhere, from Maine to California, from Quebec to New Orleans. So hail the next Diana driver you meet, ask him his frank opinion of this amazing car. Better, see the Diana Dealer where you live —take a friend of mechanical turn with you. If you have faith in your friend's opinion, so have we.

MATTACK LEADS WESTERN LEAGUE WITH .400 MARK

Springfield, Mo., July 17.—[Special.]—Chick Mattick, former Chicago White Sox star and now manager of the Okmulgee club, continues to lead Western association batters, although he is nearing the 45 age mark, according to the official averages released tonight. The figures show Mattick batting .400.

Reider, Springfield outfielder, who was sold to the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday, continues to set the home run pace with 22. Selph, Fort Smith second baseman, who is owned by the St. Louis Cardinals, is leading in runs scored with 110 and also in total hits with 139. Shoots, Springfield, has 38 stolen bases to lead the circuit.

I. A. C. Lacrosse Team to Play Monday on Lake Front

The lacrosse team of the Illinois A. C. will hold practice games on the lake front next Monday and Wednesday nights and will hold a meeting at the clubhouse following the first practice. All lacrosse players are invited to the games, at which a team will be chosen to play in connection with the policemen's benefit athletic exhibition.

LOCAL GOLFERS CROWD CLUB COURSES FOR DAY'S SPORT

THE chief competition of the day at Westward Ho was the four man team event and first prize went to H. S. Lloyd, A. H. Meyer, L. Riddiford, and J. M. Lee, who had a total net score of 284. Dr. J. B. Mason won the prize for the low net score on five selected holes. Tom Meade, 86—11—75, won the class A sweepstakes; O. Ziegler, 88—17—71, won in class B; W. C. Ross, 90—21—69, won in class C, and J. J. Maloney, 104—30—74, was the winner in class D.

There were five men tied for the blind bogey honors at Westmoreland. They were C. A. Bush, W. H. Muschlet, J. G. Schroeder, J. P. Wahlman, and J. C. Reynolds. The Fellowship trophy went to J. T. Montgomery, 86—18—68. The semi-finals in the Argyle cup tournament resulted as follows. F. C. Stoles Jr. defeated J. B. Wescott by default, and E. L. Essley defeated Z. F. Harstrom 1 up.

INDIAN HILL.

Old Man Par got an awful trimming in the match play against par event. Thirteen golfers did as good or better than his card. Leading the field was H. E. Poronto, 5 up. Then came G. D. Forrest, 4 up. Finishing next with three up were A. A. Beebee, Ralph Henhill, and L. E. Heart. C. D. Ballas and N. L. Hoyt, Jr., were one up, while the following finished even up: H. G. Badgelow, D. D. Fuller, H. PEERLESS shows remarkable gain

so far this year

THINK of it! A gain of 264% in six months. This shows the enviable position of Peerless in the industry.

Everywhere you'll find enthusiasm over Peerless cars—Peerless value—Peerless performance.

In Detroit, for instance—where the making of automobiles is the biggest industry—Peerless shows a gain of 371% so far this year. In Chicago 337%—Pittsburg 309%. Scores of other cities show similar gains.

This means that Peerless value is recognized for what it actually is—the greatest dollar-for-dollar value in the automobile field, —that Peerless is a sound, growing company with a glorious past and a future that's unlimited,

—that financially, Peerless is one of the most stable manufacturing concerns in America.

And the answer to the whole thing is "giving unprecedented value."

Think of buying a car like the Peerless Six-80 for as little as $1395.

Think of a car like the big, powerful, Peerless Six-72 for $1895—or the famous 90° V-type Eight-69 for $2995!

These are real values!

Try a Peerless before you buy. Learn for yourself just what Peerless value really is.

False Modesty

Is Condemning Thousands to Disability or Death

The regrettable tendency to regard "Social" Diseases more from a moral standpoint than from a medical one is condemning thousands of men and women to lifelong misery or an early death.

Too ashamed to confide their infection even to a physician, many sufferers fail to submit to treatment until their condition becomes so serious that a cure no longer is possible.

Others are impelled by false modesty to attempt to treat themselves, although it is impossible for a man to treat and cure himself without proper medical supervision.

Because thousands of cases thus go uncured, resulting eventually in disability or even death, the Public Health Institute has from its inception made the treatment of "Social" Diseases a strictly medical issue.

Though heartily in accord with any moral movement that will lessen the prevalence of these infections, the chief concern of the Public Health Institute is to bring the afflicted back to health with as little cost in money, time and discomfort as is possible.

No man or woman need feel ashamed to come to the Public Health Institute. In fact, many who come here have been infected innocently, through no act of misconduct on their part.

At the Public Health Institute there is no embarrassing questioning—no prying into your personal affairs. Everywhere an atmosphere of sympathetic understanding prevails. No one ever need know your identity, for at the Institute patients are known by number rather than by name.

Thus it is a great mistake to let false modesty stand between you and reliable medical treatment, especially in view of the destructive results which follow neglected "Social" Diseases.

Insanity, blindness, paralysis, epilepsy, heart disease, locomotor ataxia, apoplexy, still-born and idiotic children—these are only a few of the frightful consequences of uncured "Social" Diseases.

You can see, therefore, how disastrous it is to neglect a "Social" Disease, or to attempt to cure it yourself. If you know or suspect yourself to be infected, you should immediately consult your family physician or come to the Public Health Institute.

Open daily except Sunday from 10 A. M. to 8 P. M., the Institute is prepared to treat you during your lunch hour, on your way home from work, or in the evening.

Treatment is administered by experienced physicians at fees you can easily afford.

When reliable medical treatment may be procured so conveniently, privately and economically, why continue to let a false sense of shame bar you from health and happiness?

Book of Facts

Sent without charge in plain envelope

Much authentic and valuable information about "Social" Diseases and their dangers is contained in "The Door to Health and Happiness," a 34-page illustrated booklet of general interest. It clears up many misconceptions regarding the seriousness of these diseases, and should be read by every citizen who strives to be properly informed.

This booklet also describes the aims and accomplishments of the Public Health Institute, and by means of its scores of illustrations gives the reader an excellent conception of the Institute's splendid facilities for treating "Social" Diseases speedily, privately and economically.

A copy of this informative booklet will be sent in a plain envelope upon receipt of coupon.

Highway Nomads Pick Chicago for Summer Sojourn

"Tin Canners" Beating Back from Boom Country.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

THE flivver nomads are on the move again, but their courses are charted away from the old familiar summer haunts of the "tin canners" this year and toward the great population centers, where steady work, rather than commercial gold rushes, holds the promise of fall and winter livelihood.

This new movement, casual and disjointed as it is, has already been noted by outposts on the Chicago lines of travel. Managers of the myriad gasoline stations scattered along the main trails that converge in the city, forest preserve camp custodians, garage men and keepers outlying general stores all report that the movement of gasoline gypsies into Chicago has increased one hundred per cent over that noted last year, and that the majority of the wanderers hope to "land" something for the summer here.

Since the beginning of the great motor tourist era in the United States, "tin can" travel has been an integral part of highway traffic. In the early days, tourists adventuring over the hills and far away found at least one itinerent family, mounted in a wheezy, tattered car and dragging along all the pitiful accumulation of household equipment, including usually a "houn" dog or so, camped in every likely spot where gasoline travelers were wont to pitch their tents. They were found in the Colorado mountain camps, in Wisconsin woods clearings, in Minnesota lakes trails and along the arid plains of Kansas. Hundreds of the families moved with the harvest along the great sweep of the wheat belt, swinging from the early fields in southern Kansas through Nebraska and on west, then advancing with the ripening grain into the Dakotas and the far northwest.

Introduction of the tractor and motorized farm equipment throughout the wheat belt has cut this type of traveling employment to a minimum in the last five years and has practically closed the field to the migrating workers who travel by flivver. In some "bread basket" towns excess harvest labor, flocking to the market centers since 1920, has brought about the organization of summer gasoline charities among farmers and merchants, who find that it is cheaper to supply free gasoline and oil and keep the wanderers moving than to attempt to employ and care for them during the summer and fall.

Last year and in 1924 the big movement of the "tin canners" was southward into the lands of real estate booms and frantic construction work. Through southern Georgia, Florida, and the gulf coast, America's wandering population found rich fields and easy pickings, although hundreds of them were forced to "cadge" gasoline along the main roads of the middle west and central south on their way to the tropic Eldorado.

Last summer the wheat belt was practically cleared of this type of highway traveler, while every camp in Florida and along the main southern trails was filled with the old timers of the open road. Hundreds of them found steady work within easy walking distance of the Florida camps, good pay, and cheap living in the open. Many of them emassed small fortunes in the southern boom and graduated from the "tin can" class to settle in the south. Other hundreds gathered enough cash together to open roadside stands and build small homes before the peak of the boom was reached. The remainder joined the general exodus from the south last winter and, with the taste of steady wages and better living conditions, headed for the big cities.

It has taken some of the motor gypsies months to beat back across the Mason and Dixon line and to work out through the boom strip of west Florida, the gulf coast, and Texas into the midland trails again, but they are coming now from all directions, and much of the movement is centering here. Camps all along the Lincoln highway, Yellowstone trail, and National road are reported to be filled with traveling families, with the jacks of all trades who travel light and alone and usually lead the van into boom territories, questing always for the zones of high wages and rush work, and pulling out again when conditions settle back to normal.

Employment experts agree that the general run of this type of traveling worker is a valuable but uncertain asset to industry. He is usually of American descent, or at least the second generation of the immigrant, and his wide experience in various sections of the country makes him welcome in almost any sort of employment. He is not a steady worker, however. The urge of the open road keeps him on the move.

The average traveling family includes one or two young and active workers in addition to the old folks who trail along and tend to the making of camp, the cooking of meals, and the spreading of trail gossip. It is the duty of the younger members to pick up odd jobs along the way, keep the family larder filled, and chart the course of travel.

They are a cosmopolitan lot, but, according to numerous Chicago labor employers, they are welcome in Chicago where bulding construction is booming and there is room for the honest worker.

Government Funds to Complete U. S. Highways in 1931

THE appropriations authorized by the federal aid bill recently enacted are $75,000,000 annually for the fiscal years 1928 and 1929 for roads on the federal aid highway system and $7,500,000 annually for those years for roads in and/to the national forests. The bill continues federal participation on an undiminished scale up to June 30, 1929.

Approximately two-thirds of the 200,349 miles of highway on the federal aid system have been improved. According to the 1925 figures, the total cost to the government to improve one mile of highway averaged $9,850, or for practical purposes, $10,000. This means that durirg the fiscal years 1927, 1928 and 1929 an additional 22,500 miles of improved roads should be added to the system.

If the states continue to improve roads on the federal aid system at their own expense, as they have done in the past, they will, during that period, add another 30,000 miles so that at the close of the fiscal year 1929 the United States should have about 50,000 more miles of improved roads. At the most, it should not take more than five years to improve all of the roads on the system.

Good Going on Main Trails of Middle West

CONSIDERABLE rainfall during the week throughout northern Michigan, sections of central and southern Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri delayed traffic on secondary highways. Roads, however, are dry after a day or two of fair weather at this time of the year. Road oiling and construction work remains in progress in all states.

Only light rains were reported in the extreme southeastern states. All main highways and trails are in good condition throughout the southern states.

Eastern highways practically are all improved and in excellent condition. A few detours are reported around construction work. These are kept in fine condition.

Heavy rainfall is reported in Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming, and Texas. Unimproved roads were reported quite muddy, but in passable condition. These roads will be back in good condition after a day or two of fair weather.

Dirt roads around Springfield are now in good condition, except where freshly oiled. The Beardstown road where not paved is being oiled. This stretch of dirt is about 10 miles long, and will be sticky for the next few days. Also the Lincoln trail through Salisbury to Old Salem State park, near Petersburg, will be oiled through Sangamon county.

Other reports from the Chicago Motor club include:

Lincoln—All roads good; oiling of county roads is in progress. Inquiry should be made if desiring to avoid fresh oil.

Ill. 3—The stretch of pavement north of Rushville has been opened and the bad detour at this place has been eliminated. A detour of 4 miles has been established between Roseville and Monmouth on account of bridge construction.

Ill. 4—The pavement in Virden has been opened at the north end to within 4 blocks of the square, and on the curve on the south end of the city. The entire stretch of pavement through the city will probably be open within the next two weeks.

Ill. 7—A speed trap has been reported at Carbon Cliff, a small town 10 miles east of Rock Island.

Ill. 46—Pavement completed on 79th street from Archer avenue east to Cicero avenue; also Cicero avenue south from 79th street to 95th street is complete except short gap near 87th street. Not open, however, between 79th and 95th streets.

Ind. 20—Detour removed near New Harmony at bridge run around.

Ind. 21—Detour removed near Geneva at bridge run around.

Ind. 32—Detour marked at the intersection with Ind. 3 on account of bridge construction over Monon railroad.

Ind. 42 [Lincoln highway]—All newly paved and open from Valparaiso through Westville and La Porte to junction of the new Ind. 25 near Rolling Prairie. Using Ill. 42 and Ind. 43 to Gary: Ind. 8 to Merrillville; Ind. 2 to Valparaiso; Ind. 42 to junction of Ind. 25, then Ind. 25 to South Bend, gives another perfect road to South Bend. Though approximately 15 miles longer than by way of Michigan City the traffic is much lighter.

Ind. 44—Detour removed near Rossville at bridge run around.

All Wisconsin roads in good condition. Considerable construction work in progress; good detours have been provided on all main traveled highways. Main highways which have been recovered with gravel this summer are extremely dusty.

High Tax.

An automobile manufactured in Canada and costing $1,000 pays to the government in excise and sales taxes $100, while a car valued at $3,000 must pay in such taxes $390.

Raising Limit.

It may not be long before every state in the Union will advance the speed limit of highway touring beyond 35 miles an hour where the tourist is a competent motorist and the car is mechanically sound.

At present in Florida the highway traffic laws permit a maximum speed of 45 miles an hour. This speeds up traffic, and where the road is wide and in good shape and the driver knows what he is doing, the hazards are not appreciably increased.

Traveling at this rate, there is no need for one tourist to pass another who is keeping up to a maximum. Then, as is the case now, the slow driver will be the menace.

FEW PUMPS.

Gasoline pumps are practically unknown in England. The motorist's fuel, petrol, is supplied in two gallon cans.

Fisher's engineering experts—skilled beyond their calling by virtue of years of continuous research and experimentation with all types of body construction—unhesitatingly aver that none but Body by Fisher—exclusively used by General Motors for Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars—affords the essential virtues of safety, beauty and comfort which characterize every Fisher product. Quite logically the public knows that when any improvement which really gives an enhanced measure of safety, comfort and luxury is perfected, Fisher will be the first to present it just as Fisher has created and been the first to present every important improvement in body design and construction of the past decade.

Sales Battle and New Models Set Auto Season Ahead

Small Car Competition Enlivens the Slack Period.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., July 17.—[Special.]—With the second half of the year well under way, following a production in excess of two and a quarter million passenger cars and trucks during the first six months, automobile manufacturers have mapped out plans to launch an active sales campaign featuring light vehicles, particularly in the low priced car field.

With the usual annual easing up of production by several of the manufacturers, especially in the medium price field, for the taking of inventories, competition tightens. This is more apparent in the low price field, and indications are that it will continue to become more acute during the next few weeks as production in several plants shows a falling off. The introduction of new models earlier this year than ever before will surely advance the late summer and fall buying season, as well as shorten the annual summer let-down in activities.

Following the natural trend, prospective purchasers of automobiles are not rushing to market to buy the car of today, knowing that something new, bearing their favorite trademark, will be on the market tomorrow with almost positive assurances that the price tag will not be greater on account of any possible new features.

The remarkable gait at which the automobile industry stepped along in June, when it equaled, if not surpassed, the total output for the corresponding month of 1925, is an indication of its healthy condition. This, too, in spite of the fact that several companies were closed at least partially during that month as a result of annual inventories and in preparation for the showing of new models. Companies which continued operation without interruption throughout the month reported the greatest June production in their respective histories.

Leading manufacturers throughout the country have announced sharp reductions in the prices of automobile tires, the cuts ranging from 10 to 15 per cent, and in most cases bring the retail cost back to the prices which prevailed before the general price boost last year.

In a recent message to stockholders, Walter P. Chrysler announced that the company is bringing out a new four cylinder car. This will complete the corporation's building program, which, with models now in the market, provides a car to meet the requirements of each of the four groups of car buyers.

Packard this week resumed operations of its plant on full schedule after a brief shut-down for 9,000 employés' vacations. Orders on hand call for uninterrupted operation for an indefinite period.

Employment in the various automobile plants and accessory factories suffered another substantial decrease this week of 6,200 workmen. This left the total employed at 218,637

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to the Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune. For today's question The Camp Algonquin Fund was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think the state of Illinois should widen its radial roads leading into Chicago?

Where Asked.

Jeffery avenue and 67th street.

The Answers.

William West, 6720 Jeffery avenue, station attendant—Yes, the state certainly should provide for this congested traffic on state roads leading into Chicago. There is always a stream of cars whose drivers wish to go slow and another fast stream. The pavements are not wide enough to accommodate both. The roads should be wide enough to carry four lanes of traffic safely.

P. J. Markey, 6711 Merrill avenue, inspector — Yes, the agency responsible for the pavements should make them meet traffic demands whether roads belong to the state or county. With wider pavements, motorists would be able to get in and out of Chicago without edging a few feet and stopping, and repeating the performance for miles.

James Runk, 5644 Calumet avenue, chauffeur—I think that new roads should be built rather than that all of the old roads should be widened. This work would tie up many of the important roads. There is plenty of room to cut through arteries which would take congestion away from the old state roads. The state could follow this plan in road building about Chicago.

W. S. Douglas, 7440 Stony Island avenue, automobile dealer—Yes, the state should come into the road widening plan. There are only two main arteries leading east to carry the heavy local and tourist traffic. They are wide enough to bear about one-quarter of the traffic that congests them now and their narrowness makes motoring unbearable until you get thirty miles out of Chicago. They should be widened even if a special tax is necessary to meet the expense.

J. R. Roberts, 6118 Greenwood avenue, automobile dealer—I believe that, with all of the money pouring into the Illinois treasury from automobile licenses—there are over a million cars registered now — Gov. Small would have sufficient funds to widen the state roads about Chicago to their proper width of 40 feet. When I plan to make a trip into the country now, I leave on Friday and come in Monday, just to get out of the Sunday traffic jams on the narrow roads.

Spare Repairs and Spoil the Tour, Is Warning to Fans

Association Offers List of Essentials for the Open Road.

WITH every indication that motor touring, and particularly long distance touring, will exceed all previous records in volume this year, the American Automobile association yesterday sounded a note of warning about the importance of keeping the car fit on tour.

The time to take precautions is before the tour starts, the A. A. A. warns, pointing out that otherwise the motorist is liable to let himself in for hurried repairs and incidental delays, which are liable to mar the tour.

This warning stresses the necessity for three preparatory precautions—a thorough cleansing of the water circulation system, the assurance that the brakes are in perfect order, and the marshalling of good rubber. But these were only the high spots; the bulletin lists half a score of other suggestions, based on the experience of thousands of emergency road service calls.

The tires should be either new or in first class condition, all cuts and abrasions having been filled with cement, and a reliable gauge to keep the pressure at a proper level should be tucked in a side pocket. A daily five minute inspection will prove a mighty influence against tire trouble, the bulletin declares. It continues:

"A thorough inspection and overhauling of the car, with the motorist standing over the mechanic, will pay handsomely in freedom from vexatious delays and breakdowns.

"Upon the lubrication will depend at least 80 per cent of the car's service. The motorist should determine definitely that the oils particularly suited to his car may be obtained en route, or he should take enough with him to last until his return. The same applies somewhat to gasoline. One should always insist on a reliable, dependable brand. To insure continued, efficient operation it is necessary to go over the grease cups and other points of lubrication before starting each day's trip.

"The wise tourist carries at least two new spare tires complete with at least two spare tubes in waterproof and dustproof bags."

A comprehensive tool kit and a complete set of chains to prevent skidding and to help extricate the car from mud holes also are essential.

The tool kit, it is suggested, might also include a large monkey wrench, a small monkey wrench, two sizes of screw drivers, a set of socket wrenches, a set of open end wrenches, a pipe wrench, a machinist's hammer, a set of punches, cold and cape chisels, two sizes of files, a pair of pliers, a knife, and possibly a small vise. A good jack, preferably of the long handled variety, a powerful hand pump if the car is not equipped with a power pump, a lug wrench, and a small block of wood to go under the jack in soft ground also are a part of the equipment.

The motorist is also advised to carry a tow rope which, it is pointed out, is "one of those things one may never have to use, but which prove indispensable if the emergency should happen to arise."

The new gasoline strainer and an air cleaner will increase the efficiency of the car, and some sort of light to illuminate the right hand ditch at night when passing other cars is also desirable. An extra roll of wire and electric light bulbs will not be amiss, and, if there is room for it, a bottle of distilled water for the battery will eliminate frequent stops to give the battery a drink.

Separate Grades.

The increasing number of accidents to tourists at highway grade crossings has led to the adoption of a policy looking to the elimination of such dangerous crossings wherever practicable on federal aid roads. The policy, which has met with the general support of the states, is that all existing grade crossings on the federal aid highway system shall be classified for priority of elimination by agreement between the bureau of public roads and the state highway department, and that the improvements shall be carried out as rapidly as practicable.

Heavy Penalties.

Stealing automobiles is likely to lose some of its popularity, as a function of underworld life, if the courts continue to deal out sentences as severe as marked the calendars last week. The Dyer act, which made the interstate transportation of stolen motor vehicles a federal offense, started the campaign to make automobile stealing an unprofitable profession. The Yates bill, passed at this session of congress, continues the Dyer act with further provisions for enforcement. Under this new measure the federal courts in a single week handed out sentences aggregating thirty-eight years to thieves who had transported stolen cars across state boundaries.

77 Refinements

The Greater

OAKLAND SIX

No Increase in Prices

Oakland has added 77 refinements to the brilliant, beautiful Oakland Six which has enjoyed such unprecedented countrywide success during the past year.

Foremost among these advancements is the Rubber-Silenced Chassis—an epochal and exclusive feature freeing the Oakland Six from the disturbing noise and rumbling found in ordinary cars and permitting passengers to ride in quiet, cushioned comfort. This new achievement combines with the Harmonic Balancer to place the Oakland Six far in advance of current motor car design.

Other refinements include smart new Bodies by Fisher in new and strikingly beautiful two-tone Duco color combinations; double-filament tilting beam headlights, with convenient foot control to make night driving safer; vital engine developments including new camshaft and new valve spring retainers—resulting in still quieter performances——in addition to Oakland's well-known advanced features, such as Four-Wheel Brakes, air cleaner, oil filter, full pressure oiling and interchangeable bronze-backed bearings.

These, together with many other refinements, are offered without the slightest increase in Oakland prices!

Come in—see this Greater Oakland Six—examine it—drive it—before buying any automobile at any price. You'll agree that the car has few equals in quality, and no equal in value!

MOTORISTS, heading west this year in the ever increasing tourist streams, will find a complete transcontinental circle awaiting them. This week's tour suggestion shows the possibilities in the summer cruise to the coast and the new routes offered by spring highway improvement work.

The best route to Yellowstone and the Pacific coast just now uses the Grant highway from Chicago and the Atlantic, Yellowstone and Pacific trail across Iowa and into Cody for a tour of Yellowstone. Returning the Lincoln highway west of Chicago is reported in better condition this year than ever before.

Plan New Trail to Carry Traffic Across Dixie

CALIFORNIA has asked the delegates to the National Editorial association, holding its annual convention in Los Angeles, to coöperate in a campaign to be conducted along the southern tier of states for the construction of a twelve month transcontinental concrete highway between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

At present there are three cross-country routes, but all are impassable during certain months of the winter. This involves long delay for motorists who seek to travel between the east and west and who wish to move during the late fall or winter months. It is pointed out that if a southern hard road is opened it may be used by tourists moving west in the closing or opening months of the years and also by residents of the Pacific coast states who wish to go east during that period, while both can return, if desired, by the three farther north routes, which are open after April 1 and until Nov. 1 in most instances.

Congress is to be asked to pay a portion of the expense of this southern transcontinental road and each state through which it will pass the remainder Each of the southern tier of states already has a certain amount of concrete mileage. It is desired to close what gaps may exist by congressional and state action. In view of the tremendous increase in motor traffic the necessity for adding to the available transcontinental routes becomes more pronounced each year, even if the importance of winter service is not taken into consideration.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE AUTO TRADE

AT the latest meeting of Nash Motors company directors E. H. McCarty, general sales manager, was elected a director of the company. Although his experience in the carriage and automobile fields dates back 20 years Mr. McCarty is one of the youngest men to be found on the directorate of any corporation of like size in the country. Nash is now rated among the five or six biggest automobile manufacturing concerns in the world.

Stutz has added two new and striking features to its policy in the merchandising of the new "safety" chassis car. The first is an indemnity insurance policy issued to new Stutz owners which provides against loss of use of the car in case of theft. The second is installation of the Fedco number plate system for the positive identification of the car.

The New Idea that is Abroad in the Land

Unprecedented Thousands Now Turning to the New Cadillac For the Only Thing That Really Counts

What is this thing which is making new thousands turn to the new, 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac and registering sales records unprecedented even in Cadillac history?

It is people's minds and people's pocketbooks—it is the different kind of days and weeks and the different kind of hours and months which people enjoy in the new Cadillac—it is a turning away from the old idea that any sort of motor transportation will do to the sounder idea that the kind of transportation is the only thing that really counts.

It is a reaction and a revulsion away from the type of motoring which made the miles uncertain and miserable and costly.

It is a widespread awakening to the realization that there is no substitute for the satisfied thoughts which Cadillac engenders—for the zestful, restful miles and the easeful hours, days, weeks and months—for the only worth-while things in motoring and the things which alone spell value.

Cadillac is entering upon a new era of expansion and appreciation for the quite simple reason that more people than ever before have come to realize that while a motor car may be only a motor car, a Cadillac is always a Cadillac.

Good Through and Through

Details tell impressive story of quality standards strictly maintained

Unprecedented sales prove how well the public knows that Dodge Brothers Motor Car is sturdier and more dependable than ever before.

Delivers more miles at lower cost-per-mile. Stands up under harder going. Calls for fewer repairs. Provides greater safety. Excels in every quality that has earned its good name.

In fact, you have only to check any chassis part against its own past best—engine, axles, gears, bearings, frame, springs, shafts, electrical equipment—to prove how strictly and consistently Dodge Brothers have preserved and improved the basic goodness of their product.

Yesterday's short session in the cattle division ended one of the most unsatisfactory weeks of the year, sharp declines marring the trade practically throughout the period. All classes at the close showed substantial reductions. Receipts at 62,300 were largest in nearly three months. Nearly half of this number was unloaded Monday, which proved disastrous to the trade.

Yearling steers and heifers finished mostly 10@25c lower for the week, with heavy steers off 25@50c and in-between grades as much as 75c lower. Butcher stock was mostly 35@50c lower for the week and $1.00@1.50 for two weeks. Calves closed 25@50c lower and bulls 40@50c lower. More activity featured the stocker and feeder trade as the week closed, the recent sharp reduction in prices attracting country buyers. The week's top for fat steers at $10.50 was paid for 750@1,174 lb, averages 1,500 lb, averages stopping at $10.25. General average price dropped 35c at $9.35, lowest since May, against $12.00 a year ago.

Hogs Steady to Slightly Lower.

The week-end hog supply of 3,000 fresh receipts and 5,000 carried over from Friday changed hands on a mostly steady to 15c lower price basis yesterday, the decline being largely on lighter weights. General average lowered 10c at $12.50, lowest since April 27, with top at $14.25 equal to the lowest since May 13, indicating a 50c drop in two days and 75c compared with the high point the previous week.

Practically all larger interests entered the trade and less than 2,000 penholders and inferior grades remained in the pens at the close. Fancy 140@200 lb averages brought $14.00@14.25, with 225 lb butchers largely around $12.80 and better grades of 250@300 lb butchers at $13.10@13.60, prime 320 lb averages going at $13.00, and most 300@350 lb packing sows at $11.00@11.35.

Market Reacts Sharply.

The market for hogs reacted sharply, following a three day rise of 25@40c early last week, finishing mostly 25@50c under the week's high point, lightweights selling to the poorest advantage after mid-week. Offerings during the first half of the week were among the smallest of the year, but receipts showed a substantial increase after Wednesday, 21,449 arriving Friday, against 17,284 Tuesday, which gave buyers the upper hand at the close. Daily top prices advanced from $14.25 Monday to $14.75 Thursday, but tumbled to $14.25 at the close.

The week's total hog receipts, however, were smallest since week ending May 22, at 111,100, and 55,900 below the five year average. The estimated average weight at 259 lbs, heaviest in a number of years, compares with 257 lbs the previous week, and 243 lbs a year ago. General average price dropped at $12.85, the lowest weekly average since week ending May 8.

Lambs at Season's Low.

Additional declines of 25@50c during the past week carried fat lambs to a new low point for the season, sorted range lambs lately bringing $14.40, against $19.20 early last month. Matured sheep were scarce and changed very little during the week, while yearlings ruled weak to 25c lower. Feeding lambs slumped 25c, but sold within 25c of top killers on some sessions, best light weights going countryward at $14.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 24,000 cattle, 41,000 hogs, and 21,000 sheep, against 30,359 cattle, 38,259 hogs, and 23,423 sheep a week ago, and 15,259 cattle, 40,917 hogs, and 15,293 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 61,000 cattle, 110,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 46,566 cattle, 104,851 hogs, and 63,131 sheep a year ago.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export demand at the seaboard was unimportant. A sharp break has occurred in German rye prices of late and Rotterdam quoted German or Polish rye as available at equal to $1.12 per bu, or considerably under American.

Chicago handlers sold 94,000 bu corn, 20,000 bu oats, and 13,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with 90,000 bu wheat, 55,000 bu corn, 65,000 bu oats, and 3,000 bu barley booked to arrive. Deliveries on July contracts were 113,000 bu corn, 50,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu rye.

No change was made here in the cash wheat basis, with No. 2 red 3½@5c over and No. 2 hard 2@4c over July. Kansas City was unchanged to 1c lower.

Offerings of cash corn were not large and the local basis ¼c lower to ½c higher. No. 2 grades brought ¼@1½c under; No. 3 grades 1½@3¾c under, and No. 4 grades 2½@5c under September. Outside markets were 1c lower to ½c higher.

Cash oats sold fairly, with the basis here unchanged to ¼c higher. No. 2 white sold at ½@¾c over, and No. 3 white at September price to ¼c over.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 52 cars; corn, 102 cars; oats, 40 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 6 cars.

WHEAT RALLIES AT FINISH; EARLY LOSS WIPED OUT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

While heavy profit taking and general evening up and reports of rains in parts of Canada had a depressing effect on wheat values yesterday, at no time were prices more than ⅝@1⅛c under Friday's finish, and toward the last there was a bulge that more than wiped out the early loss. The finish was ⅛@1c higher, with July leading. The latter closed at $1.45⅞@1.56, September at $1.45@1.45⅛, and December, $1.48⅜@1.48⅛.

General evening up was on in corn, but the close was well toward the top with prices ⅞c higher to ⅛c lower, the latter on December due to closing of spreads with the September. July finished at 77⅛c; September at 82⅜@82⅞c, and December at 84@84⅛c. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c higher with July 39¼c, and September 41⅝@41½c. Rye showed independent strength and closed 1⅞c higher with July $1.05⅞, and September $1.08⅞.

Grains Higher for Week.

A bull market was on in all grains this last week, and prices advanced sharply, closing well toward the best figures with net gains of 7⅛@7½c on wheat; 5⅝@6⅛c on corn; 1½@2c on oats, and 8⅛@8⅝c on rye as compared with the previous week. Provisions were irregular with lard 17½@20c lower, ribs unchanged to 5c lower, and bellies, 17½@22½c higher.

Forecast for scattered showers in Alberta and Saskatchewan and for unsettled weather in North Dakota over Sunday were factors in inducing profit taking in wheat futures, and rain was reported at a few points in Canada, but the buying on resting orders was aggressive and it finally absorbed the surplus and caused shorts to cover toward the last, making the final upturn. Considering the heavy selling, the market gave an excellent account of itself.

Northwest Reports Gloomy.

Unfavorable crop reports continue to come from the American northwest, and late messages from Winnipeg indicated that there was considerable doubt as to whether the three provinces would raise as large a yield as many in the trade had been anticipating. Rust is found in Manitoba, and should warm weather follow showers chances of rust developing more rapidly would increase. Northwestern markets generally showed strength, while the southwest was inclined to lag.

Export demand for cash wheat remains decidedly slow, and Italy was said to be trying to cancel sales at the gulf. Country offerings to arrive were not large despite the recent advance, but it is expected that liberal receipts will be reported Monday. Milling demand in the southwest was somewhat less active. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅛d lower.

Some Drought Complaints.

There was little pressure on nearby corn futures, while a leading local operator bought September and sold December to close spreads, and it is understood that he has finished. Weather conditions were mixed with complaints of drouht received from parts of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, and Iowa. Weekly weather report suggested no general relief from the dry spell, although scattered thundershowers were anticipated with temperatures somewhat below normal.

Houses with northwestern connections bought oats futures and more than offset pressure from the southwest. Crop reports from the northwest unfavorable on oats and other feed grains and both the Dakotas are expected to buy feed stuffs the coming winter. Livestock is being liquidated owing to lack of pastures.

Polish rye crop is estimated officially at 181,000,000 bu, against 258,000,000 bu last year, and led to considerable buying of futures here and a higher range. Export demand was slow.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The average wheat trade is bullish, but is afraid to stand for large profits. This is the way the trade was sized up by one of the shrewdest observers at the close yesterday. There are many bullish conditions in the northwestern crop situation, but there has been a rapid advance and most traders are afraid that it will not hold, and they take profits on all advances. It has been noticeable all week that breaks have run into a good class of buying and have resulted in sharp rallies.

What puzzles wheat traders the most is the uncertainty as to the effect of the large movement of new wheat from the middle west that is due the latter part of this week. Expectations are that there will be around 300 cars of wheat here on Monday. In the estimated arrivals on Saturday, the Santa Fe report was not included. It had 73 cars and there will be more on Monday. The Wabash is also expected to have a good run.

The late bulge in wheat was attributed to buying by a large local operator who has been active all week and was supposed to be covering shorts.

Broomhall says that the Australian wheat shipping season has come to an end as supplies remaining will be required to furnish New Zealand with her deficit and perhaps some reimportations will be necessary.

A cash handler said that there were export bids in Chicago for hard winter wheat, all rail shipment to New York, loading Saturday, at 16c over July, track New York, with sellers at 17c over, for loading Monday. Another cash handler said that points east of Chicago offered corn in New England Friday night at 2 to 7c under prices made by Chicago. He says that it is understood that holders of winter shelled corn are offering it east at 2 to 4c under fresh shelled, the desire being to work off the winter shelled corn as fast as possible.

Martin, of Clark & Martin, Winnipeg, wired: "General opinion of elevator and milling companies, is that our wheat crop is a good average one, and with good weather from now on, this country will raise as much as last year."

World's shipments are expected to be considerably smaller for the week, although North American exports will no doubt be larger, says Broomhall. They are estimated at 11,900,000 bu against 8,947,000 bu last year. Chicago stocks should show a small increase in wheat and a slight gain in the visible is not unlikely.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in local unlisted securities continued active last week, with interest centering largely on the buying side. Practically all issues showed a good tone.

Both the common and preferred stocks of the Celotex company were in excellent demand, the common improving over 18 points to high and last sales around 145. The preferred was quiet in the early trading, but closed at 94½ bid, a gain of 5 points for the week. Standard Cap and Seal was in good demand, selling at 42¼, ex the special dividend of $2.00. This compares with sales at 38 early in the week. Q. R. S. Music was in good demand, improving to sales at 45. This price was bid for additional stock at the close. American Furniture Mart common showed a better tone at 4⅞ to 5⅛. The preferred was steady at 90 to 91.

Little interest was shown in the McCord issues, the common being quoted 8⅜ to 9¼, while the debenture stock sold at 18. The A preferred was quiet at 65 to 68. Kellogg company common continued to advance, 96 being freely bid. W. F. Hall Printing showed an easier tendency, losing a point to sales at 30½. National Theaters regained its previous loss, selling between 8 and 8¼. Numerous buyers for Interstate Iron and Steel preferred were noted at 105½, but offerings were scarce. The common was neglected at 75 to 76. Keystone Steel and Wire preferred was in better demand at par. The common, however, was slightly easier at 39 to 40.

Acme Steel Goods was traded in between 71 and 71½. After selling at 108 Palmolive was offered at this price with best bids at 106. Great Lakes Transit was up from early sales at 21½ to a close of 22 bid, 23 asked.

Bank shares generally showed a firm tone, with State Bank of Chicago commanding most of the attention. It sold up 125 points to 841, but later relinquished a portion of this advance at 800 bid, 810 asked. First National was stronger, sales at 585 showing an improvement of 25 points. Illinois Merchants Trust again changed hands between 602 and 605. Union Trust was unchanged with sales around 400. Central Trust Company of Illinois was in supply, offerings at 308 failing to develop buyers better than 305. Continental and Commercial National was quiet at 453 bid, 456 asked.

RAILROAD NOTES

The Corona and Santa Fe railway was authorized by the interstate commerce commission to construct a line in Riverside, Cal., and to issue $50,000 of capital stock. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe was given permission to acquire the new company by purchase of its stock and by lease.

The aggregate net operating income of 188 class 1 railroads, including thirteen switching and terminal companies, as reported to the interstate commerce commission for May was $88,105,476, compared with $76,154,267 for the corresponding month last year. For the first five months of the present year the aggregate net operating income was $387,531,611, compared with $347,249,844 for the corresponding period last year.

The commerce commission has begun an investigation on its own initiative into rates on petroleum and petroleum products within the territory east of the Mississippi, south of the Ohio river and east of the Indiana-Illinois line and between points outside of this territory and points in it. The inquiry will determine whether such rates are unreasonable. Dates for a hearing will be set later.

Permission to operate a railroad from Alton to Quincy was asked of the Illinois commerce commission by the Alton, Quincy and Northern railroad today. The road, starting at Alton, would extend to a point at or near Deer Plain, Calhoun county, and north through the counties of Calhoun, Pike, and Adams to Quincy.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $700,400,000, an increase of $143,800,000 over the preceding week, which contained the Independence day holiday, but a decline of $21,700,000 from the corresponding week in 1925. Balances last week totaled $45,400,000, an increase of $1,400,000 over the preceding week and also a gain of $3,400,000 over the corresponding week last year. NEED RAIN ALL ALONG DUSTY POPCORN TRAIL

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Grand Island, Neb., July 17.—[Special.]—Popcorn trail that winds up through Nebraska's great popcorn belt is dry and dusty, and crops are needing rain. On a tour of 150 miles across Howard, Greeley, and Valley counties I found crop conditions differing greatly from the bumper crop of small grains and corn in the eastern part of Nebraska.

In the fertile valleys of the Loup river and Myra creek pastures are parched, small grain and hay crops have been cut short by the dry weather. Recent showers have been in spots and most of this country suffered from lack of rain earlier in the season.

Alfalfa Crop Light.

Corn and alfalfa are the main crops. The first cutting of alfalfa was extremely light. The second crops of alfalfa and sweet clover, which are now being cut, are also light. New hay is already being fed to live stock. Even the hay crop from prairie grass is short, and farmers are mowing down the sweet clover along the roadsides in order to get winter roughage for their cattle.

Comparatively little wheat is grown in these counties. Thousands of acres of oats are too short to be harvested and threshed. Much of the oat crop has been cut for hay. Occasionally spots are found in the lowlands where the oats have returned a fair crop. In Myra creek valley, ten or twelve miles west of North Loup in Valley county, some yields of oats are expected to thresh out from 35 to 40 bushels to the acre in fields that ordinarily produce from 50 to 60 bushels to the acre.

Expect Bumper Corn Crop.

Three different kinds of corn are grown on an extensive commercial scale in the Myra and Loup valleys, including pop corn, sweet corn, grown for seed, and field corn. The prospects up to the present time are excellent for a bumper yield of all three corn crops. The corn is somewhat late, but the stands are fine, the fields are even and the blades are of dark green color.

The scorching sun during the last few days has caused the corn to wilt to the point where the blades roll, but no permanent damage has yet resulted. Growers say that, while rain is badly needed, the corn crop can stand several days of severe drought and make a big crop; the real danger comes during the tasseling stage, when burning winds interfere with pollination.

Pop Corn Knee High.

Most of the pop corn, sweet corn and field corn is listed—the corn is planted in deep furrows and the dirt is piled up around the stalks with cultivators, burying the roots, where they are kept in moist soil and the plants are thus kept alive for many days even in dry, hot weather.

Most of the pop corn and sweet corn is now knee high and much of it is waist high, which is good height for this time of the year. Most of the field corn, which doesn't grow as tall here as it does in Iowa, is now waist high. It is common to see from fifty to 250 acres of pop corn and sweet corn in a single field. All the corn is clean and growers have had little difficulty in keeping it cultivated and free from weeds. Practically all of the corn will be cultivated the last time this week.

Farmers are handling an unusually late acreage of corn this season. L. D. Pazant, nine miles west of Ord, Neb., has cultivated his 175 acres alone with a two-row cultivator. He has already plowed it twice and is now going over it the third time.

CORPORATION EARNINGS

AMERICAN CHICLE.

For the six months ended June 30, net profit was $620,726 after depreciation, interest, taxes, etc., or $2.63 a share on 186,595 shares of common after dividends on 7 per cent prior preferred and 6 per cent preferred, against $579,769, or $3.24 a share on 173,441 shares of common after one month's preferred dividend requirements in 1925. Second quarter net was $326,826, against $323,402 in the second quarter of 1925.

CONGOLEUM-NAIRN.

For the six months ended June 30, 1926, net income was $1,486,186 after interest, depreciation and federal tax, equal after 7 per cent dividends on first preferred to 84c a share on 1,641,026 no par common shares, against $2,776,677, or $1.65 a share, in the first six months of 1925.

POSTUM CEREAL.

Net earnings after charges and taxes in the first half of 1926 approximated $6,100,000, equal to nearly $4.15 a share on 1,465,000 shares of no par common. This does not include profits of Igleheart Bros. company for the first quarter, as that company was acquired as of March 31. Net income of Postum in the same half of last year was $2,260,172, equal after preferred dividends to $5.40 a share on the 400,000 shares then outstanding.

RAILROAD EARNINGS

BUFFALO, ROCHESTER AND PITTSBURGH.

Surplus after charges of company for the five months ended May 31 was $454,412, equal to $2.90 a share on $10,500,000 common stock after dividends on $6,000,000 6 per cent preferred stock, against first quarter surplus of $312,691, equal to $2.12 on common.

Profit and loss surplus of May 31 was $3,902,575, against $3,364,310 March 21 and $3,447,375 Dec. 31.

At the close of the first quarter of 1925 there was a deficit after charges of $3,016. In the five months of this year the surplus was two-thirds of its total for the entire year of 1925, when $661,596 equaled $2.87 a share on common and left a net deficit after all dividends of $118,404.

DELAWARE AND HUDSON.

Surplus after charges of rail department of the company for five months ended May 31 was $367,522, in contrast with a deficit after charges of $968,005 on March 31, and surplus after charges of $703,972 for the first three months of 1915.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP)—Cotton goods trading for the week was better than for several months past, and was characterized by broader purchasing. Goods wanted by manufacturing trades were placed under contract in moderate way. Cloths wanted by umbrella, wide shade, harvester machinery, bag, and other factories having been traded in quite freely, compared with recent operations. Yarns were firmer. The market for tropical weights of men's wear for spring, 1927, appears unsettled by low prices of largest producer and there has been general downward price revision on highly competitive basis by independent producers. Sales by largest factor reported eminently satisfactory thus far. Linens in better demand. Burlaps steadier and are still being bought in moderate volume.

Foreign Government External Loan Bonds.

Ask any American what he considers the safest investment in the world and he probably will tell you United States government bonds.

Go to France, Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Argentina, Japan—practically any first class country in the world—and ask the same question of the nationals.

The chances are large that they will tell you that the bonds of their own government are the safest.

It is human nature to repose implicit confidence in the formal legal obligations of one's own national government.

It also seems to be human nature to look with some measure of doubt or even mistrust on the similar obligations of foreign nations.

It is largely because of this feeling that countries borrowing money abroad through the flotation of a bond issue must usually offer a higher rate of interest than that prevailing at home.

Foreign governments offering a bond issue to the American public must agree to pay a larger return on the borrowed money than our own government does.

Furthermore, any adverse news concerning political or industrial conditions in the foreign country shakes the confidence of American holders of that country's bonds and causes a decline in their market price.

Sometimes these declines are justified. Frequently they are not.

Let us see just what a government bond amounts to. It is a formal legal document acknowledging the receipt of a sum of money borrowed from the holder and evidencing the government's obligation to pay interest and repay principal promptly when due.

The entire faith, honor and credit standing of the nation is back of it, pledged to the fulfillment of the terms of the loan.

Bonds sold by a government to the public of another country—external loan bonds, as they are called—take precedence over that government's internal obligations held by its own nationals.

No first class nation can afford to jeopardize its credit standing with the other nations of the world by failure to fulfill promptly the terms of its external loan bonds.

A nation may quibble over the terms of a loan made to it by a foreign government. It may endeavor by negotiations to bring about an amelioration of the terms or conditions of the repayment of the loan, because between governments such things are susceptible to arbitration and adjustment, politically and diplomatically.

But between a government and the individual citizens of a foreign nation who have loaned it money and hold its bonds there is no chance for arbitration of the terms of the loan. The government must either meet the service of the loan promptly when due, as it has pledged its faith to do on the face of each bond, or default and lose its credit standing among nations.

It would, of course, lose its credit standing if it repudiated a loan from a foreign government, but there is no question of repudiation in the negotiations between governments over repayment of loans. The debtor government is merely trying to get the most favorable terms possible and it is but natural that it should do so as long as diplomatic relations between nations give it the opportunity and means to negotiate such matters.

We are not trying to prove, by the foregoing, that all foreign government bonds are safe nor are we trying to put them in the same class with our own government bonds.

We simply want to point out the elements of safety in back of external loan government bonds as such, to show the difference in treatment between such bonds and loans by one government to another—as so many people naturally think that, if a government will wrangle over the settlement of its debt to another, the holders of its bonds may expect similar treatment—and to indicate that the feeling of confidence in foreign government bonds is largely a matter of geography.

There are many foreign government bonds that are selling out of line with other bonds of equal grade.

Many are selling far below their real worth.

Not all foreign bonds are sound investments, but a number which we regard as sound, if bought to hold until maturity, can today be bought at prices to yield considerably more than domestic issues of no greater safety.

A number of carefully selected foreign government bonds of several different countries included among one's holdings can be made materially to increase the yield without in any way detracting from the safety of the whole.

WALL STREET NOTES

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP)—Indications that building activities throughout the country the rest of the year will go forward on substantially the same basis as in the boom period of 1925, are apparent in reports of building permits and plans filed in 462 cities for the first half of 1926, compiled by S. W. Straus & Co. Permits totaling $2,218,002,775 were issued. Although this was a loss of 1 per cent, the June figures showed an upward movement of 7½ per cent over June last year. The normal trend between May and June is said to be sharply downward.

Stocks of International Cement corporation will be quoted ex-rights on the New York Stock exchange on July 27. Rights were admitted to trading on a "when issued" basis today and must be settled on Aug. 5. They expire Aug. 11.

Export sales of the Standard Textile Products company for the first half of 1926 made a favorable showing with the same period last year, nearly 3,000,000 yards having been shipped against 6,300,000 yards for the full year 1925 and 4,625,000 yards in 1924.

Earnings of the Mackay companies are running well ahead of last year, said Clarence Mackay, president, on his departure for Europe today. "No cable expansions are contemplated for the immediate future. "General business in the country looks good and I expect it to continue good," he added.

All rubber companies have passed the worst portion of their year and from the general outlook, I expect the tire business to be as good from now on as it was last year," said B. G. Work, president and chairman of the B. F. Goodrich company, sailing for Europe. "Most companies are using crude rubber that is steadily declining in price. I do not look for additional price cuts."

Commercial failures in the United States this week increased to 354 from 306 last week, R. G. Dun & Co. reports. In the same week last year, 406 defaults were reported.

Buckeye Pipe Line declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share and the regularly quarterly of $1. Burroughs Adding Machine declared a special dividend of $1 on the common stock and the regularly quarterly dividends of 75 cents on the common, and $1.75 on the preferred. The balance of the preferred stock has been called for redemption Sept. 30 at 105.

Owing to unsatisfactory trade conditions, the Everett Mills, employing over 1,200 on cotton goods manufacture, will suspend operations July 24 to Sept. 10.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube company is scheduled to increase productive five per cent next week to an average rate of between 75 and 80 per cent. Other operations in the district are unchanged.

What Will You Have Twenty Years From Now?

NO ONE could wish for a happier moment than the day when his income, independent of his salary or business, is sufficient for the necessities of life.

Have you not often wondered where your money will come from twenty years from now? Possibly you will be able to increase your earnings as you grow older. But there is the other possibility that everyone must face—namely, decreased earning capacity as age advances. Certainly you cannot feel that your future welfare is assured unless you know that some day you will have an income absolutely independent of your business or salary.

To be in the class of those financially independent, you must follow their program and start at once on a definite plan of buying your future financial independence out of today's income.

Send now for our booklet C. T. 449, explaining our constructive plan for future independence

STOCK MARKET MOVES UP UNDER WAVE OF BUYING

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last	Net chge.
20 railroads	94.25	93.73	93.89—	.09
25 industrials	165.26	164.12	164.72+	.42
50 stocks	129.75	128.92	129.30+	.16

New York, July 17.—(AP)—Bullish enthusiasm in the stock market was stirred up afresh today as U. S. Steel and General Motors, the two outstanding leaders, soared to record high levels. Other industrial shares swept forward at a rapid pace, with numerous gains of 1 to 5 points recorded on a turnover of nearly a million shares.

Confidence in the business outlook was strengthened by optimistic statements from Secretary Mellon and other financial leaders and the reports of widespread improvement in trade at a time when recessions might be normally expected. The failure of the western railroads to obtain an increase in freight rates was ignored as a market factor.

New High Marks Are Reached.

U. S. Steel reached new high ground at 145 and General Motors at 169, with the buying movement also embracing such representative issues as General Electric, Mack Trucks, Dupont, Dodge Motors, International Harvester, American Can, Gulf States Steel, and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe. The customary week-end profit taking made its appearance before the close, reducing the extreme gains, but leaving prices substantially higher for the day. The closing quotation of 143⅝ on U. S Steel represented a fractional net advance while General Motors closed 3⅝ points higher at 168⅛.

Refusal of the interstate commerce commission to grant the western railroads a horizontal increase in freight rates placed a damper on most of the carrier stocks, but its influence was counteracted by the generally satisfactory state of the transportation industry. A few issues in this group developed independent strength. Pere Marquette preferred jumped five points to a new high and other Van Sweringen stocks were strengthened by the Pere Marquett's acceptance of the revised Nickel Plate merger plan. New Haven reached a new top price for the year.

The unexpected breakdown of negotiations for the sale of the White Star Line to British shipping interests accounted for the weakness of International Mercantile Marine preferred, which closed more than a point lower.

Curb Stocks Are Strong.

Quiet strength prevailed in most groups on the Curb exchange. United Gas Improvement made an early gain, selling to 115¼. Lehigh Power securities maintained its position as the active feature, selling up a fraction to 16⅞. Ohio Fuel Corporation and American Gas were also in demand at moderate advances. The industrials division was featured by strength in the Motor shares, Ford of Canada opened up 5½ points and Stutz rose fractionally to 25⅝. Oil shares held steady.

A sharp reaction in International Mercantile Marine 6s, which dropped more than 4 points to 87, stood out in contrast to the desultory movement of prices in other sections of the bond market. Western railroad liens were easier, but Wheeling and Lake Erie 4s, Ontario and Western general 4s, and National Railways of Mexico 4s advanced 1 to 2 points.

New York Loans Decrease.

Despite the activity and rising prices in certain sections of the stock market, loans, discounts, and investments of the New York clearing house banks this week decreased $54,424,000. Net demand deposits decreased $14,259,000. Excess reserve stands at $11,329,240, a decrease of $19,222,400.

Foreign exchanges displayed a distinctly firmer tone, with both French and Belgian francs showing gains at 2.45 and 2.44½ cents, respectively. Demand Sterling held steady around $4.86. Italian lire also were slightly stronger. Most of the other continental rates showed only nominal changes.

NICKEL PLATE PLANS TO RUN ATTICA ROAD

Washington, D. C., July 17.—(AP)—Evidence that the Nickel Plate plans to take over the Chicago, Attica, and Southern railroad, which serves about 50 cities and towns in Indiana, is contained in a letter received by Interstate Commerce Commissioner Meyer from M. J. Van Sweringen, one of the creators of the Nickel Plate consolidation plan. The letter, made public today, said President Bernet of the Nickel Plate had been in conference with officials of the Attica and that the Van Sweringens propose to operate the line for four months pending conclusions with regard to other matters included in the unification plan. Whether the Attica, which extends about 150 miles in Indiana, with a branch from Goodland to Chicago, will be incorporated in the Nickel Plate's revised merger plans, was not made clear.

Willys-Overland Statement Shows 6 Months' Profit

The preliminary statement of the Willys Overland company for the six months ended June 30 shows a profit of $8,581,952 after ordinary taxes, depreciation, interest, but before federal taxes, equal, after a 7 per cent preferred dividend, to $3.14 a share of $5 par value on 2,527,224 common shares, against $10,465,581, or $4.27 a share on 2,264,634 shares outstanding in the first half of 1925. Profit for the June quarter of 1926, was $7,348,126 before taxes, equal to $2.78 a share on 2,527,224 common shares, against $1,233,826, or 36 cents a share on 2,527,050 shares in the preceding quarter and $7,328,000 or $3.06 a share on 2,264,634 shares in the June quarter of 1925.

R. R. Fuel Efficiency Saves $193,842,000 in Five Years

Greater efficiency in the use of fuel has saved class one railroads of the United States $193,842,000 in the last five years, the western railways' committee says in its annual handbook, issued yesterday. In 1920 it took 197 pounds of coal to move 1,000 tons of cars and freight one mile. In 1925 the work was done with 159 pounds of coal, and every intervening year has shown smaller coal use. The saving of 38 pounds of coal for each thousand-ton mile made a total saving of 19,446,000 tons of coal last year. The roads reduced by 2.7 pounds the amount of coal required to move a passenger train in the five year period, accomplishing a fuel saving of 14 per cent.

First Mortgage 6½% Serial Gold Bonds

$500 and $1000 Bonds. Maturing Semi-Annually 2½ to 15 Years. Interest Payable January 1 and July 1.

Project Endorsed by Chamber of Commerce and the Commercial Club of Gary

1. Security includes ownership of valuable land and new nine-story building of fireproof construction in the heart of a leading center of the steel industry.
2. There is an acute demand for high grade hotel accommodations in Gary, which has existed for several years in this very rapidly-growing city.
3. Expert independent appraisal of the property when completed shows a very substantial valuation, with large margin of security for the Bondholders.
4. The building will be leased to experienced individuals of reputed responsibility for a net annual rental more than sufficient to take care of interest and principal payments.
5. The approval and endorsement of leading Gary organizations, together with the experienced management, assures the immediate success of the new hotel.
6. In addition to monthly deposits in advance with Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company, the head of the borrowing corporation, who is a leading Gary contractor, personally guarantees prompt payments to investors of principal and interest.

First showing New SAFETY STUTZ with safety glass in all windows

> "It is a serious question whether manufacturers in the past have given adequate thought to the element of safety in the cars they have sold to the general public. Over a period of years our motor-car manufacturers have stressed everything but safety features . . . ."
> F. W. JOHNSON, Director Citizens Safety Committee of Philadelphia at the 1926 National Conference on Street and Highway Safety—SECRETARY HOOVER, Chairman.

WE now announce New SAFETY STUTZ models, including seven-passenger cars, in which every window, as well as windshield, is of special safety-glass.

This eliminates the hazard of injury from flying shattered glass, at front, sides and rear. These New SAFETY STUTZ models are the first cars ever built regularly equipped with safety-glass all around.

The phenomenal sales of the New SAFETY STUTZ attest the success with which this advanced automobile meets the public demand of today.

And the New SAFETY STUTZ, already the world's safest automobile, is now made still safer for its occupants.

No other car has this combination of safety features:

Safety-glass in windshield and all windows. Narrow, clear-vision front corner-posts.

Frame of unequalled strength and rigidity, with integral steel running-boards ("side-bumpers").

Perfect road balance; elimination of side-sway achieved by scientific frame and spring arrangement. Stabilators and long, low-rate flat springs co-ordinated for ideal action.

Unparalleled stability, gained by a radical lowering of the "center of mass" of the car. The resistance to overturn is so great that one side of the car may be raised more than three feet higher than the other without toppling the car over. This lowering of the center of mass is made possible by the New SAFETY STUTZ worm-gear drive, manufactured by Timken.

Hydrostatic four-wheel brakes, developed and built by Timken; greatly increased effective braking surface, with perfect equalization of braking energy at all points on each wheel. Non-leaking, no adjusting; quick, even deceleration—no discomfort to passengers, no skidding, no swerving, no side-sway.

Instant acceleration from ten to fifty miles per hour in less than eighteen seconds; an alertness that quickly pulls the car out of tight places. And speed adequate for all occasions.

The entire car has Underwriters' Class A rating on both fire and theft. It is permanently protected at no cost to the car owner by The Fedco Number Plate System in co-operation with the William J. Burns International Detective Agency.

Furthermore, the owner of each New SAFETY STUTZ, Fedco-numbered, is given insurance against loss of use resulting from theft, with indemnity of five dollars per day, up to thirty days.

We are now showing these New SAFETY STUTZ models which, in addition to their exclusive safety features, have a custom-like smartness of body design and the utmost luxury of appointments.

The Symbol of Safety

Eight body styles, designed and constructed under the supervision of Brewster of New York. All closed bodies automatically ventilated—an exclusive feature. All models priced F. O. B. Indianapolis, war excise tax excluded, but fully equipped except spare tires.

CASA DEL MAR IS LATEST CLUB FOR SOUTH SIDE

Proposes 16 Story Home on Shore.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

A sixteen story club house is announced for the south side where the Club Casa Del Mar has acquired the property at the southeast corner of 74th street and South Shore drive, extending back to Lake Michigan, on which it proposes to erect its home. The site was secured from the John Hanberg estate and it is stated it is valued at $175,000.

K. M. Vitzthum and J. J. Burns are the architects for the club house which it is said will cost $2,000,000 to build and equip.

One of the most interesting features of the organization is the fact that it will be open to membership of both men and women. Clubs having a combination membership are said to be in vogue and successful in California.

Sixteen Stories High.

The building is to be sixteen stories in height. The first floors will contain the lobby, dining room and various recreational rooms. Then most of the upper floors will contain the 500 living rooms in the building. There are to be more general clubrooms at the top of the structure.

The sixteenth floor is to contain a swimming pool which is arranged so that the roof above it may be opened during the summer months. But the reason for this feature is hard to explain when it is stated that the club will maintain its shore property as a private beach for the members. And who wants to swim in a pool when he can loll about on the sand?

The club is described as a "beach, residential and athletic" organization. It has been incorporated and the first board of governors consists of the following: J. Frank Aldrich, former congressman and historian of the Union League club; W. C. Lawson, John V. Hanberg, H. H. Haylett, Royal N. Allen, and George A. Beaton, secretary. The organization is limited to 3,000 members.

As in California.

The club is patterned along the lines of an organization of similar name in Los Angeles, California, which recently completed a handsome new home. It is planned to organize other clubs Casa Del Mar in eastern cities during the coming year.

W. Y. Jackman, the organizer of the club, states that the property of the organization is being put into shape for use as a beach by the members during this summer. He said that building operations would commence in the fall and that it was hoped to have the structure ready for occupancy by the spring of 1928.

PLAN 17 STORY FLAT BUILDING FOR FULLERTON

A seventeen story apartment building looms for the Lincoln park district of the north side, following the acquisition of an important site by the Fullerton Parkway Building corporation at 399 Fullerton parkway. The site comprises a part of the former Nellie Loeb home and it lies just east of Clark street.

McNally & Quinn are preparing plans for the building, work on which is expected to start shortly. It is probable that the structure will be coöperative, though this has not been decided. The project will represent an investment of $1,500,000 upon completion.

The site of the building measures 85x173 feet, and it comprises the east eighty-five feet of the Nellie Loeb home, at the southeast corner of Fullerton and Clark. This home for years was a landmark on the north side, being especially noted for its beautiful garden, surrounded by a tall iron fence on the western part of the property.

The syndicate who will erect the structure acquired the site from Peter F. Reynolds, who bought the property some time ago. It is reported that the price paid for it was $150,000. Mr. Reynolds still retains the western part of the property, which now presents a sad appearance in comparison with its former happier days. The handsome iron fence is now down and the garden is overrun with tall grass and weeds.

Schuyler, Weinfeld & Ettelson were attorneys for the syndicate in the purchase of the property.

BARRINGTON, ILL., ADOPTS PLAN TO PROTECT GROWTH

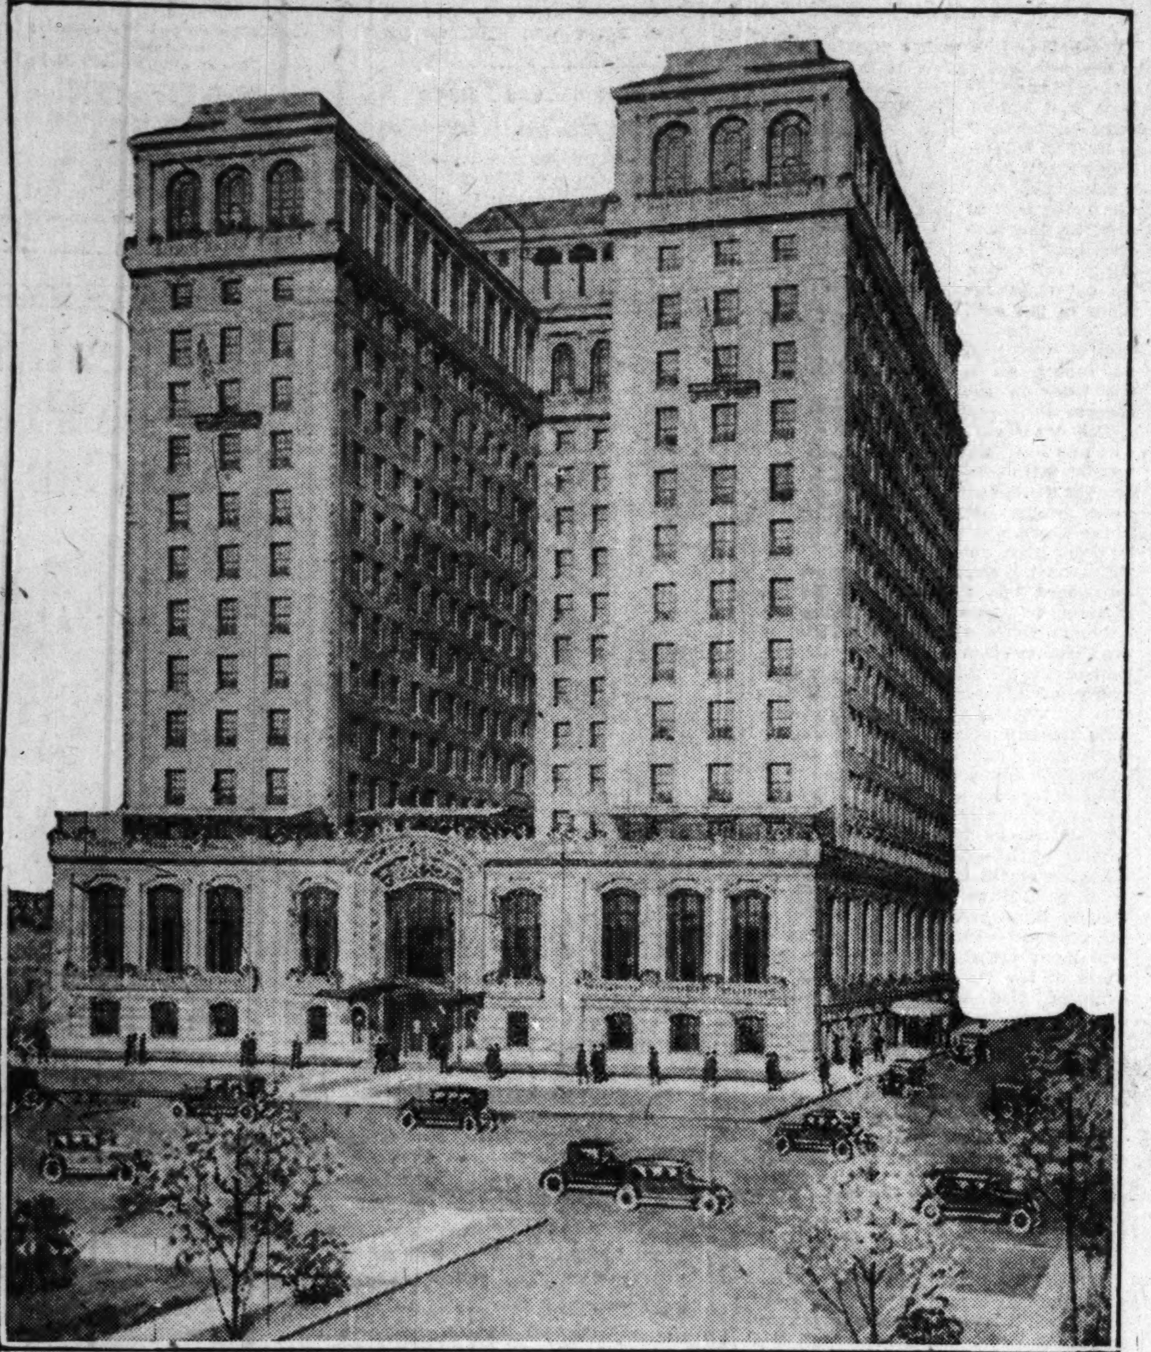
Barrington, Ill., recently adopted a comprehensive zoning plan and ordinance to regulate the growth of that northern suburb. The zoning plan provides for single family residential development on comparatively large lots in all the outer sections of the town and for business and general commercial development closer in. A general town plan has also been worked out for the village and the country adjoining.

Harvey, Ill., has organized a zoning commission and has engaged Jacob L. Crane Jr. as consultant. The town is preparing a zoning plan.

Catholic Bishop Buys Site for Church on 67th Street

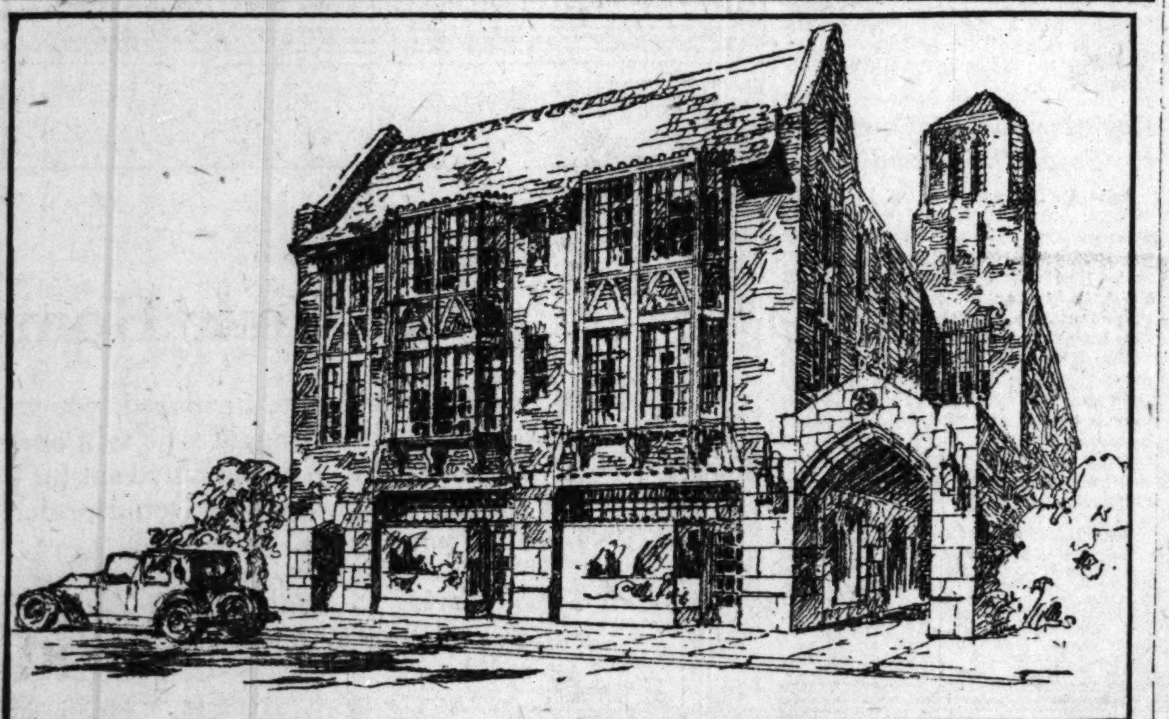
The Catholic bishop of Chicago has bought four acres at 67th, Kostner, and Kolin, in Lawrence P. Romano & Co's. Marquette Road Terrace subdivision, for future church use. McMahon & Mahan were brokers and I. J. Berkson attorney.

TO MAKE LIFE HAPPIER



W. Y. Jackman has announced that plans are under way to erect a new clubhouse at the southeast corner of 74th street and South Shore drive to cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. The building, designed by K. M. Vitzthum and J. J. Burns, is to be sixteen stories high. There will be 500 rooms for residential quarters. The organization's shore property will be used as a private beach. E. Tronnes made the above rendering.

GLEN ELLYN MASONIC BUILDING

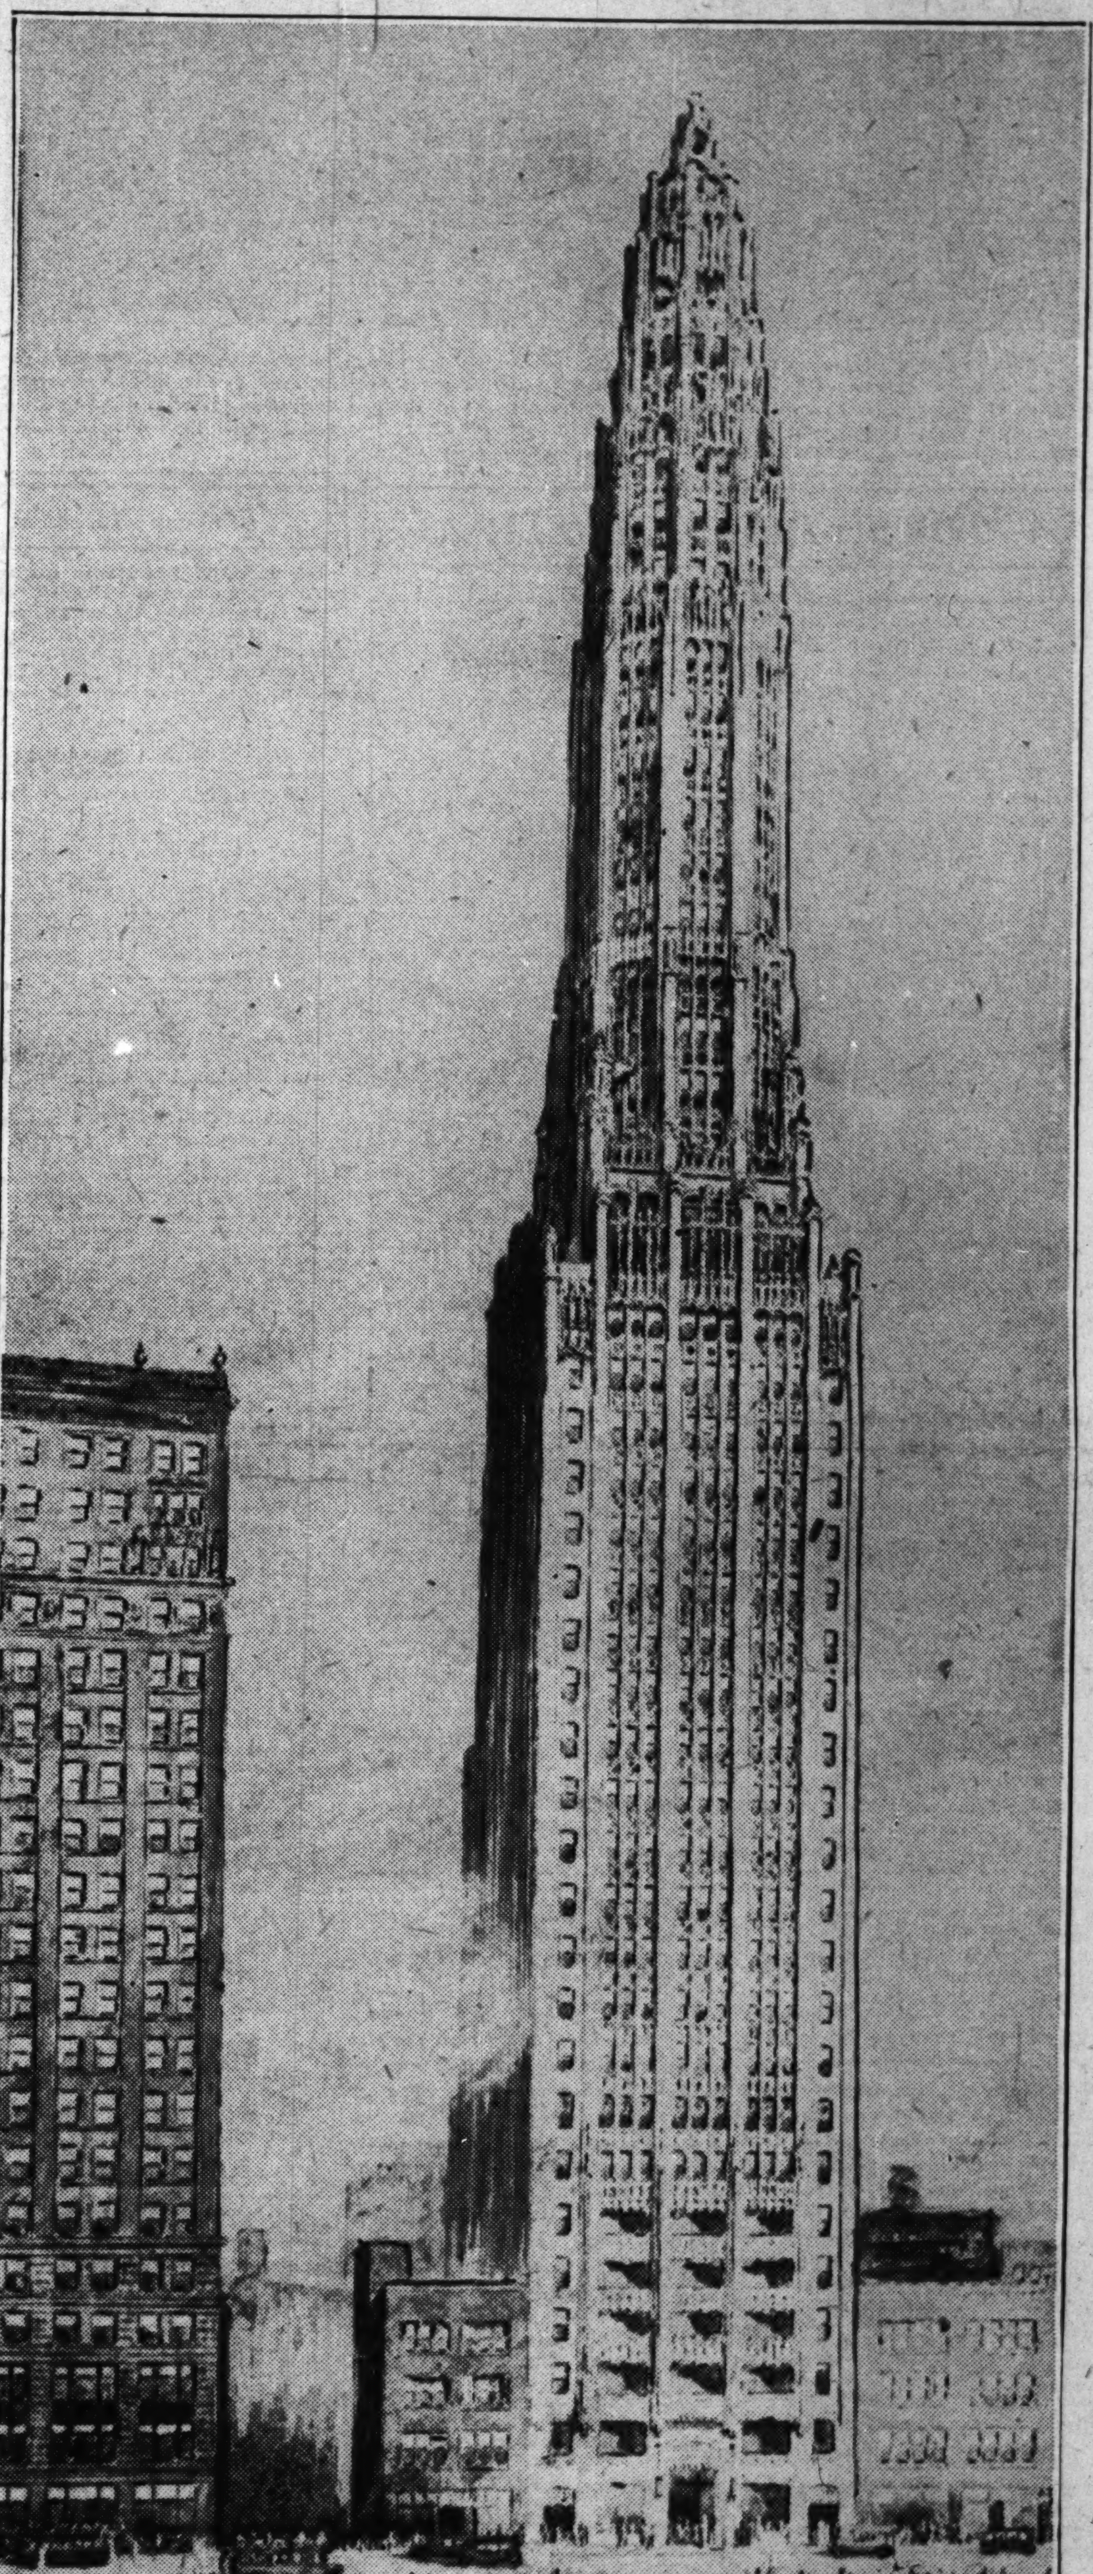


Arrangements have been concluded by the Masons of Glen Ellyn with Roy V. Spalding, A. C. Hoy, and Charles Hadley for the immediate erection of a three story building on Main street, just north of Hillside avenue. It will cost $150,000 and will have two stores, with apartments above. An arcade will lead back to a 40x65 auditorium, to be equipped with stage. Above this will be a lodge hall to be used by Glen Ellyn lodge, No. 950, A. F. & A. M.

Plans by Betts & Holcomb call for architecture of the English Tudor period. Following the commendable standard set by Lee O. Farnsworth in his unusually attractive old English real estate office building next door to the Masonic building, where all outside walls are made of the same material, it is understood that the Masonic building will use red brick and stone trim on all sides, thus playing fair with the attractive residence district to the south and east. The above building takes the place of the one shown in this section on Sept. 27, 1925.

A committee composed of Andrew N. Fox, Acors W. Rathbun, George D. Miller, Herbert Martin, Stanley Cutler, and Karl Loehr represented the Glen Ellyn Masonic Temple Building association in the above transaction. Contracts call for completion within six months. Above rendering by F. M. Holcomb.

CHICAGO'S NEWEST CLOUD CLIMBER



Architect Herbert Hugh Riddle designed the above Mather Tower, to be erected by W. A. Illsley for Alonzo C. Mather, president of the Mather Stock Car company, on Wacker drive, between Wabash and Michigan.

College Frat Men to Have Country Club

Still another specialized country club for the Chicago district is announced. Last week we had a golf course for graduates and men who attended the "Big Ten" middle west colleges. This time it's a club open to all college men who are members of fraternities.

It'll be called the University Country club and will occupy 220 acres half a mile east of McHenry, on Lake-in-the-Hills, a twenty acre body of water which the club grounds will completly surround.

An eighteen hole course will be laid out late this summer. Some of the men to be officers in the new club are Fred Clutten, secretary of Butler Brothers; Howard Hilton, of Glen Ellyn, vice president of the Chicago Trust company; Victory Milliken, attorney and Henry S. Burroughs, secretary of the National Life Insurance company. The board of directors will be elected within a few days.

A $50,000 club house, designed by L. B. Harding, is contemplated, also a boat house on the Fox river, which is 500 feet from the property. The club will have tennis courts, a bridle path, and swimming in the private lake. The organization has no affiliation with the University club of Chicago.

START ON 160 ROOM HOTEL ON NORTH LA SALLE

Attorney Benjamin E. Cohen, now erecting the McCormick hotel, just north of the Virginia, has started work on another north side hotel, at 1512-18 North La Salle street. It'll be four stories and contain 160 rooms. E. J. Meles, architect of the McCormick, designed the new building, to be called the Hotel Laurel. It'll be ready for guests in six months.

Pays $190,000 for Hotel at 5051 Kenmore Avenue

Samuel Bloom has sold the Bryn-Mar hotel apartments at 5051-53 Kenmore avenue to Maurice A. Barancik for a reported $190,000, subject to $107,000. The attorneys were Maurice A. Barancik and Samuel J. Blumenthal of Altheimer & Mayer. Krenn & Dato were brokers.

PAYS $2,000 A FRONT FOOT ON E. ELM STREET

Stella F. Polk has bought from Samuel H. Newman the old residences at 74-82 East Elm, 100x103, at a reported $200,000, or $2,000 a front foot. Mr. Newman bought this property from the Palmer estate for $150,000. Mrs. Polk may use this as the site for a tall co-op. Thomas J. Fleming of Ross & Browne, was broker. Julius S. Neale was attorney for Mrs. Polk.

Sells Kimbark Avenue Apartments for $36,000

Daniel A. Brennan has sold the nine flat building at 5215 Kimbark to Bernard Plavnik for a reported $36,000. Samuel Vig of Robert L. Gear & Co. and Stanley Wolbach & Co., were brokers.

Six Apartment Building on Greenwood Avenue Sold

Morris Solomovicz bought from Etta G. Schulenberg the six apartments at 6615 Greenwood for a reported $36,800 through Arthur D. Kallas of Robert L. Gear & Co. A. W. Saunders & Co. and Dillon & Co. also were brokers.

REALTY BOARDS ASSIST NATION'S AVIATION CAUSE

In view of the interest being taken in aviation in Chicago at present, it is interesting to note what is being done to further this cause in other cities of the country by the real estate boards of the respective communities. St. Paul, Minn., has just acquired a 140 acre field through the coöperation of the St. Paul Real Estate board.

The Buffalo, N. Y., Real Estate board for several years has made a study of the aviation situation, giving its services to the city on this subject. And now Buffalo has just secured a 412 acre field. Detroit, Mich., one of the most alert of the American municipalities, has just secured three aviation fields, one municipally owned.

The Tacoma real estate board is behind a campaign to give that city an adequate landing field, and the Santa Monica bay district realty board of California is endeavoring to see that its area is adequately served by a field.

At present there are somewhat more than 200 municipally owned flying fields in the country.

OIL BURNER FIRM LEASES MICHIGAN AND OHIO CORNER

Harding Brothers, Inc., oil burners, have leased the first floor and basement at the southeast corner of Michigan and Ohio for ten years at a gross rental reported to be $325,000. It contains approximately 6,000 square feet. The lease carries an option to extend it five years at $57,500 a year.

The lessor is John W. Keogh, who erected the two story building a year or so ago. Lowell Baker of W. K. Young & Brother, negotiated the lease, which goes into effect Aug. 1. Alden, Latham & Young and Bussian & De Bolt were attorneys.

PLANS 3 STORY HOTEL BUILDING IN WINTHROP AVE.

Robert L. O'Toole will erect a three story and English basement apartment hotel at 5710-12 Winthrop avenue on the site there which he recently purchased from Robert L. O'Toole for a reported price of $30,000. The site measures 50x150 feet. A. T. Linder of H. W. Croxton & Co., was broker in the purchase of the property.

La Salle Street Bond Man Buys Co-op Studio Duplex

Sydney Gardiner, resident partner of Lage & Co., a La Salle street bond house, has purchased a studio duplex apartment of ten rooms and four baths on the 12th and 13th floors of the new 100 per cent coöperative apartment house at 1320 North State, through H. O. Stone & Co. Mr. Gardiner now lives at 237 East Delaware place.

A. C. MATHER TO BUILD TWO 519 FOOT SHAFTS

Radio and Arcade to Link Spires.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

ALONZO C. MATHER

Fondness for animals and a horror at seeing any dumb creature suffer were the keystones to the fortune of Alonzo C. Mather, Chicago and California millionaire head of the Mather Stock Car company, who last night telegraphed THE TRIBUNE from Buffalo details of one of Chicago's most interesting and unusual building projects—the world's tallest twin building project, to face on both Wacker drive and Michigan avenue. Herbert Hugh Riddle will be the architect.

Each of these twin Gothic towers will be 519 feet above street level and will be linked at their skymost peak with one of the most powerful radio broadcasting aerials in the world. A magnificent arcade will connect the bases of the two shafts, thus linking the two boulevards with a new covered thoroughfare.

Twin No. 1 on Wacker Drive.

The first of the twin skyclimbers will be at 345-51 Wacker drive, about thirty feet from the lot line of the London Guarantee building. It will soar skywards 519 feet above the boulevard level, which means it'll actually be two feet taller than the tip of the Jewelers' building, half a block to the southwest. The Jewelers' is actually 525 feet high, according to F. P. Dinkelberg, its architeet, but as Wacker drive is eight feet higher in front of the new Mather tower, the latter building is actually a trifle taller than the Jewelers'.

Following completion of the first Mather tower, its twin will be erected at 324-330 North Michigan avenue, where the three story Mather building now stands. The alley will be bridged over and a handsome arcade will run through from boulevard to drive.

To Be Erected by W. A. Illsley.

W. A. Illsley, who has been engaged in the construction of tall steel frame buildings in Chicago and adjacent cities for the last thirty-five years and who has just completed the Union League club, one of the world's finest club buildings, has been awarded the general contract. He is now taking figures.

Mr. Illsley states that if work begins the middle of August the caissons can be completed by October and that the first tower should be ready for tenants by May 1, 1927.

Will Be of Gothic Design.

According to Herbert Hugh Riddle the architecture will be along Gothic lines and the exterior will be of semiglazed terra cotta. The building above the twenty-fifth floor will be octagonal in shape. There'll be forty-two stories, surmounted by an observatory.

Mr. Mather recently bought the Wacker drive site, 65x100, from the Chicago Title & Trust company, trustees, for $800,000. Perry Ulrich was broker for Mr. Mather in the purchase and will have charge of the renting of the new towers. Mr. Ulrich states that the first six floors of Tower No. 1 will be devoted to exclusive shops. An attempt will be made to secure branch shops of some of New York's smartest stores.

Helps Suffering Cattle.

Many years ago when Alonzo C. Mather was a young man in his early twenties he noticed how terribly cattle suffered while being transported over railroads. His love of animals urged him to do something and he invented and put on the market a car in which cattle were treated humanely.

The Mather Stock Car company, of which he is president, is the largest of its kind in the world. At one time it had a maximum of 11,000 cars rolling over American and Canadian rails. The headquarters of the company are in the Mather building, site of Mather Tower No. 2. Mr. Mather now spends much of his time at his southern California home.

PLAN 3 STORY ADDITION FOR LOOP GARAGE

A three story addition to the Board of Trade garage, 428-38 Sherman street, is contemplated by the Atlantic Garage corporation, in which Max L. Teich and Carl C. Roessler of the Atlantic hotel are interested. The latter firm has just subleased the property and purchased the business from Mrs. Bess Sullivan Reptig. It also has arranged an additional ten year lease with the Lambert Tree estate, represented by Howard Grey and Mr. Loehr, trust officer of the Illinois Merchants bank. The building is now three stories high. All parties were represented by Ernest A. Teich of E. A. Teich & Co.

U. S. Gypsum Takes Three Floors in New Building

The United States Gypsum company, for 20 years at 205 West Monroe, has leased three floors in the "300 West Adams Building" now being erected by David Schetnitz. Newfeld & Co., were brokers.

ENGLISH CASTLE TAKEN FOR MODEL OF NEW BUILDING

Is Under Construction in Evanston.

CHARLES PEGLER.

Romantic old Yorkshire, England, famous for its pudding and castles, is to have some slight representation in modern Chicago, through an interesting apartment building nearing completion at 906 to 916 Sheridan road, Evanston. For the owner, Charles Pegler, was born at Leeds, Yorkshire, and included in his boyhood memories is one of Skipton castle, located near his birthplace.

So when Mr. Pegler decided to erect another building he thought to have his flitting memory made a little more permanent through unromantic stone and brick. Consequently he instructed his architect, Anthony H. Quitsow, to take the motif for the design from the previously mentioned castle.

The result is a pleasing combination of battlement, buttress and turret, getting away from the everyday type of building. Skipton Castle is a product of the Tudor time and the interior design will be in harmony with this period.

A Building to Last.

Mr. Pegler in discussing the construction of his building said that he wants it to be in first class condition many years hence, so he is seeing to it that only the best materials are used. He explained that he was convinced that this was the only policy, from complaints from the owners of many of the shoddy structures put up during the last few years that they have too many vacancies. This is Mr. Pegler's twelfth building.

A detail that ought to be of interest to those apartment inhabitants who have Charleston fans living above them is a liberal use of sound deadener in the flooring. And another of appeal to the women is the placing of the old fashioned knocker on the front doors of the apartments. We are sure of the latter because we recently watched a number of charming ladies enter a door on which there was a knocker and each went into ecstasies over it.

The West Tower will have thirty apartments of four and five rooms each. There are to be quarters for bathers, locker rooms and other conveniences. Baby carriage garages will keep the halls clear of these vehcles.

A Motor Coach.

But Mr. Pegler's pride is a handsome motor coach which he provides for the free use of his tenants in a nearby building and which will be used by his new ones. The coach delivers children to and from school, takes the ladies to the railway station and to the shopping district of Evanston and we suppose that if this prohibition was not in force it would go after father's beer in the evenings.

The project when completed will represent an investment of $245,000. Baird & Warner have underwritten a bond issue of $172,000 on it and will have the management of the property.

H. L. EVANS PLANS BIT OF SCOTLAND AT MUNDELEIN

A wanderer might fancy himself in Scotland from the setting and street posts that will greet him a few years hence in a new subdivision which H. Le Roy Evans, 4554 Broadway, will put on the market shortly. The district will be called Bel-Ayre and the names of the streets and other features will recall the land of oatmeal and the golf ball.

The eighty acres will be divided into 308 lots and they are to be of extra size. Winding roads will help give the district the picturesqueness of the other side. Mr. Evans recently visited the 2,300 acre country club development of J. G. Nichols at Kansas City, Mo., from which he has borrowed a number of ideas. Among these are sunken gardens, artistic drinking fountains at corners, etc.

Mr. Evans is building a sales office for his company on a corner lot diagonally across from the new terminal of the North Shore line. The North Shore line is beautifying the property around the station.

Catholic Bishop Buys Site for New Church and School

Mrs. Frances Kelly has sold to the Catholic Bishop of Chicago 800 feet on Grant, Kedvale, and Karlov avenes, in what is known as Evanston Highlands, for church and school purposes. McMann & Hoban were brokers for the buyer, Frank Mason, of the Paramount Realty corporation, represented the seller. The price is reported to have been $50,000.

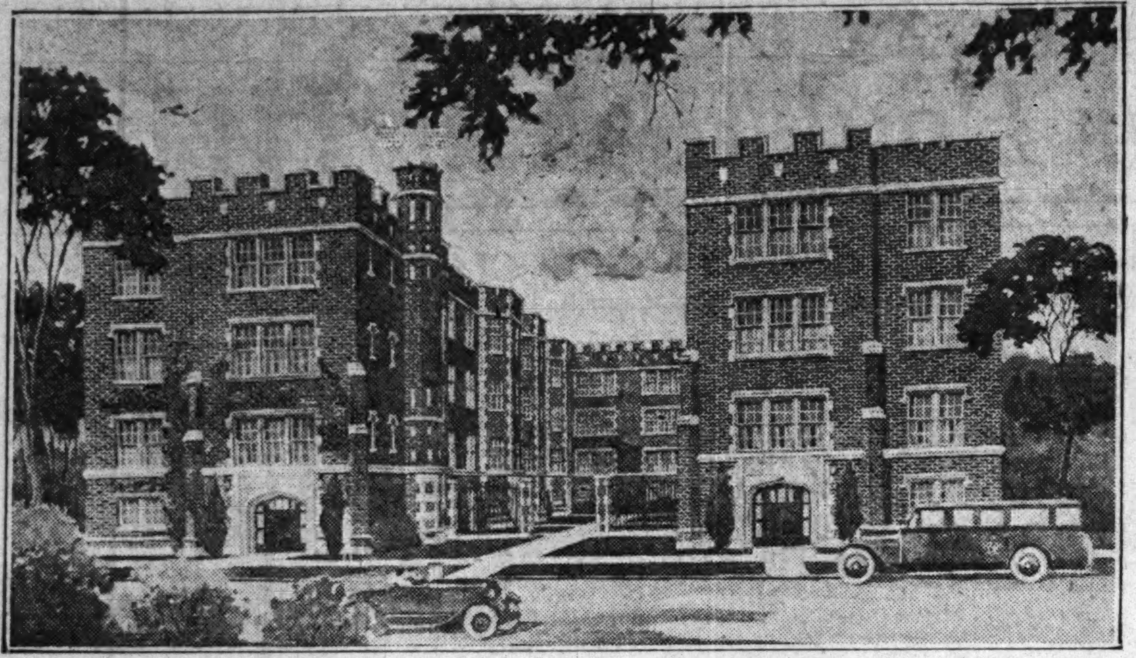
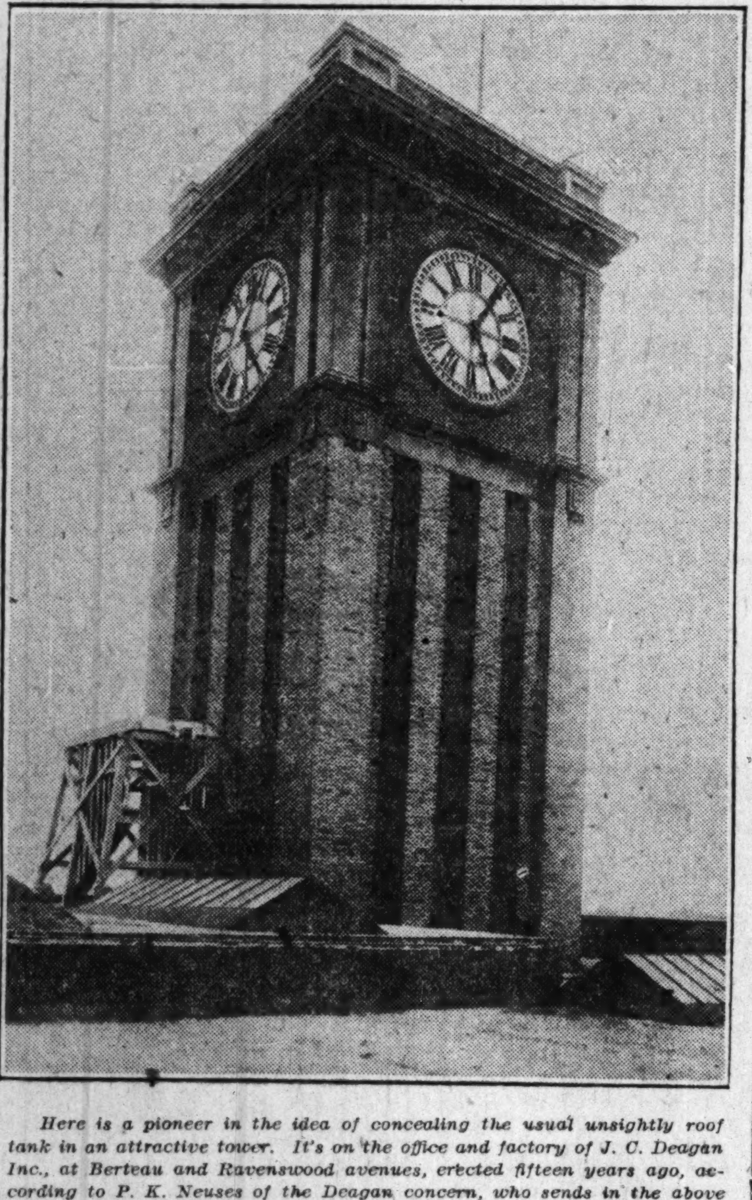
APARTMENTS FOR THIRTY



Charles Pegler has taken Skipton Castle, near his boyhood town in Yorkshire, England, as the motif for the design of his apartment building, nearing completion at 906 to 916 Sheridan road, Evanston. The structure, designed by Anthony H. Quitsow, will contain thirty apartments of four and five rooms each. It will be known as the West Tower apartments. It will represent an investment of $245,000 and Baird & Warner have underwritten a bond issue of $172,000 on it. E. L. Bloomster made the above rendering.

TOWER-TANK PIONEER



Here is a pioneer in the idea of concealing the usual unsightly roof tank in an attractive tower. It's on the office and factory of J. C. Deagan Inc., at Berteau and Ravenswood avenues, erected fifteen years ago, according to P. K. Neuses of the Deagan concern, who sends in the above picture. The architect was W. Gibbons Uffendell.

"All these years we've been adding to the beauty of Chicago and feel we're entitled to some credit," writes Mr. Neuses.

PLANT OF NOTED WAGON MAKERS IS UNDER LEASE

The various buildings belonging to the old Peter Schuttler company, formerly one of the largest wagon manufacturers in the country, at 22d and Rockwell, have been remodeled and are being leased through Hodge, Nicolson & Porter, Inc. Among those who have taken leases are Lyon and Healy, Inc.; The Loewenthal company, rubber and rag merchants; M. Norian, paper boxes; Big Bay Lumber company; J. C. Moninger company, greenhouse material; Standard Motor Parts company, and the Lanzit Corrugated Box company. Of the 300,000 square feet for rent, 243,000 have been leased.

Buys Sixty Acres West of Antlers Club—$690 Acre

Walter Z. Blow has purchased sixty acres of farm land just west of the Antlers Country club from the Union Bank of Chicago for a reported $41,500, or at the rate of $690 an acre. C. Pinkous of the Glen Ellyn office of A. C. Hoy & Co. made the deal.

LIONS PROVIDE WOODLAWN BOYS WITH PLAY AREA

The Woodlawn Lions' club has just demonstrated one use that may be made of vacant property. Theodore F. Becker has donated his property, measuring 100x165 feet, at the northwest corner of 63d and Prairie, to the club for ten years for use as a boys' playground. There will be all sorts of equipment for athletics and games. But the chief feature will be an outdoor bicycle track with twelve laps to the mile. For the older boys of the neighborhood a horseshoe ring will be an attraction. The members of the club, eighty in all, are providing equipment for the playground, which will be free to any one. A. L. Wolfe is the organization's director of athletics.

NOTED ATHLETES TO DIRECT GAMES REALTORS' DAY

Annual Outing to Be Held at Mooseheart.

GRAHAM KERNWEIN.

Baseball and horseshoe pitching will be the principal sports at the annual outing of the Chicago Real Estate board, which will be held at Mooseheart, Ill., on Wednesday, July 28. Looks bad, at first, for the golfers; but everything will turn out all right for them in the end, as this popular pastime will have its inning on a day later in the season.

The various teams of the board will compete for the baseball championship, and some warm games are expected. These teams will be chosen by lot, and, in order that there may be no complaint on the quality of the umpiring, the board has invited a number of prominent athletes to serve as umpires.

Among those who have been invited are Graham Kernwein, last year's captain of the football team of the University of Chicago; "Wally" Marks, who will captain the University of Chicago football squad this fall; Joseph B. Duggan, one of the stars on the basketball teams of the University of Chicago for 1924 and 1925; J. J. Lipski, one of the best known Big Ten football officials; Avery Brundage, noted University of Illinois athlete and representative on the United States Olympic team, and Edward Lindberg, famous quarter miler and another member of the Olympic team. With this array of prominent athletes directing the destinies of the various games, it is not expected that there will be much trouble over decisions.

"Nothing mars a baseball game so much as incompetent umpiring," said Earle G. Krumrine, general chairman of the board's outing committee, "and our committee determined to do away with the habit of selecting umpires 'out of the crowd,' as has been the custom at past outings. It is true that these men did the best they could, but many of them were not very familiar with the rules and proper methods of umpiring.

"The baseball championship of the Chicago Real Estate board is no mean prize, and the various teams contest for the championship as spiritedly and as heatedly as if the world's championship were at stake. We consider ourselves very fortunate in being able to obtain the services of these men."

The members of the board and their guests will journey to Mooseheart on a special train over the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin Electric line, leaving Chicago at 10:45 a. m. July 28. The entire afternoon will be occupied with the baseball games, horseshoe pitching, and a number of races. The day will end with a chicken dinner, served by the ladies of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Robertson & Co. to Open New South Side Subdivision

John R. Robertson & Co. have subdivided an additional twenty-three acres of their extensive holdings along the soon to be electrified Illinois Central. The new subdivision is east of the I. C. at Ivanhoe, two blocks south of the station, and extends south to the Little Calumet river.

The firm will follow its custom of reserving every fifth lot to be sold only to customers who agree to build at once. Sewer and water mains have been installed and paving is now being laid by Robertson & Co. Several two flat buildings are to be erected by the subdivider.

BUY MAXWELL STREET BUILDING.

The one and one-half story building at 835 Maxwell street, 75x100, has been sold by J. K. Ferguson to Louis A. and Max S. Cohn, of L. A. Cohn & Brothers, for a reported $58,000, subject to $30,000. It has foundations capable of carrying two more stories. Isador Ferguson & Co. were brokers. Emanuel M. Schwartz and Benjamin B. Morris were attorneys.

CHICAGOAN BUYS KAMMES FARM ON BUTTERFIELD RD.

John J. Rahlf, vice president of Wollenberger & Co., mortgage bond house, yesterday purchased the old Mathias Kammes farm at the northeast corner of Butterfield and Wheaton roads, from Josie Buhl. There are 172 acres and, according to Brown, Fox & Blumberg, attorneys for the buyer, the price was in the neighborhood of $1,300 an acre.

The property is across the road from the Antlers Country club and a short distance south of the Chicago Golf club. G. Arthur Buhl, son of the seller, represented his mother in the deal. Fred Marx was attorney for the seller.

Woman Purchases Three Apartments on Kingston

Margaret Quinn has purchased the three apartments at 7653 Kingston avenue from Axel Soderlund for a reported $32,000. Mary E. Watson of Robert L. Gear & Co. and A. B. Lavine were brokers.

WISCONSIN MAN JOINS CHICAGO PLANNING GROUP

Expert on Suburban Business Lands.

J. M. ALBERS.
[Chambers Photo.]

J. M. Albers, formerly secretary of the Kenosha plan commission, and for nine years the building commissioner for Kenosha, has joined the Chicago Regional Planning association as manager of the department of subdivision plats and zoning. Representing the city of Kenosha, Mr. Albers has been active in this branch of the regional plan since its organization and he has been active in control of land subdivision and in extending the practice of zoning.

"Zoning ordinances must be correctly drawn, they must be reasonable, and they must not try to do things they aren't expected to do," Mr. Albers said in discussing his new position. "Two extremes may be found in some of the typical ordinances; one where a community tries to keep out all business to the disadvantage of its citizens, and the other where a community lays out enough business and industrial area to support a population many times what the territory can hold.

"The regional planning association, through its committee on subdivision plats and zoning, is summarizing actual conditions in a selected number of suburbs. Our Mr. Coleman Woodbury, associated with Dr. Richard T. Ely's Institute of Land Economics, Northwestern university, is obtaining figures on the frontage of business property actually in use at the present time.

Get Correct Information

"He is comparing that frontage with the number of people actually residing in the community, and from that correct and basic information we draw tentative conclusions that in a community of a given character there can be supported between thirty-seven and fifty-four front feet of first floor business property for each one hundred people in the village.

"Preliminary figures from nine of the eighteen incorporated places we are studying, show surprising uniformity. If the cities and villages yet to be studied in other directions from Chicago fall close to these figures we will feel reasonably sure of our ground when we say that it is inadvisable to plat a subdivision or to zone a community with quantities of business frontage far in excess of, nor much less than these figures.

"In the following nine communities," Mr. Albers continued, "an average of forty-three front feet of first floor business property is actually in use for every 100 persons. The villages already studied, and the figures for each are as follows:

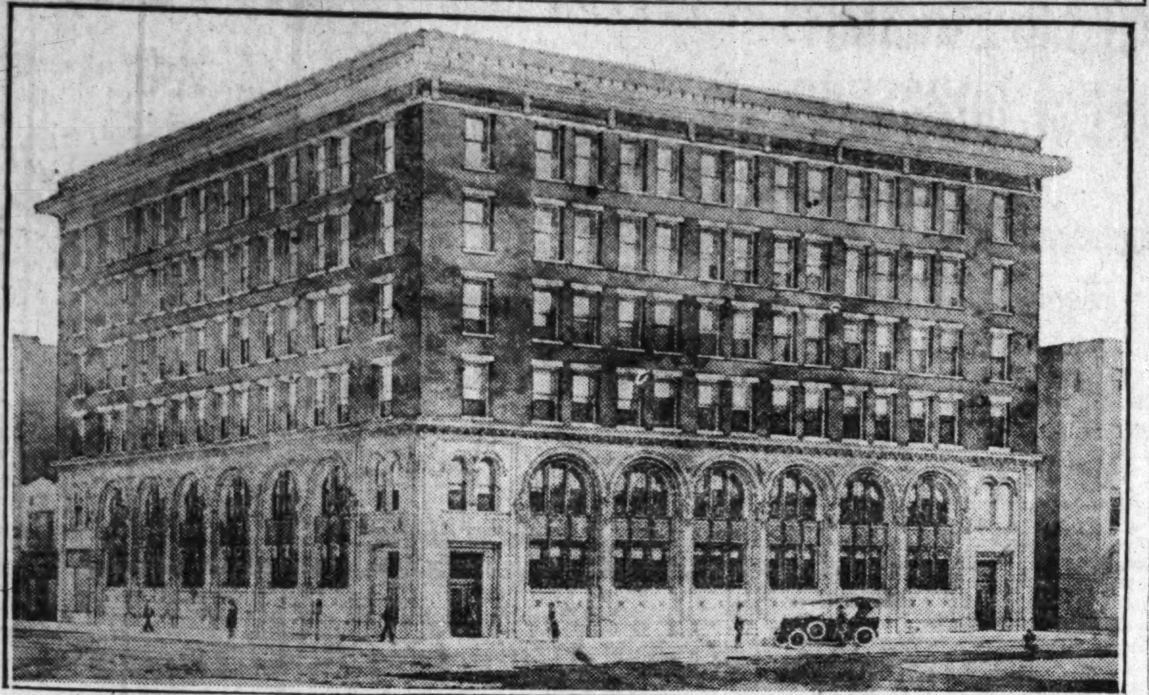
City—	Pop. '26 Estm.	Tot. No. of Stores July, '26	Tot. Bus. Frntg. [In ft.]	Business Frntg. 100 Peo. [In ft.]
Wilmette	12,500	164	5,420	43.4
Winnetka	10,000	131	3,900	39.0
Glencoe	5,000	53	1,827	36.5
Lake Forest	5,200	93	2,874	54.6
Villa Park	4,000	54	1,636	40.4
Glen Ellyn	6,000	84	2,343	39.0
Wheaton	6,500	95	3,042	46.8
Park Ridge	8,000	97	2,924	36.8
Des Plaines	7,500	108	3,817	50.8
Average				43

Some Require More.

"This shows an average of seventy-five people per store, and the average store frontage is thirty-one feet. In Lake Forest, Wheaton, and Des Plaines, the population seems to require the greatest amount of frontage, being farther from the trading centers in Chicago, and, therefore, supporting more stores; or, as is the case of Lake Forest, there is a relatively high per capita wealth. This is further shown in the large number of small millinery, gift and similar shops in Lake Forest.

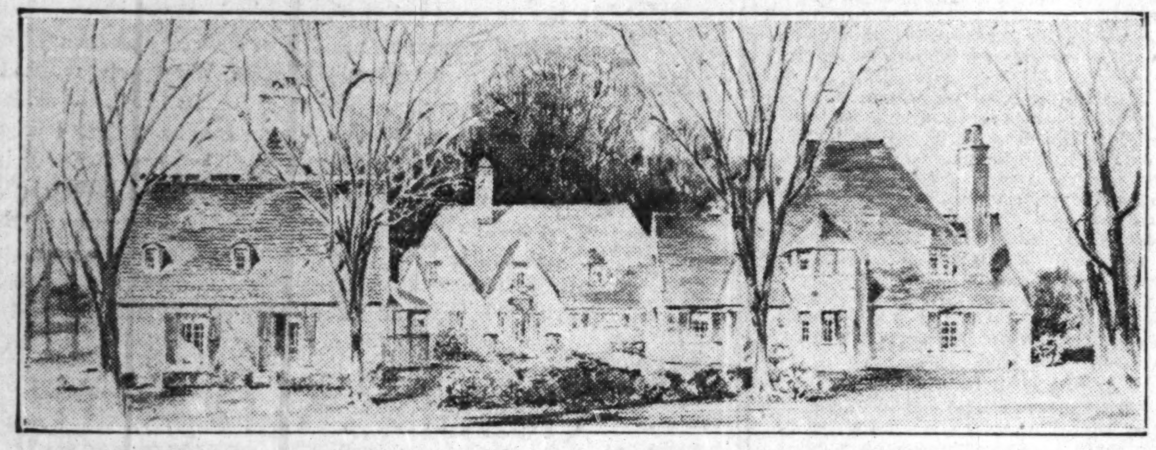
"In Glencoe the low frontage figure is due in part to the fact that at least 10 per cent of the Hubbard Woods business area in the adjacent village of Winnetka is supported by Glencoe patronage, just a few feet across the dividing line."

BRIGHTENS HALSTED AND MADISON



The Mid-City Trust and Savings bank is spending $500,000 to remodel its six story home at the southwest corner of Halsted and Madison streets. Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton are the architects. Work will start immediately and completion is expected in nine months. William J. Rathje is president of the bank.

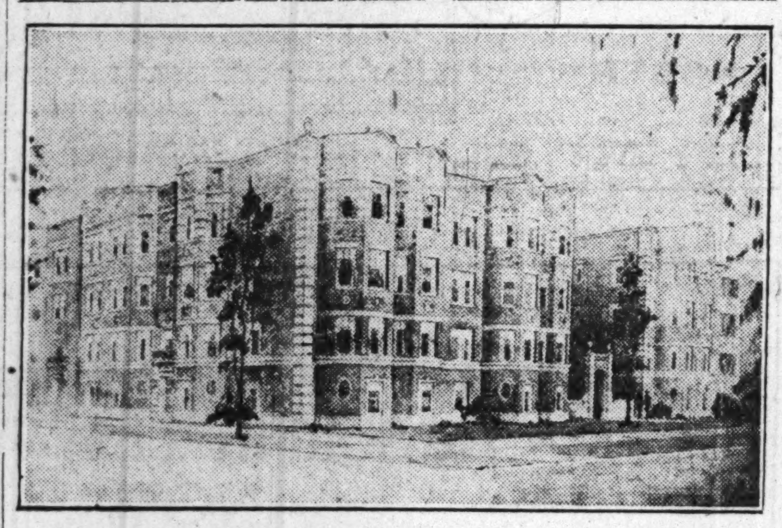
WHO SAYS FISHING DOESN'T PAY?



Here's an interesting architectural treatment of a trio of residences for three Lake Bluff families. The middle house is to be the home of Bob Becker, when he isn't working hard fishing or hunting for The Tribune. The one on the right will be lived in by Thomas R. Shaver, consulting engineer, who doesn't live up to his name so far as size is concerned, for he's so big the house is being made extra large. A. P. Jenkesson, an insurance man, will own the third residence. All will have solid brick walls with random slate roofs and with insulation used.

Although each house owner will have his own yard there'll be a common, or coöperative garden, with a pool which each residence will face. The houses will overlook Lake Michigan. The architects are Wallace F. Yerkes and Edgar A. Lynch, who have gone to France for their design motifs. The trio will be erected at the northwest corner of Sunrise and Prospect avenues.

SOUTH SIDE APARTMENTS



E. J. Carlson is having erected at the northwest corner of 81st street and Ingleside avenue a forty-three apartment building with three floors and an English basement. The apartments will be of kitchenette type of two, three, and four rooms each. Lindblad & Carlson are the architects for the building, whose design is an adaptation of the Georgian style. There is to be an arched entrance to a large court, in which will be a fountain. In the basement are to be a large loungeroom for the grownups and two playrooms for the children. The cost will be $200,000. Completion is set for July.

MID-CITY BANK TO REMODEL HOME; COST $500,000

Arrange to Permit Night Deposits.

Work will start immediately on the remodeling of the Mid-City Trust and Savings bank building at the southwest corner of Halsted and Madison streets. Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton are the architects.

The cost is expected to be around $500,000 and when work is completed the bank expects to have one of the most attractive homes on the west side. The structure is six stories high and of steel and fireproof construction, with the exterior of face brick with terra cotta trim.

The interior is to be ornate in marble and cream colored terra cotta. The basement will be changed to incorporate the safety deposit vault. A feature will be the installation of a chute to a separate safety deposit vault, which will permit money to be deposited at night. Other banks have adopted this feature lately.

The bank will occupy the first three floors of its building which measures 125x125 feet. This gives it one of the largest banking floor spaces of any institution of its kind outside the loop.

The officers are: William J. Rathje, president; D. B. Kennedy, vice president, and H. O. Bengsten, cashier.

STANDARD OIL BUYS CORNER.

The Standard Oil company has bought the northwest corner of Milwaukee avenue and Ohio street, 97x7?x64, from Frank Herst for a stated $30,150, to be the site of an oil station.

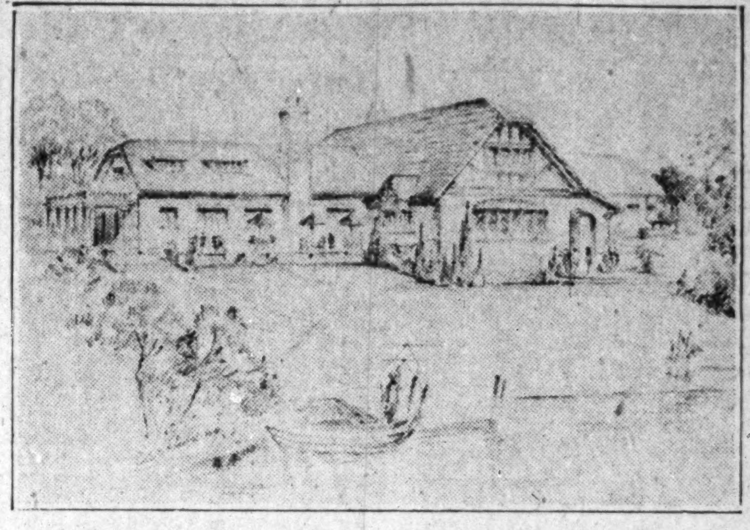
Morris Wolf Co. Moves to Franklin and Quincy

The Morris Woolf Silk company is moving from the northwest corner of Adams and Wells streets, where they were located for seventeen years, to the Smith building at the southwest corner of Franklin and Quincy. Robert White & Co. arranged the lease for the silk house with the R. P. Smith and Sons company.

SOUTH MICHIGAN AVENUE DEAL.

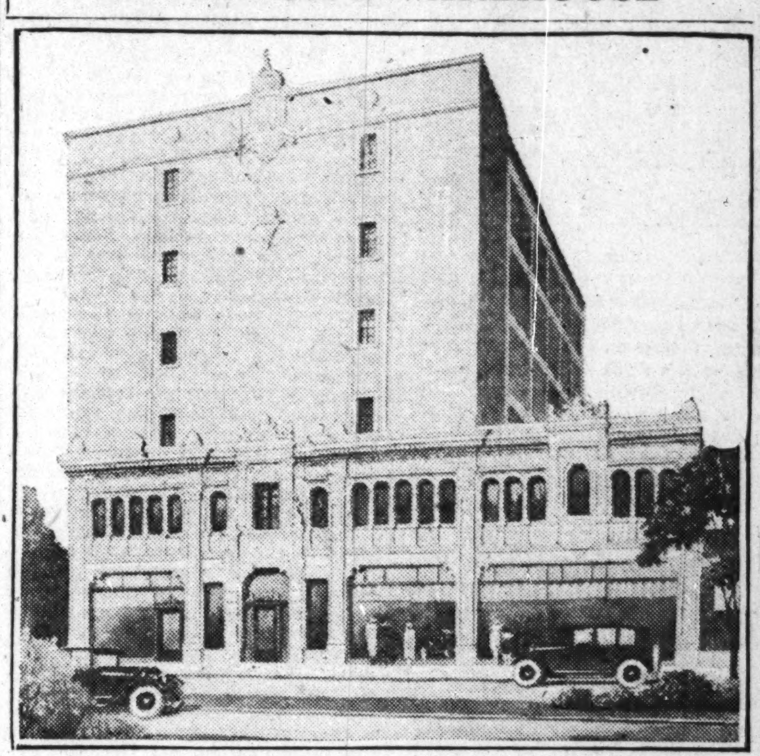
The six apartment building at 4933-35 South Michigan avenue has been sold by James P. Foley to Richard Gievens for a reported $46,000, subject to mortgages aggregating $21,000. The lot is 50x125. Alfred Hamburger and William Y. Browne were brokers.

UNIVERSITY COUNTRY CLUB



L. B. Harding designed the above clubhouse, announced to be erected by the University Country club, a new organization. The 220 acre grounds are half a mile east of McHenry. More is told about this on page 1 of this section.

SOUTH SIDE WAREHOUSE



The above picture shows the Available Fireproof Storage warehouse, which is now under construction at 7728-30-32 Stony Island avenue. Frederick Stanton is the architect for the structure, which will be six stories tall. The greater part of the first floor, running back to Harper avenue on the west, will be occupied by the Studebaker company as a sales and service station. The owner of the building is Charles J. Weber. E. L. Bloomster made the above rendering.

B. B. Drell Buys Empire Theater in W. Madison St.

Benjamin B. Drell has purchased the Empire theater building at 671-79 West Madison street from the Empire Theater Enterprise, Inc., for a reported $275,000, subject to $150,000. The seller took back a lease on the theater and will continue to operate it as a movie, but there is a possibility it may be run as a burlesque house. The building is six stories high and contains offices as well as an auditorium. Gould & Baskin represented the sellers as brokers and Blum & Sugarman represented the buyers.

BIRCHWOOD-ROBEY CORNER SOLD.

The sixteen apartments at the northwest corner of Birchwood and Robey street have been sold by Mary Donahue to Theodore Steinert, through L. M. Eilert & Co., for an undisclosed consideration.

Prudential Insurance Co. Makes Huge Realty Loans

The Prudential Insurance company of America made a total of $20,802,767 in loans on real estate during the month of June, according to information given by the company. Of this amount $14,807,642 was on dwellings and apartment houses in the United States and Canada, and the rest was advanced on other types of city property and farms.

Pays $40,000 for Three Stores in N. Clark Street

The building containing three stores in the 5100 block of North Clark street has been sold by Henry Shlutz to James S. Ford for an indicated $40,000, subject to $13,000.

TELLS HOW BOYS ARE TRAINED FOR PLUMBING TRADE

City Technical Schools Aid Education.

BY THOMAS WREN.

William Bogan, assistant superintendent of the Chicago public schools, is credited by officials of the Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' union as being instrumental in perfecting the system of education at the apprenticeship school, classed by many prominent builders as the foremost of its kind in the country. One of the union leaders giving this credit to the educator is Bernard L. Cruise, for years secretary-treasurer of the plumbers' organization.

BERNARD L. CRUISE.

Mr. Bogan, Cruise asserted, was an ardent supporter of the apprenticeship cause, and strived constantly for a number of years to point out to those opposed to the plan the ultimate good the school angle would accomplish.

"The school superintendent was then principal of the Lane Technical High school," said "Barney" Cruise, who is known by thousands of trade unionists both in Chicago and the country for his constructive work in behalf of the labor movement in general.

Show Good Results.

"Under his supervision at the Lane school the apprentice boys soon began to show good results owing to the fact that the instructors assigned to the classes were artists in their professions. Courses were given in mathematics, drawing, and last, but not least, a finished mechanic of the plumbing trade and a member of the plumbers' union was on the job to teach the apprentice those angles of the trade which a great many had no opportunity to learn while working outside on jobs.

"It was in 1910 that the plumbers' union came to the conclusion there must be something done to govern the apprentices in the plumbing trade. A committee was appointed with the result that apprentices of the plumbing trade were registered under the jurisdiction of the Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' association.

"We received the hearty coöperation of some plumbing contractors while in some instances we met with the disapproval of others, the latter assuming the attitude that they should be allowed to hire as many apprentices as they saw fit and pay them accordingly. This opposition was finally overcome to the benefit of all concerned."

Started in 1913.

Mr. Cruise said a few years later the apprentice question was taken up with that board of education, resulting in the establishment in 1913 of the school courses in the Lane Technical High school.

"At this time," continued Mr. Cruise, "every boy learning the plumbing trade was required to attend school one-half day each week. The other days, of course, were spent out on jobs under the supervision of skilled journeymen. I might mention the fact that when the apprentice classes started the Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' association agreed to supply free of cost all material, tools, and anything the boys needed in school to carry on this work. The apprentices under our jurisdiction are given their books and union cards, and the entire outlay, including their education, doesn't cost them a penny. The plumbing contractor who employs an apprentice pays him for the time he spends in school.

"This time, by the way, has been increased from one-half day to one whole day each week.

Serves Five Years.

"Rules governing the apprentice learning the plumbing trade make it compulsory for him to be between the ages of 16 and 21 years, the terms of apprenticeship shall be five years, three years of which shall be under supervision of a journeyman plumber, while the fourth year apprentice shall begin rendering service under supervision of employers."

Mr. Cruise said for the first six months apprentices are paid $12 a week, second six months $15 a week, second year $18 a week, third year $20 a week, fourth year $30 a week, and fifth year $40 a week.

"We have a member in our union who does nothing else but look after apprentices," said the union executive. "He is one of the oldest active members in the union and his name is P. J. Burke, better known to the trade as 'Mayor' Burke.

Get Good Positions.

"A great many of our apprentices have high school and college educations, and it is a common occurrence to have one of our boys to graduate from the apprenticeship class and accept a position as an estimator for his employer.

"It is our aim and object to uplift the plumbing trade and at the same time teach a boy the trade in a way that will make him a credit to himself and to the plumbing business."

The plumbers' apprenticeship school has an enrollment of 300 boys and young men.

FARM and GARDEN

Iron Ponies Push Out Hand Tools in Market Gardening

Tractors Lighten Work for the Truck Farmer.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

GARDEN tractors are rapidly replacing the hand tools used in planting, cultivating, and harvesting vegetables in the Chicago trucking district. Thousands of the iron ponies have been put to work during the last three or four years in the market gardening area around the city, doing away with much of the back-breaking work that was once accomplished with the hand and wheel hoes.

Before the garden tractor came into use truckers had to keep their noses to the grindstone, spending all of their time digging and sweating to grow and save their crops, leaving little extra to spend in selling their vegetables after they were grown. With the garden tractor these truck farmers can do their work in producing the crops with much less labor, giving them time to prepare their products for the roadside stand and sell their vegetables at a profitable price direct to the consumer.

Perhaps no other factor in recent years has had more to do with relieving the grower of the hard work in the field, giving him a chance to handle his own marketing problems, than has the garden tractor, which does the work of three or four men.

One Man's Experience.

Fred Bestmann, a sucessful producer and retailer of vegetables, who sells thousands of dollars worth of fresh garden products over his roadside counter each year on Ballard road near Des Plaines, Ill., does all of his planting, practically all of the cultivating, and much of the harvesting of his vegetables with a small garden tractor which he has been using for four years.

With from three to five men in addition to himself, Mr. Bestmann is handling thirty-two acres where he grows from two to three crops every year and sells all of the vegetables over his stand in front of his home. His experience is fairly typical of at least fifty other truck gardeners in his immediate neighborhood in the Des Plaines river valley.

With a few simple attachments the garden tractor is put to use on Mr. Bestmann's farm as soon as the ground is ready to plant and kept busy until the end of harvest. He seeds all of the crops in the open garden with a three row planter drawn by the garden tractor.

Time Is Saved.

"I do all of my seeding now in about two days and when we did the work by hand it took at least a week," said Mr. Bestmann. "With the gardent tractor I can cultivate more vegetables than four men can with wheel hoes. I also use the tractor in harvesting many of the crops. With a sharp blade attached to the cultivator frame I cut off the spinach leaves about one inch below the surface of the ground. In harvesting garlic hulls I cut the roots loose with this same blade by running down about six inches below the surface. I use the tractor in harvesting onions, running the blade about three or four inches deep to avoid cutting the bulbs.

"The garden tractor is a great labor saver for those of us who grow several acres of vegetables. There are at least 50 small garden tractors like mine in this neighborhood. I've had mine for years and it has taken a great burden off my hands," he said. "I now have plenty of time to take care of my customers at the stand."

Started Four Years Ago.

Mr. Bestmann started the retailing of vegetables at his front gate four years ago. He first used a small table in displaying his products. Today he is selling thousands of dollars worth of products over his stand.

He has also found that poultry and eggs may be profitably handled in this way. He raises about 150 chickens from his small flock of 50 hens and last year he sold the spring chickens at 25 cents a pound when butchers were offering him only 18 cents a pound. His customers told him they were having to pay 50 and 60 cents a pound for the same kind of birds.

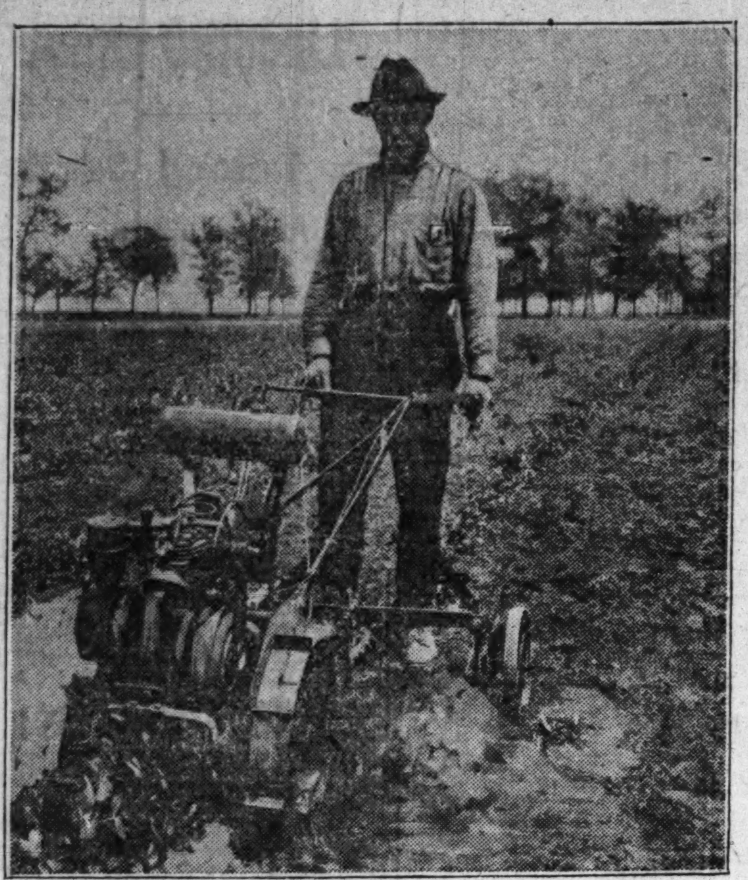
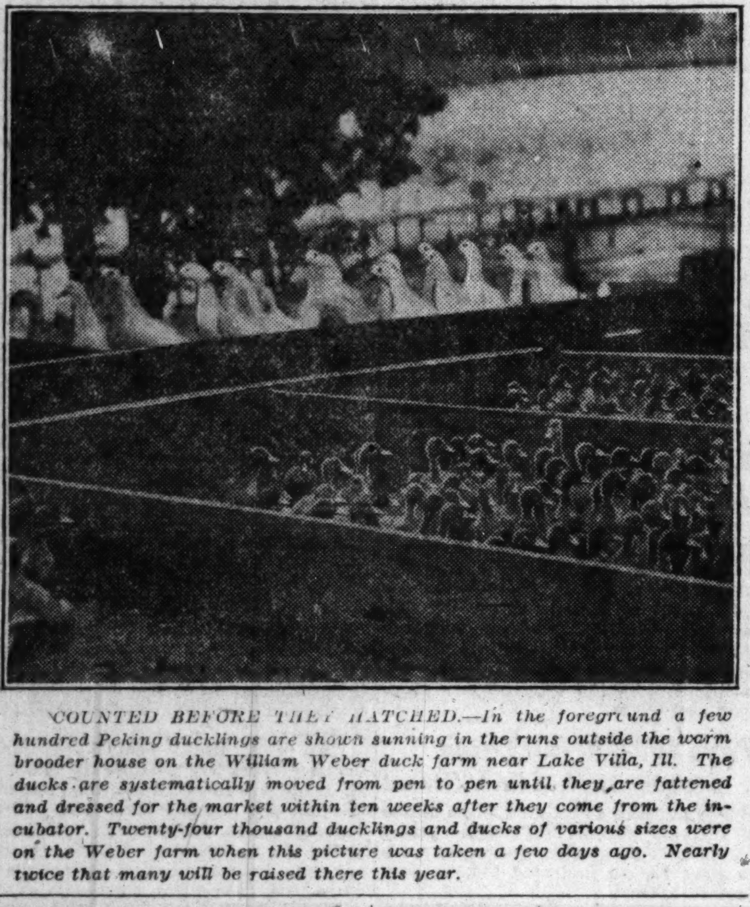
THREE MEN MISSING HERE



GARDEN TRACTOR DOING WORK OF FOUR MEN.—With this tiny but powerful machine Fred Bestmann, shown at the handles, is able to cultivate more vegetables in a day than could four men with wheel hoes. Mr. Bestmann, who sells all of his crops over a roadside stand on Ballard road near Des Plaines, Ill., has been using this garden tractor for four years. He plants all of his vegetable seeds with a three row planter, cultivating practically all of his crops and harvesting many of them with this little iron pony. This picture was taken a few days ago, when Mr. Bestmann was cultivating this field of peas and tomatoes.

QUACKER DUCKS



COUNTED BEFORE THEY HATCHED.—In the foreground a few hundred Peking ducklings are shown sunning in the runs outside the warm brooder house on the William Weber duck farm near Lake Villa, Ill. The ducks are systematically moved from pen to pen until they are fattened and dressed for the market within ten weeks after they come from the incubator. Twenty-four thousand ducklings and ducks of various sizes were on the Weber farm when this picture was taken a few days ago. Nearly twice that many will be raised there this year.

CROP DEVOURING LOCUST HORDES VISIT HONDURAS

UTILLA ISLAND, Spanish Honduras.—A plague of locusts is sweeping through Spanish Honduras. Billions of these voracious insects are making their way through the republic on the Pacific side, stripping everything on their onward march. They have swept the departments of Gracias Copan and Comagua and are now headed towards Nicaragua. At times the locusts lay on the ground three feet deep and when they rise into the air they darken the sun. At times they are so thick on the limbs of the cocoanut trees that the branches break beneath their weight. They make a terrible army and they strike terror into the hearts of the people as they see the hordes approaching and hear the roar of the billions of these creatures sweeping through the air.

In the interior of Spanish Honduras they only plant corn once a year, owing to the lower temperatures in this region. The locusts have already destroyed this year's crop. The result is that there is a tremendous shortage of this great Central American staple food.

The government of Spanish Honduras has removed the duty on corn, potatoes, rice and beans, in order that the sufferers might be able to get these important foods at a cheaper rate.

The locusts have cleaned up Salvador and in their wake they are leaving nothing standing but bare stalks and stems. Not a leaf, not a blade of grass, not a single vegetable survives in their track. The desolate scene which they leave behind is terrible to behold. Sometimes heaps of them are saturated with gasoline and fired, but the destruction which follows is only a "drop in the bucket" to the billions that pass on undisturbed.

Better Market for Better Beef Is Aim of National Group

"BETTER beef for those who want it," is the slogan adopted by the National Better Beef committee which is calling a general meeting of live stock and meat interests for the purpose of organizing a permanent national association to promote a broader market for well finished cattle of the beef type. The meeting will be held at the Baltimore hotel, Kansas City, Mo., July 22 and 23.

Associations of breeders, feeders, and all allied interests are being asked to send representatives to the conference.

The organization committee is headed by W. W. Wright, a farmer and breeder. Other members of the committee are: Frank W. Harding, general executive of the American Shorthorn Breeders' association; R. J. Kinzer, secretary of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association; W. H. Tomhave, secretary of the American Aberdeen-Angus Breeders' association; B. H. Heide, secretary-general manager of the International Live Stock exposition, and Louis D. Hall, temporary organization executive.

The announcement of the meeting sent out from the committee's headquarters at 842 Exchange avenue, Union Stockyards, Ill., says that the United States department of agriculture is now prepared to coöperate actively, and contracts are already being made by leading railways, hotels and other buyers of dressed beef of the best grade for delivery of government-certified products.

The main idea back of the movement is to pay the farmer who raises and feeds a [illegible] grade beef animal a fair price, [illegible] that will be in proportion to the effort put into the production of quality animals, and offer the producer some incentive for the growing of good live stock. A direct blow is aimed at the unscrupulous jobber and retailer.

The announcement says that it is believed the time is ripe for aggressive efforts on the part of producers to take advantage of standardization "to the end that substitution of inferior grades for prime beef by unscrupulous jobbers and retailers may be checked. It is understood that leading packers and the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers stand ready to assist in the movement to encourage a larger use of fine beef in all the great centers of population, and that the proposed organization will be able to render efficient constructive service in the interest of both cattlemen and consumers."

BRITISH YOUTHS LURED BY LAND IN WEST CANADA

WINNIPEG Canada.—"Food, first!"

"No, a bath!"

"But I say food, and tell them a Cockney said it."

From a chorus of voices these were the distinguishable demands of a party of British boys who arrived in Winnipeg from overseas.

Col. G. A. Brinton was officer commanding the party, which is the first from the schools of agriculture instituted by the British ministry of labor for the purpose of training youths for Canadian and Australian farms. They were a fine type of young manhood. There were 55 boys in the group.

Nobody was downhearted, in spite of the immediate and strenuous demands of the boys for food or the bath. Surrounding their "O. C." they formed a jolly crowd, brimming with health and high spirits. Every one of them was ready to take on any job, from turning the sod to the premiership of the Dominion.

The boys had had four months training, Col. Brinton explained. He is a Canadian farmer himself, having operated a farm at Indian Head for 33 years. He came from England before that time. On organization of the British Agricultural college at Brand, he was put in charge. The college accommodated 350 boys at a time. This was the first group to be sent out. For the rest of this year, boys for Australia would be under training. The first group for that dominion would be sent out at Christmas.

EUROPEAN BRICK PERILS PRODUCT OF U. S. CONCERNS

Americans Say Industry Faces Annihilation.

The brick industry of the United States, or at any rate that portion of it located along the nation's seaboards, is facing grave peril from inroads made by European brick manufacturers, according to a report prepared by the Common Brick Manufacturers' Association of America. The Belgian manufacturers are the American makers' chief rivals in this respect.

The situation arises from the fact that heavy clay products are on the free tariff list and so manufacturers here have no protection against the cheaply made foreign products. Workers in the European clay plants receive about one-fourth the wages of American labor, and the advantage of the former may be readily seen.

Trade Employs 113,000.

The brick manufacturers' association states that there are 113,000 people employed by the industry, which has a weekly pay roll of $2,800,000. It likens this group to a city of 1,000,000, this number being obtained by adding the families of the individual workers and the trades people and others who serve them.

Thus, the loss to the nation should the brick industry be annihilated is graphically illustrated. However, there would be a considerably larger loss to the country through damage to other industries having business with the brick makers. These would include coal mines and the railroads.

Belgian brick was first imported into the United States in 1923 when about 2,500,000 common bricks were received. In 1924 the importation had grown to 18,000,000, and in 1925 it was approximately 50,000,000.

Foreign bricks are sold at a point just below the American product, giving slight benefit to the American public and just about ruining the American brick worker, according to the association. It is stated that if the foreign inroads continue at the present rate it will not be long before the American product is completely displaced.

As eighty per cent of the American bricks are used within the area served by ocean shipping, the menace to American concerns is apparent. Incidentally, the American plants are capable of producing without further expansion twice as much as they are now doing. So far the plants in the Chicago district have not been hurt.

Skyscraper Materials Would Build Small Town

The layman's conception of the magnitude of skyscrapers is generally formed by a cursory glance at the distance the buildings extend into the air.

Another interesting angle of the situation is furnished by Todd, Robertson & Todd, engineers and contractors, who have compiled figures showing the amount of brick, glass, and cable that will be used in the latest of New York's mammoth office buildings—the Graybar building, which, when completed, will be one of the largest office structures in the world.

According to the figures just published the brick to be used—if laid end to end in a straight line—would extend a distance of 1,180 miles; the glass for the windows will amount to 135,000 square feet, or equal to an area of slightly more than three acres; the elevators will utilize 27½ miles of cable.

Announcing~ the Completion of the Third Unit in Chicago's Finest Co-operative Development

PARK CASTLES—the third and finest unit in Gubbins, McDonnell & Blietz's 100% co-operative development on beautiful Indian Boundary Park—is now complete and ready for your inspection. In Park Castles, the economies of co-operative ownership are splendidly exemplified by luxuries and advantages you could not hope to duplicate in the finest of private houses or in the most expensive of rented apartments. For example: A 4, 5 or 6 room apartment-home in Park Castles gives you a picturesque 15 acre State park, without streets or traffic, for your front yard. For from $4,200 to $8,500, with a fractional down payment, you may now own an apartment-home possessing artistic and practical features which you could not rent at any price. A gymnasium, Roman swimming pool, nursery, etc., are advantages which only a 100% co-operative project could offer. If you appreciate the finer, substantial things of life Park Castles will have an irresistible appeal for you. You are invited to call without delay as applications are being filed rapidly. Go to Western and Lunt Avenues (7000 North and 2400 West).

Summer Resort Property Can Be Sold in This Way —NOW

THIS is the right time of the year to advertise your summer resort property. A Tribune Want Ad will bring you the quickest results at lowest cost. Mr. L. J. Thompson of Spooner, Wisconsin, ran this ad in a recent Sunday issue:

FOR SALE—356 ACRES, BORDERS TWO beautiful lakes, best of fishing, boating and bathing, well timbered sand beach; ideal for platting or club, eight miles town; price $16 per acre.
L. J. THOMPSON,
Spooner, Wis.

"I ran an ad in your paper on April 25th and the response was nothing short of remarkable. I received about 17 replies and have sold my summer resort property at my own price," writes Mr. Thompson.

ILLINI REALTORS PICK KANKAKEE FOR BIG MEETING

Tax Amendment, License Law on Program.

MAJ. MAX MURDOCK.
[Wolinger Photo.]

Arrangements are now being completed for the annual convention of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards, which will be held this year in Kankakee, Ill., from Oct. 7 to 9. The association is composed of fifty-six local real estate boards of the state.

Perhaps the most important matter to be discussed at the meeting will be that of the proposed tax amendments. Other items to be discussed will be institutional advertising, development of an exchange for rural and urban property, and a strengthening of the Illinois brokers' license law.

The program committee of the state association is composed of Edward S. Judd, George F. Nixon, Warren T. Easter, Harry L. Topping, and Joseph K. Brittain.

Interesting reports to the directors of the state association, who met in Chicago recently, were the addition to the staff of the organization of J. J. Frawley and A. C. Effringham as field representatives, and the addition of real estate boards at Bloomington, Berwyn-Cicero, and Libertyville-Mundelein as new organization members.

The directors of the state association who attended the meeting are George W. Ross, president, East Moline; Harry L. Topping, vice president, Kankakee; Warren T. Easter, vice president, Oak Park; Maj. Max Murdock, secretary, and Edward S. Judd, Valentine H. Surghnor, Henry G. Zander, Joseph K. Brittain, J. Soule Warterfield, all of Chicago, who are directors.

COMPLETION NEAR ON FIRST HANGAR AT CITY AIRPORT

Work is nearing completion on the first airplane hangar on Chicago's municipal airport at Cicero and 63d. It's to be 142 feet deep, eighty feet wide and will be fifteen feet high and will be able to accomodate a considerable number of planes. Space just below the roof will be available for the storage of wings and spare parts. The hangar is to have a rest room, lockers, baths, and a living room for an attendant. The Silvert Aircraft corporation is building the hangar and will operate it.

David Skooglund Secures Building in Wilson Avenue

David Skooglund purchased from Charles W. McKee the fee of the property at the northwest corner of Clifton and Wilson avenues, improved with a building containing his restaurant, other stores, a hotel, and a business college, for a reported price of $150,000. Nels J. Johnson represented both parties as attorney and also made a loan of $110,000 for six years at 5½ per cent on the property.

Florida Type of Sandwich Shop for 1543 East 63d St.

A toasted sandwich shop, of a kind said to be in vogue in Florida, will occupy the store at 1543 East 63d street which John N. Voight has just leased for two years from B. F. Lindheimer and Leo Spitz. Hanson C. Wheeler of Robert N. Chatain & Co. was the broker.

Will Erect $155,000 Flat Building in 53d Street

B. L. Stein, manufacturer, is erecting a three story building containing three stores and twenty-six two room apartments at 1365-67 East 53d street to cost $155,000. Loewenberg & Loewenberg are architects. E. J. Perlberg negotiated a loan of $85,000 at six per cent on the property.

Buys Store and Apartment Building on Lincoln Ave.

The building at the northwest corner of Lincoln avenue and Berteau street containing five stores and five flats has been sold by Morris Michel to Max Goodhartz for a reported $107,500, subject to $60,000. Krinsky & Leviton handled the legal details.

KINZIE STREET LEASE.

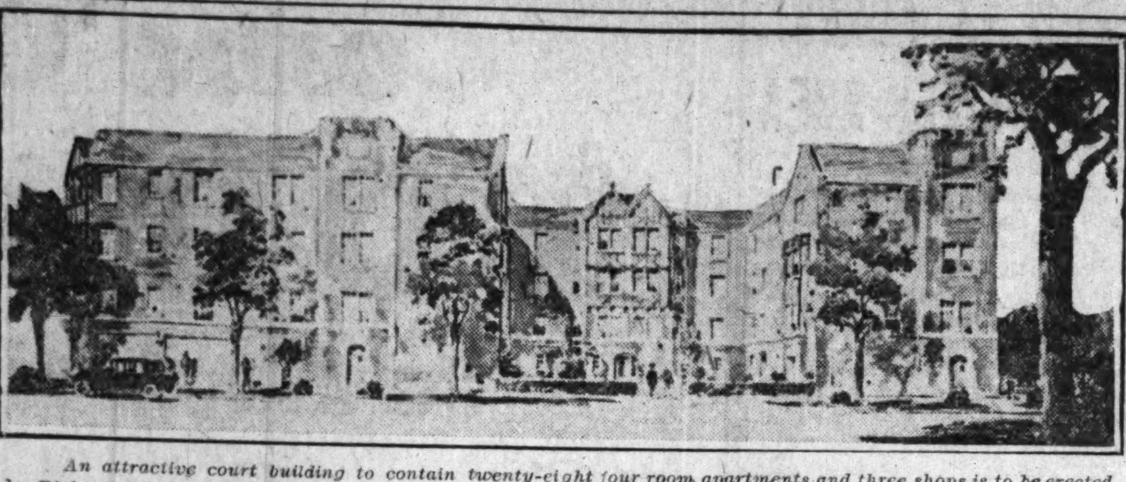
The Heller & Merz company, a dyestuff concern, has leased from Aimee Roberts et al. the four story building at 146 W. Kinzie street for five years for a term rental of $22,000. E. G. Winter represented the lessee and Mates & Benz the lessors.

Furniture Factory

Long and well established, completely equipped and organized Chicago Factory, centrally located, making better grade Dining and Bed Room Furniture and Radio Cabinets. Unusual opportunity for right party to secure a going business and splendid accounts with a comparatively small cash investment. Will consider renting building and machinery reasonably.

ADDRESS
B E 241, TRIBUNE

LA GRANGE APARTMENT BUILDING



An attractive court building to contain twenty-eight four room apartments and three shops is to be erected by Richard Mansfield Jr. at the southeast corner of Spring and Burlington avenues, La Grange, Ill. William Sevic is architect for the building, which is to be of English design of the Elizabethan period. It will represent an investment of $150,000 when completed. Its site measures 186x80 feet.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To July 18, 1896; 30 Years Ago Today

CHARLES A. STEVENS.

The building at 109 State street, now occupied by the Foreman Shoe company, has been leased to Charles A. Stevens and Brothers, the silk house, who occupy the building adjoining this on the south. They assume the unexpired term of the Foreman lease, being eight years from May 1, 1896, at a yearly rental of $12,000, and give a cash consideration.

Adam Schaaf, piano manufacturer, bought from the heirs of James Casey, a lot 47x80 feet, at the northwest corner of West Madison and Union streets. The consideration was $48,500, or at the rate of about $1,078 a front foot. The corner was once occupied by a police station. Mr. Casey bought the land from the city thirteen years ago for $25,000. The property will be improved with a six story brick and stone structure for use as a salesroom and warehouse.

The building at the southeast corner of State and Adams has been leased by R. E. Ismond & Co. for Morris Einstein to a New York firm for ten years from May 1, 1897 at $35,000 a year. The property has a frontage of 175 feet in State street and eighty-three feet in Adams. The building was completed seven years ago and at present it is occupied by miscellaneous tenants.

William C. Seipp has bought the residence of Jacob Rehm, on the east side of Dearborn avenue, 110 feet south of North avenue, for $85,000. The ground measures 70x132 feet.

To July 18, 1906; 20 Years Ago Today

MURRAY WOLBACH.

Murray Wolbach, manager of Greenebaum Sons real estate department, reports ten recent sales of improved property. The nine flat building at 4718-22 St. Lawrence avenue was purchased by I. S. Lurie for $33,000 and the store and flat building at 517-519 Milwaukee avenue was transferred to Mr. Drosdowitz for $30,000. Included in the transfers also was the sale of the eight flat building at 4005-4007 Grand boulevard to James A. Buxton for $85,000.

The leasehold of the Athenæum building at 18-26 Van Buren street was assigned by Joseph E. and Ralph C. Otis to Mary O. Jenkins and Florence O. Buckingham for the nominal consideration of $10. The property rents for $8,000 a year. In 1905 the board of review gave the ground and building a valuation of $240,000.

New factories in Chicago Heights are given as the cause of the increase in prosperity in that suburb. About 300 new dwelling houses now are under course of construction there. The Chicago Heights Land association has the contract to build sixty additional houses as soon as the material is secured. These homes are not mere factory cottages but are improved residences costing from $1,800 to $6,000 each.

ARTHUR T. McINTOSH.
[Moffett Photo.]

The Spalding tract of 620 acres in the west of Harvey, owned for many years by the A. G. Spalding Land association, has been bought by Arthur T. McIntosh and company, subdivision operators, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for an indicated price of $100,000. The main body of the tract lies between Ashland and Western avenues and 141st and 155th streets, with a small portion extending west to California avenue. Improvements such as sewer, water, gas and electric light connections, are already in.

Isaac Ettelson sold to Justus P. Seeburg, president of the J. P. Seeburg Piano company, the residence at 2824 Sheridan road, 166 feet north of Diversey, 50x202 feet, east front, for a stated price of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. An attractive three story brick dwelling containing fifteen rooms occupies the property.

The Field estate purchased for $500,000 the fee of the southwest corner of State and Jackson boulevard, 38x100 feet, from Mrs. Barbet Bloom, wife of Leopold Bloom. The site is occupied by the building of Maurice L. Rothschild, dealers in men's clothing. Title to the property was taken by the Merchants Loan and Trust company, Chauncey Keep, Arthur B. Jones and Marshall and Henry Field, acting as trustees for the Field estate.

A. A. Lewis Realty Co. Buys 31 Acres in Niles

They Meyerhofer family and George C. Weiland have sold to the A. A. Lewis Realty trust thirty-one acres near the Dempster street terminal of the Howard avenue elevated extension, Niles Center. The price is reported to have been about $10,000 an acre. The buyers plan to subdivide the property. S. J. Gould and E. J. Vanderkoi were brokers in the deal.

New Building & Loan Body Formed on Northwest Side

The United Community Building and Loan association has been organized with offices at 3840 West North avenue, by Robert S. Bremner, attorney and real estate broker. Hans Hanson is president and Chris Brix, editor of the Northwest Town Booster, is vice president. It is capitalized at $1,000,000 and according to Mr. Bremner has been oversubscribed.

John S. Nash Pays $100,000 for North Avenue Building

John S. Nash, vice president of H. O. Stone & Co. bought the two story building, 50x120, at 4217 West North avenue, from Benjamin Rosenberg and George S. Lurie of Rosenberg & Lurie, for a reported $100,000. The building is occupied by the Deimel Furniture company on a long term lease. H. O. Stone & Co. were brokers.

Beg Your Pardon

In reporting the sale of the leasehold on the property at 226 South Wabash avenue, in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday, the buyer's name was erroneously given as Samuel Grossman. Nathan Grossman was the buyer. Mr. Grossman operates a chain of corset shops and also owns the corset department of the Leiter stores.

Many Printing Firms Rent in New Keogh Buildings

E. F. Keebler & Co. report having closed leases aggregating $1,250,000 in rentals in the new ten story Keogh building located at 732-40 West Van Buren street. A majority of the firms taking leases are in the printing business. It is understood that their object in moving to the west side was because of their desire to be located near the future new postoffice and to avoid the loop congestion.

Buys Crawford-Milwaukee Corner; May Install Bank

The southeast corner of Milwaukee and Crawford, 125x100, has been sold by George W. Prassas to Fred A. Frolich for a reported $185,000, subject to $110,000. It is improved with stores, flats, and offices. Negotiations are under way for a new bank to occupy part of the building. Cerf & Ehrenhalt, only brokers in the deal, will manage the property.

SPANISH DESIGN +YANKEE IDEAS MAKE REAL HOME

Beauty and Comfort at Moderate Cost.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

LOUISE BARGELT.
(Chambers Photo.)

Spanish houses—that is, houses fashioned after the old and modern Spanish style—are being designed at the present time to fit the purse of almost every home builder. Great variety is permitted in both their exterior and interior treatment. Much latitude is allowed in the matter of costs. And whether they are adopted from the expensive models of the old Spanish aristocracy or from the less formal cottages and dwellings of picturesque Spain, the result is usually distinctive and charming.

Today a graceful example of a Spanish residence is shown, with very definite period characteristics. It has been designed by Edward A. Nitsche, architect, 28 East Huron street, Chicago.

It evidences in all its essentials the true Spanish fineness of proportion. It is symmetrical in its plan, and in the placement of its windows, its doors, its small balconies, and delightful patio around which the entire house centers.

Of Simple Design.

The needs of a small home have been kept carefully in mind. Ornamentation, which the Spanish love, has been simplified, and all architectural details, not contributing directly to the beauty and symmetry of the house, have been eliminated. In this way a graceful Spanish-American home has been achieved.

Many handsome effects in stucco are possible. The builder of a Spanish home has a wide variety of mixed colored materials to choose from, with their treatment a trifle coarser and shaggier than is used for the Italian home.

In this case the walls are of wood frame, sheathed with adequate stucco base and then stuccoed. The chimney is of common brick, the roof of Spanish design tile.

Yellow ochre is suggested for the walls, with the trim of pale turquoise blue, the sashes black, the roof of rose tile or black slate and the doors of strong turquoise blue with wrought iron black hinges and hardware.

Another Color Scheme.

Another color scheme which might be followed out is rich gray for the walls, with trim cream, sashes black, the doors black and the roof of rose and saffron tile. If the walls were of pale pink, cream white trim would be handsome, with jade doors, black hardware, black sashes and roof of pink and yellow ochre tile.

A flag walk leads to the entrance door, which is of heavy planks studded together. Observe the delicate wrought iron grilling around the arched windows and balcony.

The interior is as characteristically Spanish as the exterior.

The floor of the reception room is tile in variegated sizes and colors. Three steps lead up to the story and a half living room, finished in palm plaster with the rafters over head rough hewn. Spanish wrought iron lamps hang from the center of the room and the fireplace is finished in Spanish style.

Opens on a Patio.

Beyond are the dining room, kitchen and breakfast room. The living room runs the length of the patio on which it opens. There is a fountain, a bird bath, brick walks, heavy stucco columns, and a trellis, and a pergola. A perfect Spanish touch.

The house is generously provided with porches, with brick floors. There is every inducement in a house of this type to spend as much time as possible out of doors.

The living room and patio divide the main floor into two parts separating the bedroom, sleeping porch, and bath from the dining room, kitchen, and breakfast nook.

The kitchen is ultra modern as to size, well equipped with refrigeration, ventilating fan, pantry and shelf storage. Its floor is of rubber stone.

The closet room on the first floor should not go unnoted. Two closets for the bedroom, one off the reception room and one off the hall. All the closets in the house, one excepted, have outside windows in them. Every housewife knows the advantage of this.

Has a Balcony.

Stairs from the living room lead to the second floor. They are open and guarded by a delicately wrought balustrade of iron. The balcony has a similar balustrade.

Curves and arches are used freely in the interior as well as the exterior design. Arched embrasures in the walls provide setting for bookcases and other pieces of furniture. All of the living room openings are arched.

A second bedroom and bath are on the upper floor, with provision made for future rooms to be built if they are desired. Both bathrooms have wainscot and floor of tile.

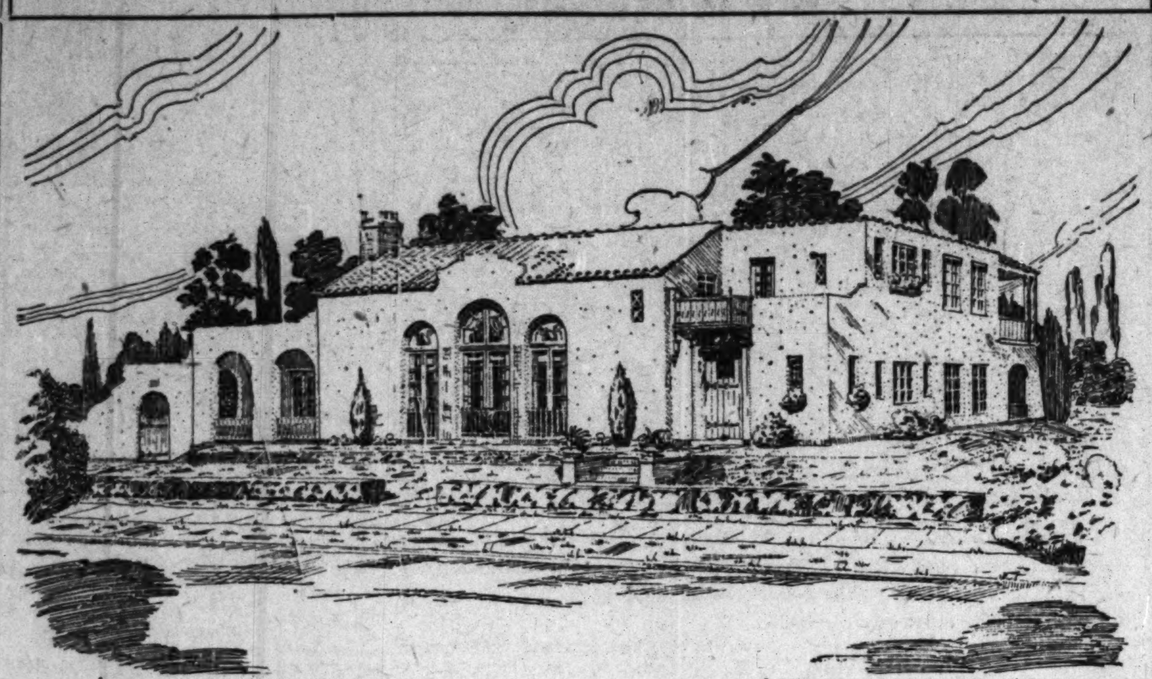
The basement runs under only the dining room and kitchen of the house. Oil heat is provided for the house, which makes this space sufficient for laundry, storage and heating equipment. The plumbing includes enameled iron sink, lavatories and bathtubs, with porcelain closets and soapstone washtubs.

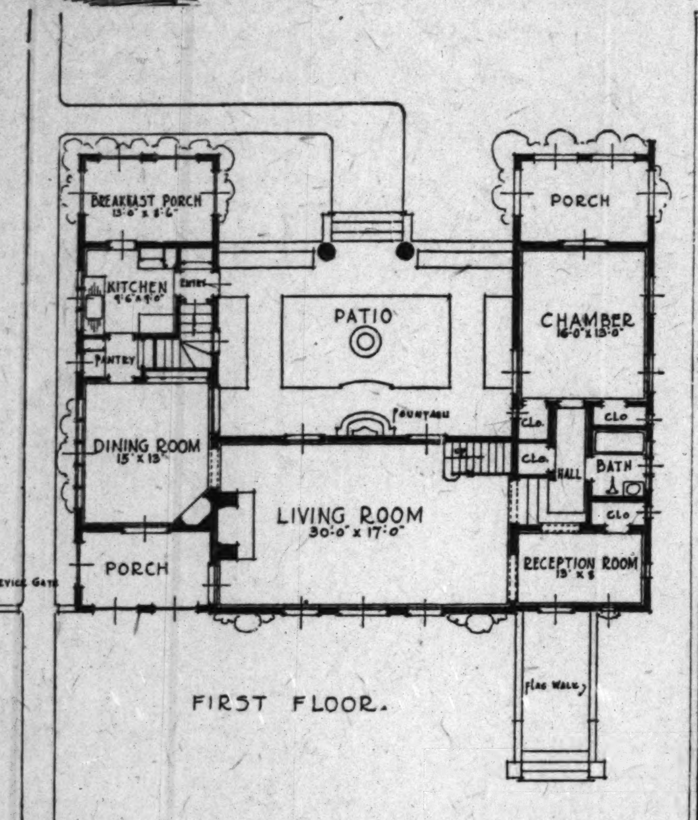
On Seventy Foot Lot.

This house can be built on a seventy foot lot, if it is a corner one. Otherwise a little more frontage would be desirable. From any elevation this house is attractive, and any frontage satisfactory, considering the abundance of provision made for light and air from all sides.

If the house were built according to the suggestions here the cost should run between $19,000 and $20,000. It could be built for less, of course, with the use of less expensive materials.

A DREAM COME TRUE





A graceful example of a Spanish style home with an unusual room arrangement, cleverly handled. It possesses a true Spanish fineness of proportion and centers around the storied patio, with its fountains and bird baths, its stately columns of stucco, and its vine covered trellis and pergola. Edward A. Nitsche, architect.

Will Erect Ninety Room Hotel in N. Ashland Ave.

Rosenthal, Mayer & Lewis will erect 3 story hotel and store building at 3118-28 N. Ashland avenue for Adolph Koretz. The hotel, to contain ninety rooms, has been leased to Rex Bain for ten years at a term rental of $180,000.

RIGHT HERE IN CHI!!

On July 15, 1925, Samuel Collins, a former police lieutenant, purchased a tract of ten acres bounded by Tuohy avenue, Waukegan road and Harlem avenue in the Niles region, for a reported price of $30,000. He has just sold the tract to an undisclosed syndicate, for which the Noel State bank took title, for a reported $65,000.

Fred Janusch to Design Lodge for Northern Club

Fred W. Janusch of Hooper & Janusch, Chicago architects, is drawing plans for Inawendiwin lodge, a northern club organized by a group of Chicagoans. The club owns 5,000 acres in Oneida county, Wisconsin, seven miles from Eagle River. The golf course is being cleared and will be ready for use by next year. Kent G. Chetlain is president of the club.

Pays $85,000 for Corner at Washington and Pine

Taylor A. Snow and Albert Hand have sold to an undisclosed buyer the property 178x137 feet at the southwest corner of Washington boulevard and Pine avenue, Austin, for a reported $85,000. Title was taken by the Liberty Trust and Savings bank. Greenfield-Sherman were brokers.

Sells Store Building in 16th Place for $50,000

The building containing five stores at the southeast corner of 16th place and St. Louis has been sold by John D. Seidner to Nathan Long and Harry Jacobs for $50,000. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson represented the seller and Samuel Grossman the buyers.

John R. Robertson and Company Give a School

John R. Robertson & Co. are donating a school building for the free use for two years of the children living in their subdivision on Sibley boulevard, two blocks east of the Illinois Central station. At the end of two years it is expected that the school board will be able to finance a new building. There are forty-two families, each with children, living in the district.

Isaac M. Mills Acquires Milwaukee Avenue Corner

Oliver Opsahl sold to Isaac M. Mills the northwest corner of Milwaukee and Keeler avenues, 300x150 feet, for an undisclosed price. Herbert M. Magnuson was broker for the seller and Jacob Hoffman and Charles H. Vihon represented the purchaser.

PAYS $71,500 FOR 13 ACRES IN NILES AREA

The Paramount Realty company has made two important purchases in the Niles Center district. One was the purchase of twelve acres at the northeast corner of Simpson and Keeler avenues from Henry Vogt for a reported price of $52,415. The other was of thirteen acres from Frank S. and Anna B. Lambert at the southwest corner of Simpson and Keeler for a reported price of $71,500.

The property lies two blocks south of the Highland terminal of the Evanston street railway. The brokers in the deal were Pickett and Holt.

Dr. Earl D. Kelly, scout executive of the Evanston Boy Scout organization has purchased from A. J. Lindner fifteen acres on the west side of Milwaukee avenue, about a half mile north of Wheeling, for investment. Quinlan and Tyson, Inc., were brokers.

F. Earl Long, Detroit ball bearing manufacturer, has purchased for investment from Joseph M. Lyon of La Grange 237 acres a mile and a half west of Roselle for a reported price of $83,000. Lloyd J. Long represented both parties in the deal as broker. Mr. Long states that he first sold the property in 1912, again in 1916 and now and that each owner obtained about twice the price he paid for it.

E. Summer Walker has sold to Louis P. Nissen the 120 acre farm two miles west of Wauconda and a mile north of Slocum Lake for a reported price of $24,000. L. G. Hubbard was broker for both parties.

A Greek syndicate comprising Gianakakos & Tampoorlos, James Pappadimitriou, and Nick Economos has purchased a five acre tract at the northeast corner of 147th and Cicero for a reported price of $25,000. Allen & Nikopoulos represented both parties as brokers.

Experienced Salesmen Wanted—Good Chance for Advancement

PEOPLE speak of a home as an "investment", meaning that it returns an income in terms of permanence, security, shelter, comfort and pride of possession.

Possession of an apartment in a building co-operatively owned and managed, offers all of these, in addition to a substantial financial return through the many savings effected.

But greatest of all is the investment in SATISFACTION which co-operative ownership makes possible.

The owner of an apartment in 1320 North State Street chooses his neighbors, controls the administration of the building, shares the operating expense, saves a substantial amount of rent and enjoys the delightful privacy and perfect appointments of an individually owned home. In 14 years the amount of his original investment will have been returned with 6 percent interest.

MISS HICKEY'S SHORTHAND DIARY.

(CONTRAST.)

I answer to the buzzer when the Big Chief taps the bell;
And I set off the fireworks when he starts raising—well,
From office boys clear up the chart to our Vice President
Not even Wife can see The Boss—unless I give consent.

From nine to four I'm right on hand to soothe or stir him up,
Remind him where he's due for lunch and where he has to sup;
For him I chat with banking kings; I go long distance—files;
I nag him into working hard, or ease the strain with smiles.

From nine to four I'm in on deals so big they take my breath.
The secrets cached beneath my bob determine life — or death:
I watch my giant boss swing deals with brain and superpower;
My best boy friend is selling books. He's working by the hour.

SERVICE.

"A drop of ink makes millions think,"
A sword makes them behave!
A satin slipper symbols power,
The only kind I crave.

Let others word the tribal laws,
Or "write the nations' songs,"
Subdue wild mobs, or armies lead,
Or right great social wrongs.

For, though I'm just a two-a-day
Hard working dancing trick,
The world cannot dispense with me
Because I add—the kick.

INHERITANCE.

A bishop and a pirate in remote ancestral line
Explain the mixed inheritance that I may claim as mine;
The bishop's ghost approves, no doubt, the goodly life I lead:
I go to church; I break no laws; I meet each social need;
I pay the tax; I practice thrift; the stop signs always heed;
The bishop must be pleased; I note conventions without end.
My pirate ancestor I don't approve, condone, defend—
And yet—his blood in me makes mock of days so smooth and dull;
He thrilled and dared while sailing seas beneath crossbones and skull,
He raced the winds, and seas, and sun, and ranged the whole world o'er;
He laughed, and loved, and fought, and risked—Dear, wicked Gunner Moore.
I know he damns my peacefulness with many asterisks—
His disapproving ghost, at times, about my conscience frisks;
But how can I live up to him who lived in years of zest?
It is bad form to dare, today, in modern Middle West.
One reckless thing there's left to do to challenge times too mild—
The bridge club turns to poker and I call for deuces wild.

The Last Word of Fashion

Now that the mid-summer season has arrived—we start to look ahead—our thoughts turn to the autumn mode and its contemplation becomes a subject of much interest.

A Variety of Color

The coming season promises to be one of color. A new Burgundy tone named by Chanel along with a vivid Hunter's Green bid for popularity—still navy and black form the basis of the new mode.

Paris Favors Tiered Skirts

Tiered treatments are in evidence everywhere. They're found straightline in series, sometimes alleviated with a side dip drape, also pleats at front or all around and irregular effects lend themselves to this mode.

Moire Is Emphasized

Moire along with satin and crepe satin prove to be the most popular fabrics—an interesting note is the use of two fabric combinations in the creation of some of the models.

The Tailored Mode

Conspicuous in the tailored frock is the two-piece idea, which is again strongly sanctioned for Fall.

And—

Skirt lengths show no change.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

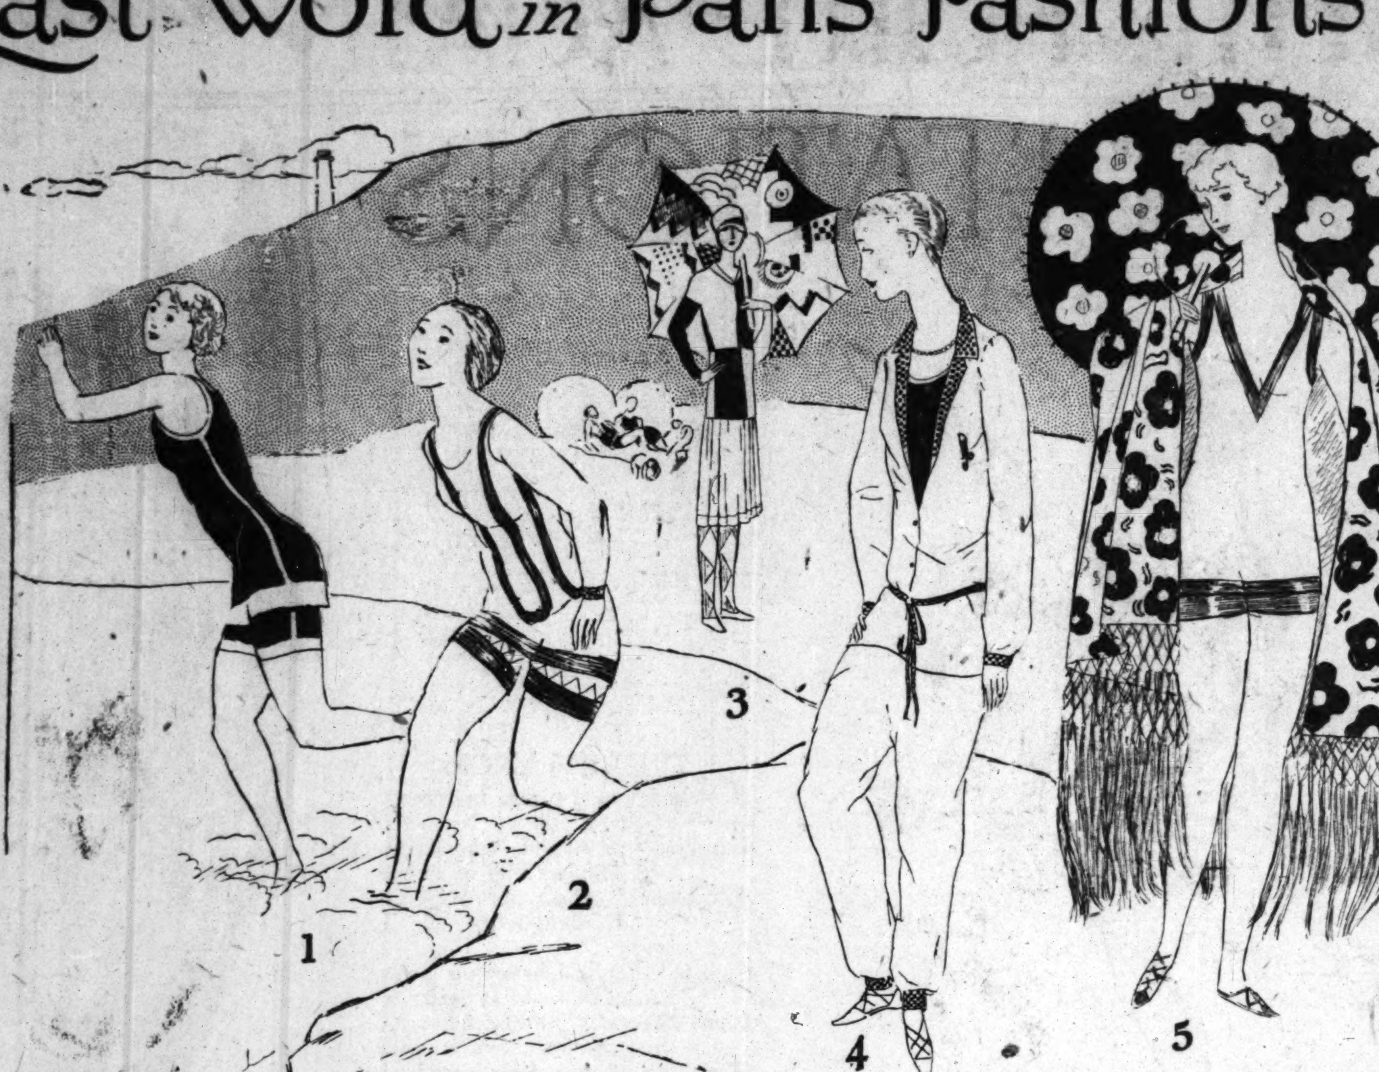
PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Pajamas for the beach are the latest Paris sartorial sensation. These one time intimate garments emerged from the privacy of the boudoir several seasons ago to appear at the informal tea, and later for the home dinner. Now they are to come right out in broad daylight as the smarest before-and-after "dip" costume. Pajamas for the cool Channel swept beach of Le Toquet and for the sultry sands of the Lido cover a wide range of creative talent among the Paris couture. There are exotic pajamas in plain and flowered lamé that could be worn only at the Lido, and simple jacquettes and trousers of crêpe de chine which are favored for Deauville and Le Toquet. For those of the gentler sex who prefer the more feminine costume, no matter what the occasion, Paris couturiers are featuring the Spanish shawl—made, of course, of materials more appropriate to wet sands than are opulent silks and embroidery. Altogether, with brilliantly flowered beach coats sandwiched in between these spectacular pajamas and shawls, it looks like a lively summer all around the coast line of Europe.

Bathing suits and dresses for the resort follow the somewhat sober vogue of spring, with combinations of dark blue and white, dark blue and beige, and beige and white, leading everything else in chic. So it is the beach costume which is in the picture and out of the water that makes the summer sands colorful and picturesque.

An inseparable part of this is the parasol. Not those big party parasols that serve to shelter groups of several persons, but the small one-woman kind, that can at most serve to fend off the sun from two heads in an intimate tête-à-tête. Parasols, too, are vivid, and a lot of indigent Paris artists have found employment making modernistic designs for them, and getting the real money for their works which canvases hung in the salon could not bring.

Our artist has sketched one of these cubistic sun shades for you. It is shown behind the central figure. Makes an effective background, doesn't it, against the monotony of white sand? This one is composed of natural colored linen, covered by weird cubistic shapes in brilliant red, black, white, and green, with a long handle of beige enamel.

The Parisienne carries this parasol both with her beach costume and her simple sports dress, like the Jane Regny model you see pictured in the background. It is especially good with the adapted Pierrot pattern of the sweater, which is laid out in plats of beige and dark blue like a Florida real estate plan. With this daring sweater is worn a simple gathered skirt of crêpe de chine, in beige. The whole is one of the most successful sports costumes produced by Paris this season. I want you to notice the hat, which has a high supple crown and a brim that is not so wide but extremely floppy, and worn so at least one eye is entirely eclipsed. Of beige felt, this hat is trimmed by a band of blue crêpe de chine, twisted to a mere strand on one side. This is one of the new, extremely smart summer shapes in Paris, and is designed for resort wear.



1.—Paris prefers the practical bathing suit of tricot in pastel tones.

2.—The original placing of dark blue bands on this white jersey bathing suit give an unusual effect.

3.—The striking combination of dark blue and beige in the jumper, and the simplicity of the skirt make this sports dress an important creation. Note the new cubistic parasol.

4.—Pajamas for the beach are made of crepe de chine and trimmed with checked crepe.

5.—Over a simple tricot bathing suit, the Parisienne wears an eponge shawl in brilliant colors, deeply fringed.

The pajamas shown in our sketch are the sort that will be worn a great deal in the northern coast resorts of France this summer. They are made of a heavy beige crêpe de chine, a semi-waterproof material, and the jacquette is cut with the deep revers that you see on the fashionable tailleur. The cuffs of the bishop sleeves, the revers and the narrow sash which ties directly in front, are made of checked crêpe de chine, dark blue and beige. The monogram is, of course, embroidered of dark blue silk. The trousers are almost as baggy as those celebrated Oxford atrocities affected by college youths, but they are neatly gathered into checked cuffs that fit the ankles closely. These pajamas are part of a beach ensemble—yes, the ensemble idea is evolved for the beach, too. They are worn with a simple classic bathing suit of dark blue, banded in beige, and rubber sandals of beige and dark blue.

This, in spite of its novelty, is a simple and unassuming shore costume, compared to the brilliant toilette de bain on our fifth figure. This ensemble is from the creative hand of Lucien Lelong. The bathing suit is simple and practical, as a bathing suit should be. Made of beige tricot, both the extra long jersey and the extra short culottes are banded with blue. Charmingly simple and appropriate for a vigorous swim, this ensemble becomes highly decorative for the lazy after-swim hour on the beach, by the addition of a shawl, brilliantly flowered and fringed, but made of practical éponge, so its wearer needn't worry about dampness.

The parasol, which is Japanese in form, is made of a material patterned exactly the same as the shawl, but with the colors reversed. Whereas the shawl has dark flowers on a white ground, the parasol shows white flowers on a dark background.

Our first figure shows the fashionable bathing suit in action. It is made of substantial tricot in that lovely shade of water green which Paris has been wearing a great deal this spring for town costumes. The jersey is cut a bit longer than usual, and flares a trifle at the hips. The white bands which trim the suit are cleverly placed down the under arm seams, a little device that helps to lengthen and slenderize the line. This same idea is carried out in the culottes, which are also trimmed with two inch bands of white tricot around the bottom.

Our second figure shows the bathing suit which has an admirable simplicity and a great deal of novelty at the same time. Getting these two qualities well balanced in a costume de bain is a difficult stunt, which Drecoll has done charmingly. The suit is made of white jersey with closely fitted lines, except for the culottes which are the least little bit bouffant. Drecoll uses the boiled shirt motif in placing bands of dark blue on the jersey, and piquantly places it under the arms as well as in its regulation position in the center front. Wide bands of dark blue are placed at the bottom of the jersey and around the base of the culottes. A zig-zag line of dark blue gives additional decoration to the latter.

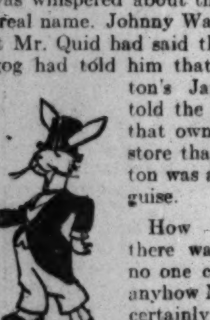
RUFUS Q. FIDDELTON.

ALL THAT GLITTERS IS NOT GOLD.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

PUCKERBUSH was agog. A most fashionable brown rabbit had come to town. He brought five trunks and a Jap red squirrel valet. He stopped at the Palace hotel where four of the largest rooms were reserved for him.

Rufus Q. Fiddleton was his name, but it was whispered about that it was not his real name. Johnny Wattels had said that Mr. Quid had said that Mr. Hoggelgog had told him that Mr. Fiddleton's Jap valet had told the Greek rabbit that owned the candy store that Mr. Fiddleton was a duke in disguise.



Looked like a rabbit duke.

How much truth there was in all this no one could tell, but anyhow Mr. Fiddleton certainly looked like a rabbit duke. He wore lavender colored shirts with his monogram embroidered in olive green over the heart. He changed his clothes several times a day and spent much of his time standing in front of the hotel, so the citizens of Puckerbush had a good chance to admire him.

The polecat porter of the hotel reported that Mr. Fiddelton tipped him a dollar for shining his shoes and the young weasel, who waited on table, found a dollar bill in the duke's water glass after each meal.

Mr. Fiddelton wore so many diamonds he had to hire a couple of woodchucks to guard him when he went out for a walk.

"Not that I'm afraid of the robbers," he told the woodchucks, "but I don't like to be annoyed by them."

In a short time Mr. Fiddelton began to make friends. He met Mr. Slig and told him how much he resembled the famous opossum who had won the battle of Snickerlick.

"You have the same fine soldierly look about you," he told Mr. Slig.

Mr. Slig invited Mr. Fiddelton out to dinner where he told Mrs. Slig she was the handsomest woman he had ever seen. Mrs. Slig believed him and became his warmest friend.

Met Miss Woppelgop.

Mr. Fiddelton spread kind words about as thick as fig jam on a layer cake and in a short time he was calling everybody in Puckerbush by their first name.

He met Miss Woppelgop quite by accident. She happened to drop her handkerchief in front of the hotel where Mr. Fiddelton was standing. He picked it up and handed it to her in such a charming way she felt he ought to be rewarded for his kindness, so she invited him out to dinner.

He let Mr. Woppelgop beat him at checkers and told Mrs. Woppelgop she was just the image of the beautiful queen of Standupson.

Mr. Nickeldick was the only animal in Puckerbush that failed to like Mr. Fiddelton. Mr. Nickeldick had met the brown rabbit, and he disliked him at once.

"Uses too much perfumery and says too many nice things," Mr. Nickeldick said to himself, so he kept away from the supposed duke and everybody in Puckerbush thought Mr. Nickeldick was jealous.

It leaked out some way that Mr. Fiddelton was the owner of wonderfully rich gold mines. It was said that he had more money than he could spend. Once he gave a blind opossum a hundred dollar bill and every time he visited the Sligs' house he gave each of the Slig children a ten dollar gold piece.

Gave a blind opossum a hundred dollar bill.

Mr. Slig and Mr. Fiddelton were much together, and Mr. Fiddelton took his dinner almost every evening at the Sligs' house.

"Mr. Slig," Mr. Fiddelton said one evening, "I want to do something for you. You have been so kind to me while I have been in Puckerbush."

"Don't mention it, don't mention it," answered Mr. Slig. "I am glad to be of service to you."

"Mr. Slig," continued Mr. Fiddelton, "I own a great many gold mines and the income from them is more than I care to use. Every now and then I sell a few shares to my particular friends so they can enjoy some of my good fortune, but you have been so good to me I am going to give you a few shares and I hope you will think kindly of me when you collect your dividends."

Mr. Fiddelton pulled an important looking paper out of his pocket and handed it to Mr. Slig. Mr. Slig put on his glasses and stared at the paper. His eyes nearly popped out of his head when he saw that it was made out in his name for one hundred shares in the Fiddelton Gold Mining company. Mr. Slig broke down and cried, Mrs. Slig cried and all the little Sligs cried.

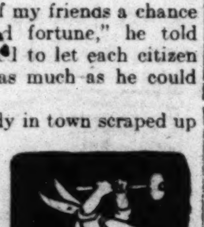
"You'll never be sorry for this," sobbed Mr. Slig.

"I don't believe I will," smiled Mr. Fiddelton and he slipped silently out of the house, leaving the family to weep alone.

Next day every animal in Puckerbush knew of Mr. Slig's good fortune and Mr. Fiddelton was more popular than ever.

At the end of a week Mr. Slig received dividends of over a hundred dollars and many of the citizens of Puckerbush begged Mr. Fiddelton to sell them some of the stock.

"I don't like to sell to a few and not give the rest of my friends a chance to share my good fortune," he told them, so he decided to let each citizen of the town buy as much as he could afford.



Cracked his savings bank.

Almost everybody in town scraped up all the money he could get and took advantage of the kind offer. Mr. Skittel pawned his carpenter tools, the Woppelgops sold their house and put it into the mining stock, and Mr. Hogglegog cracked open his savings bank with a hammer in order to buy some of the valuable stock.

By the end of the week Mr. Fiddelton had all the money in town and a few hours later he was called away by a telegram.

No one has seen him since, nor have they seen the dividends they expected to get. It was fully a week later that the animals of Puckerbush discovered they had been swindled. Mr. Nickeldick smiled a little when he heard the news, for he was the only one in town who had not invested in the mining stock. He went home, took out his little red book and set down these words:

"All that glitters is not gold,
All's not paying stock that's sold."

Bobby's dad loves to fish and we all got a good laugh when little Billy was born. Bobby was invited in to see him and after a close inspection he asked, "Are we going to keep him?"

"Of course. Why not?" asked his mother.

"Well, he's so small I thought maybe we'd have to put him back."

When I answered the door bell this morning I found our little neighbor, aged 4, with her 1 year old brother by the hand.

She brushed by me and showed him all through the house and when she was ready to go turned to me and said, "Miss B., will you lift my bruvver down the steps for me so he don't fall and hurt hisself?"

A usual morning performance in the bathroom was a race between the twins to see which could beat at dressing.

Laurie put on his shoes and stockings, but Redge, a little tardy at the finish, walked out of the door first, saying: "I'm just going to wear my bare feet."

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Stopped by a Fence.

My greatest thrill was experienced when I took a nature study class into the woods to identify birds. The class was composed of girls from 10 to 13, and red appeared to be their favorite color. Red hats, sweaters, and ribbons flamed through the dimly lighted woods as we wandered hither and thither, casting inquisitive eyes into leafy haunts of shy feathered folk

We strolled beside a beautiful stream where birds came down to bathe; stumbled over a narrow path, roughened by projecting roots and fallen branches, and emerged from the thick shade into less dense woods adjoining a pasture. The girls were chattering gayly, and I was leveling by binoculars upon a tree which promised to be a bird's happy hunting grounds, when loud, quick poundings, like the trampling of many feet, reached my ears. I thought it was the college boys running races, until terrified screams from the girls turned my eyes toward the pasture, where an enraged bull, with tail erect and head down was charging down an incline and making straight for us.

To say I was THRILLED would be putting it all too mildly I shouted directions to the girls, who were rushing pell mell into the woods. I was about to follow when the bull—only a few hundred feet away—came to sudden halt, tore up the earth with his hoofs, raised his head, and bellowed. I thought my last hour had come, but an unseen barbed wire fence ended the brute's mad gallop.

H. M. C.

On the Rocks.

Back in the "nineties" the average age of a naval cadet at Annapolis was somewhere near 16. I was only 15 when our class, as yearlings, embarked on the old "Constellation" for our summer cruise. Towards evening we reached the mouth of Chesapeake bay. In tacking out into the ocean a stray puff of wind caught us, flung us up onto the sharp rocks while a heavy sea pounded us farther with every wave.

Several attempts to rescue us from the nearby lighthouse failed, and they were forced to send for a tug. All that night we lay on the rocks, in a sinking condition. We expected the ship to go down any minute, and were prepared to take the slim chance the life boats offered us.

When morning came, however, we were still afloat, and were taken off by a tug from Boston. At any age that would be a thrilling experience, but at 15!

J. L.

The Eastland Disaster.

The greatest thrill I ever had was when the Eastland went down. My husband, sister and I were thrown overboard and I managed to hang on to something. I could see my sister going down for the third time when my husband made a grab for her hair and saved her. It was the narrowest escape I ever saw.

E. K.

Out in Montana.

My greatest thrill was had while on a visit to a ranch in Montana. My hostess and I had ridden to the village some three miles from the ranch.

I don't remember which one of us suggested walking back, but both were in the mood. It was a wonderful night. The moon was up, so off we started. When we had gone about two miles the moon went under and it became so dark I could hardly see. After a little the lights at the ranch came into sight and I felt better, but not for long.

The most terrible, heart-pulling scream came through the air, the cry of a woman. It came so suddenly I was dazed. Then I had the feeling of twenty cannibals throwing their spears through me.

I thought of a little gun I had in my pocket, wondered if it would have helped the woman's plight to shoot it in the air, but decided not to.

It didn't take us long to know the only thing we could do was to run for help. My legs never moved faster. Imagine our dismay to find no one at home except the little boy, who had gone to bed. All night long, I sat waiting for some one to come.

Next morning early one of the hired help came home and said: "Those wild cats are getting a heap desperate coming so close to the house; I just found a young lamb torn to pieces by one of them only a short way from here."

My companion told him we had heard it on our way home. I was speechless. It was a thriller that still thrills me at the thought.

E. A. F.

His Name on the List.

I had written the state examinations for entry to the university. Followed weeks of suspense—of fear and trembling—waiting for the results. Would I pass? If I didn't, what then? It was like waiting for the jury to bring in the verdict, only the agony was prolonged over weeks instead of hours.

One day about six weeks later when I had still had no word, I was looking idly through the daily paper. Lazily turning a page, the heading "Successful Candidates in State Examinations," fairly jumped out at me.

My hand trembling, my heart racing, I searched for my name—and searched—and searched. But no name. Despairing, I read the list over again slowly. My heart was almost in my boots as I approached the bottom of the column. Then, with a shout, I recognized the old familiar moniker, incorrectly spelled, right near the end. But it was mine, all mine, and nobody else's but mine.

Talk about a thrill. O, boy!

Here's Big News of Ravinia Outing for Sally's Friends

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

ATTENTION, boys and girls, for news of our next party!

This party is going to be something most of us don't have a chance to do very often—and it's something girls and boys in other cities don't have a chance to do at all. We're going to take a trip out into the country, and see the wonderful pageant, "Our Chicago," at Ravinia on July 29, a week from next Thursday!

Just let me tell you what a trip that will be, and I know you'll all be starting your letters instantly to win invitations. To start our day, Britton I. Budd, president of the North Shore electric and the elevated lines, has promised us special cars for our ride out through the beautiful north shore suburbs and countryside. That will be a day's fun all in itself, for it's one of the nicest trips any one could take.

Lovely Setting For Pageant.

But that's just a part of the fun we'll have. When we get to Ravinia we'll be in one of the most wonderful parks and music centers in the world. Art lovers and musicians all over America—and all over Europe, for that matter—are talking about the wonders of Ravinia, and envying the people of Chicago, who can go to it. We'll be the guests of Louis Eckstein, president of Ravinia; and best of all, our party comes on the day when the Children's Civic Theater of Chicago gives the great pageant of Chicago's story, under the direction of Bertha Iles.

We'll see Chicago in the days of the Indians, when Marquette, and Joliet, and La Salle paid their visits. We'll see the French traders, the arrival of the English and Americans, the troubles leading to the Fort Dearborn massacre, the first schoolhouse, the stirring days when Abraham Lincoln was nominated by the Republican party, and the great fire of 1871. There'll be scenes of the world's fair and Chicago's part in the world war, and a lot that I haven't room to tell you about.

The Letter's the Thing!

Then, too, the Ravinia club is making us its guests, and will see that we enjoy the best of everything while we're there, so it's going to be a perfectly glorious day for all of us. And all this fun is yours, just for writing a winning letter telling me why you'd like to come, and showing me you're among the hundred girls and boys who'll enjoy the party most. Could anything be easier than that? Of course not—so send me your letters right away!

Now here are the winners for our big party at the circus next Thursday, July 22, and invitations will be sent to you with full directions as to when and where to meet:

Lessons in English

By Mary Griffin.

DO YOU KNOW:

That you are overworking the word "alike" when you could often substitute:

Analogous,
Equal,
Homogeneous,
Identical?

That in place of "attack" you could often use:

Assail,
Assault,
Encounter,
Combat?

The errors in the following sentences? [Answers below.]

1. I will get wet if it rains.
2. Do you refer to a dictionery whenever you do not know how to spell a word?
3. The patient did not like to be all alone by himself.
4. Are you interested in antique furniture.
5. Please direct this letter to Mrs. Smith.
6. I blame the failure on her.

ANSWERS.

Sentence errors.

1. "Will" used with the first person denotes determination. Use "shall" in place of "will" in the sentence above.
2. "Dictionary" is misspelled.
3. Omit "all" and "by himself." "The patient did not like to be alone," is correct.
4. Do not forget to place a question mark at the end of an interrogative sentence.
5. "Please address this letter to Mrs. Smith," is correct.
6. "I blame her for the failure," is correct.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the poultryman should be able to take a flock of black chickens and, by selective breeding, turn them into a flock of white chickens?

Here is the way he proceeds to work the transformation. Among the black chickens there are likely to be a few that have an occasional white feather in their tails. He selects the two from his flock that make the greatest showing of white. He crosses these two. The chickens that result are likely to show more white feathers. He selects from these the two individuals that have most white. He crosses them. In the resulting generation there will be individuals that have yet more white feathers. He crosses these and so on until in the end he has pure white chickens that he has developed from black ones.

The possibilities that lie in this selective breeding have not been definitely known for many centuries. The first outstanding application of the principle came in the middle ages when horse raisers began to develop strong animals that could carry the weight of knights wearing heavy armor.

Back of that was an unconscious selection that probably began with dogs. Man had tamed wolves and kept them about his camps as alarms against marauding animals. Later man became a herdsman. Here his dog helped. He tended the flocks. When famine came savage man often resorted to his dogs for food. The most useful of the dogs were allowed to live, while the less useful would be devoured. Thus was an unconscious selection put in operation that did much to develop the shepherd dog.

The bulldog was a cattle dog. It must have a strong jaw and a determined disposition to dominate the members of those early cattle herds. Those having these qualities most strongly developed were kept and became the parents of other generations of bulldogs.

The greyhound was used in hunting swift running game and later in racing. It was selectively bred for speed. The St. Bernard dog was built for fighting the snows. Thus were types developed.

The dog has now largely passed the stage of usefulness and its breeding is likely to be based on a fondness for freaks. Toy dogs, grotesque faced bulls, Irish terriers, dachshunds, are all freaks developed from the same original strain.

COTTON COMES TO THE FORE AGAIN

by Corinne Lowe

SPECIAL PATTERNS

by May Manton

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Summer, so far as adults are concerned, has now a mere cotton tail. We have moulted our original endowment, and in its place have come the crêpes, the wash silks, the knitted fabrics, the chiffons and flannels—all the rest of those materials which now make a fashionable summer.

Of course, there is infinite practicality in this shift of fashion. No girl of today realizes what her mother went through in the nineties. If you were poor there was nothing harder, in fact, than being a summer Gibson girl. Imagine the ironing that they took—those full, long skirts of duck and pique and those tailored white shirtwaists! No modern girl can appreciate those hardships any more than she can understand why her forerunner of the nineties actually wanted to have hips!

But, though those of a preceding generation felt the despotism of King Cotton, they also were sensible of his benefits. There was nothing ever so feminine, or so graceful, or so truly in the spirit of summer as—not, perhaps, the tailored white skirts and shirtwaists of which I have spoken—but the batistes and voiles and dotted swisses that went with them.

To be sure, we have not entirely given them up—these airy creations of another day. And it is significant that occasionally one does find some eminent woman of fashion sponsoring at Newport or Tuxedo, or other sacrosanct resort, the creation of exquisite cotton.

And never, never has the organdy been entirely displaced from its former position. That position may not be so arrogant as of yore, but, thanks to the ease with which this fabric accommodates itself to modern surroundings and to modern conditions, it has a tremendous advantage over most of its cotton kindred.

It is the period style which, illogically enough, has prevented organdy from coming to a full stop. It is ideal for the tight fitted bodice with its full, billowing skirt, and Lanvin always shows you in her summer collections just how delightful the organdy period gown may be when in its dressiest mood.

This season it is quite natural that the organdy model of this description should often succumb to the spell of that up in the front and down in the back movement so popular in this winter's model. And it is equally natural that the V line of the corsage should be present.

We show both of these modern conveniences installed in the charming organdy model at the extreme left. The tint chosen here is chartreuse, and it is made over self-color taffeta. To this background a sash of deep yellow velvet and embroidered discs of silver thread contribute the necessary contrast. The double bertha, with its scalloped hem to correspond to an equally scalloped hem line, is another indication of how alert organdy is in catching every whisper of the mode. For now, after many months, the scallop continues to sway our emotions in the same old way.

Here is a charming creation for the garden party or for any formal occasion of the summer afternoon. And now, if we wish to find organdy that sits up after eight, let us turn to the center sketch. This is exceedingly simple. All that there is to it is a crêpe corsage and a skirt which is a double thickness of white organdy. And there isn't a touch of trimming—not a comma or anything to distract from the period effect.

But when you have said crêpe and organdy you have said something unusual. For, as a rule, they don't do this at all. They have put satin or taffeta bodices with organdy skirts, but heretofore they have stopped at crêpe. The result justifies the boldness of the experiment. This apple green crêpe corsage with its prolongation upon the skirt is particularly charming.

Of course, the simplicity of the gown must be complemented by an assemblage of carefully harmonized accessories. To wear a gown like this without jewelry would be exactly like putting down a tablecloth without any silver, or flowers, or china. Consequently our heroine has chosen numerous bracelets—some in carved ivory, to repeat the white of the organdy, and some in jade, to conciliate the crêpe top. Those pendant earrings, still so much favored for the dance, are similarly in combination of jade and carved ivory. And as for the pumps, these are in apple green satin.

This present summer is, in the words of Gilbert, a "greenery-yallery" affair. At the senior prom of Yale pale greens and yellows represented a noticeably high percentage of debutante taste. Another tone that registered strongly was white. Indeed, there is nothing stronger in popular favor of the younger set than the robe de style of white taffeta.

There is nothing periodic about this period frock. It's a hardy perennial of fashion. All last winter, at dances and opera, one beheld debutantes debbing in this same robe de style. And now, this summer, we find them busy with their customary preference. Taffeta is undoubtedly the favored medium, and this includes not only the popular white, but all the pastel tints, together with a variety of printed and painted designs.

Gold and silver kid slippers still enjoy a majority vote, but the satin slipper in harmonizing tint forms a distinguished minority. In this latter connection let us mention that the light fantastic toe is often made to contrast with the equally light fantastic heel, and that in this way both the dance gown and its trimmings are represented in our footgear. Thus, one of the most stunningly attired debutantes at the Yale prom chose to complement her rob de style of white taffeta, trimmed about the border of the skirt in two rows of ombre rose ribbon medallions, with white satin slippers perched on high rose colored heels.

This same girl was draped in a black Spanish shawl aflame with big embroidered roses. And this brings us to another point of dance punctilio. For years we have been wearing the Spanish shawl, and for years we have been calling it passé. Yet still this Spanish sauce is our favorite evening condiment. It is one of those contradictions that can be explained only on the humiliating grounds of a sense of beauty. Here, for once, we disregard chic in favor of the supreme grace and picturesqueness and romance of this fringed and colorful importation.

As to coiffures, the scissors are still mightier than the hairpin. But, although the boyish bob continues, there are some evidences of a shorn authority. Quite a few girls realize that short hair is not for them, and these most often part the hair in the middle and adjust it in a loose knot at the nape of the neck. If you will look at our central figure you will see our meaning.

But to go back to cottons. It's really unfair to suggest that organdy is the only one of the family which can get along well with the present modes. If you feel inspired to make your pique, or linen, or cotton reps into a jumper, there is nothing in the world to prevent you. On the contrary, the whole world of design supports your prejudice.

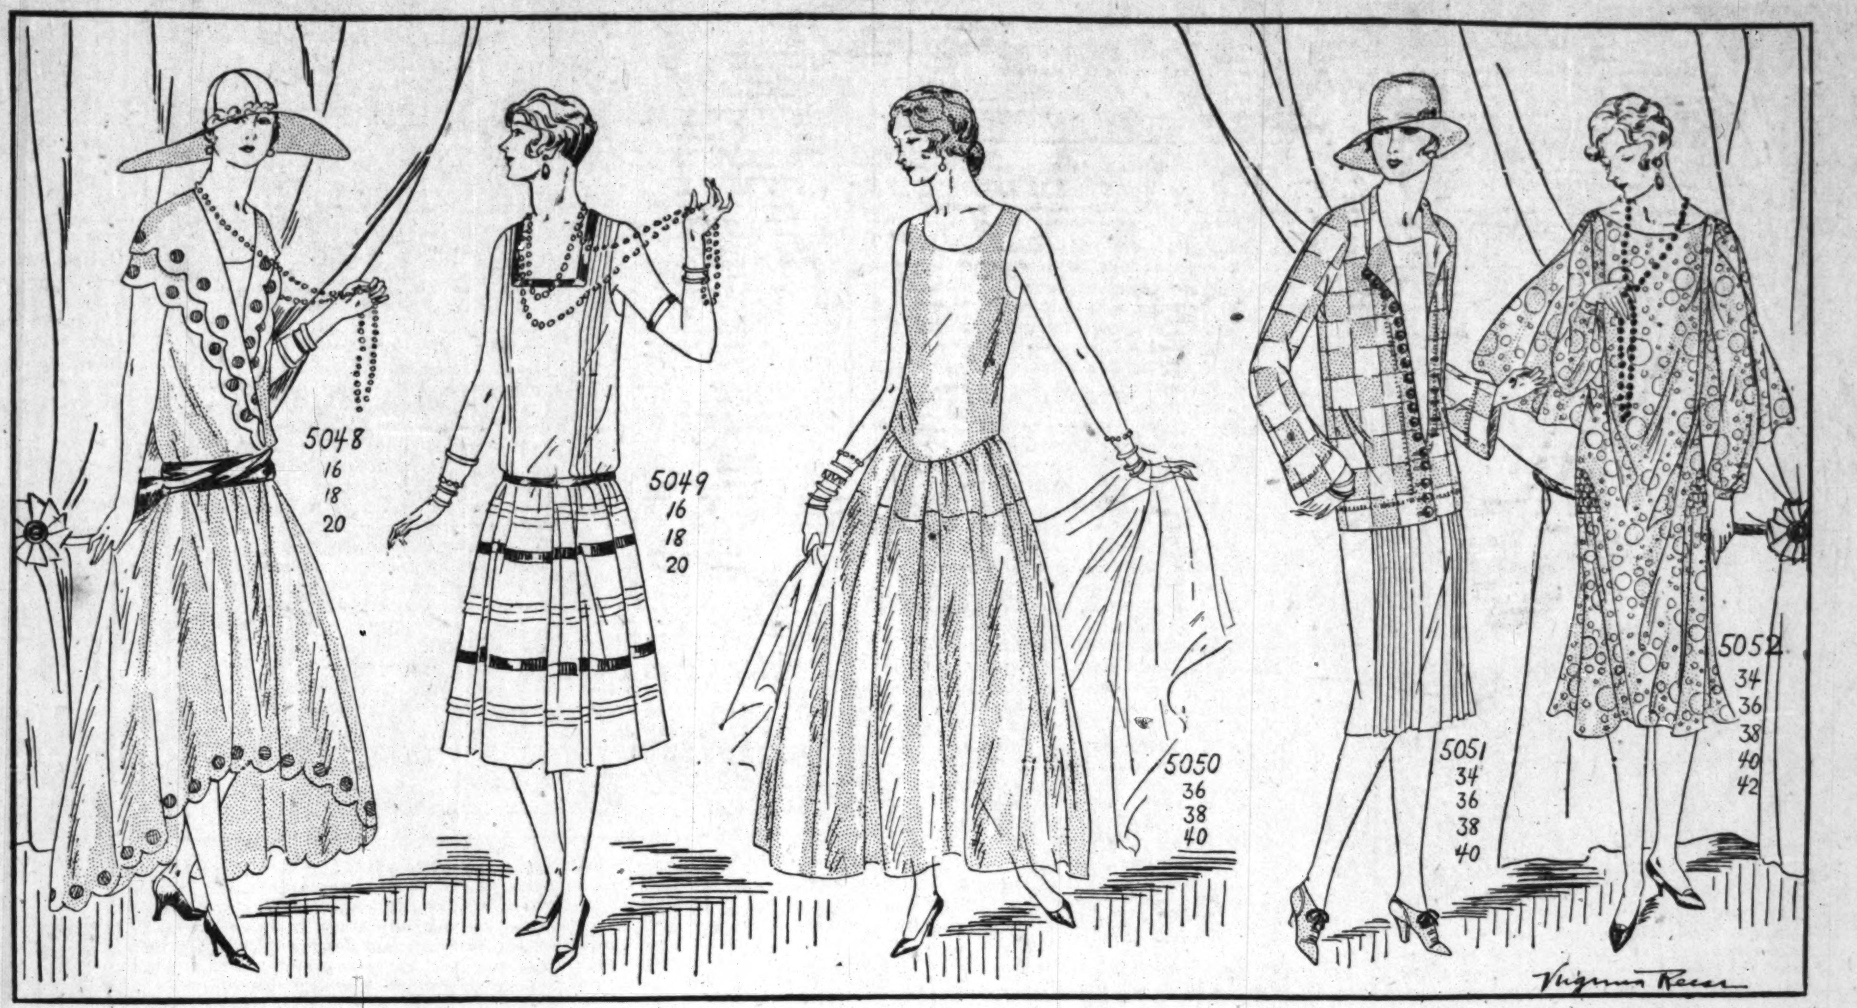
Often these cotton members of the jumper family follow prevalent ideas regarding the crêpe or silk original—that is, they mate a plain color skirt with a figured top. This is the formula observed in the fourth sketch from the left, and one look at it will assure you that here is a worthy rival of all crêpe and silk rivals.

The skirt is of white linen, and before passing from it one must comment upon the original disposition of plaits. In the center occurs a wide box plait, and from this point on either side extend fine plaits of gradually diminished width. The idea is out of the ordinary, and may, of course, be applied quite as successfully to the crêpe skirt as to cotton.

As to the jumper, this follows the popular coat formula. It is made of checked linen, contrasting squares of yellow with squares of white. Round white buttons are the executives and hand hemstitching finishes front, edge, and cuffs. The white linen top of the skirt is revealed by the coat's opening.

Here again the wisdom of the accessory must be preached. The success of this costume would, in fact, be blighted were it not for Oxfords of brown suede and a broad brimmed hat of yellow felt.

Of the more dressy types of cotton it may be said that they borrow all the finesse of style shown by their crêpe and chiffon competitors. For instance, we find the charming voile creation at the right distinguished by shirring at the tops of its side draperies, and heading its graceful shoulder cape.



Those two elderly citizens of the fashion world, organdy and the robe de style, are brought into an up-to-date union when chartreuse organdy embroidered in silver discs is sashed with deep yellow velvet, as sketched at the extreme left. Next, a charmingly simple little dinner frock for summer is achieved of ecru batiste treated to clusters of hand tucks and to bands of "June Rose" velvet ribbon.

In the center an evening organdy takes to itself a green crepe top.

Fourth from the left, a white linen skirt and a jumper-coat of yellow and white checked linen.

Last, a figured batiste with shirring at the top of its side-panels and its shoulder-cape.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

ANY one of the attractive wash materials will make up well by pattern No. 2698. It is a smart yet simple design and won't give any trouble in cutting or making. There are two pieces to the dress—front and back—and of course the one piece section for the full length sleeve, if that is preferred to the short one. At the sides of this dress there are inverted plaits. Perforations on the pattern show just how and where these are to be laid.

First the seams are stitched and pressed, then the plaits laid and basted from top to bottom. These bastings should be left in until the dress is finished. A short belt is made for both sides, and stitched all around, then placed over the plaited places. Buttons will finish the belt ends prettily and give the appearance of holding the belts in place.

It will be a good idea to stitch a narrow strip of the dress material over the tops of the plaits on the wrong side, being careful to turn in all corners perfectly before basting in place. The dress is cut square across the neck in the front, and a straight collar and tie, cut in one, are set on to give the appearance of a V neck with small shield set in.

Where these drop shoulders are seamed together it looks well to set a piping in the seams, or to stitch a narrow bias band over them, using some contrasting color. This same color can be used for the collar and tie strings. For size 36 this dress measures at the bottom about 1¾ yards.

Crêpe de chine showing a printed design of some kind, especially polka dots, would be attractive for a dress made by pattern No. 2718. It is a slip-on frock for a young girl, flaring prettily at the sides. It is cut with a V shaped neck in the front, and this is finished with one of those straight collars and ties cut in one piece. The drop shoulders form short sleeves, and these may be made full length by using the one piece section. This full length sleeve is gathered into a narrow wristband, and fastened invisibly with small snaps. Don't take too close a wrist measure, for it isn't comfortable. The gathered sleeve edge takes up a little of the measure, and this should be allowed for.

Pattern No. 2694 is a rather dressy model and will look well made up in some of the thin materials like georgette. Taffeta or one of the crêpes would also be lovely, and of course the dress could be left open at the neck if one wished. It is a slip-on dress, slashed in the center front, bound and finished for closing. The back is cut in one piece and has no belt or sash. It must be well fitted across the back—neither too tight nor too loose; and the straight line should not be disturbed.

In the front the dress is shirred on the shoulders, and this fullness is becoming alike to slender and full figures. The dress down the middle front is in panel style and there are shirred insets on both sides. The width at the bottom for size 36 is about 2⅛ yards, and as the lower edge is straight a hem can be put in by hand.

The sleeves extend to the back, forming saddle shoulders, and at the wrist they are gathered and set into narrow bands. The pattern is perforated for short sleeves, and, if the dress is made of something sheer, lace will trim well. The shirred sides of the dress are stitched to form pockets across the tops, a convenience all women will appreciate. It will be pretty to have narrow ribbon bows on the sleeves, and at the neck the same ribbon may be used, only allowing for long ends. Where ribbon appears to fasten a wristband together it is best to use small snaps besides.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

> I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

Still Wearing Winter Coat.

"I wonder if among your readers there is any one who has a spring coat or dress, size 36, they would give me. I am still wearing my winter coat and it is so heavy on my shoulders

"MRS. R. C."

There are so many wardrobes with just the articles this woman needs taking up space which could be put to better use. Let me know if yours is among them.

In Need of Clothing.

"I am the mother of four boys, aged 8, 6, 15 months, and 4 months and a girl, 4. We are all in need of clothing. If I had some decent clothing to wear I could get a job and help my husband. I wear size 38 and shoes, size 6. I need underwear and a hat and a dress, particularly. J. T."

If this mother had your discarded clothing, she could go to work and provide a better living for the children. Can you help?

Loves Music.

"I am a schoolgirl and I dearly love music. We have a piano, but I cannot afford to take lessons or buy music. Have any of your readers any discarded music to offer? H. U."

If you've grown tired of some of your sheet music this young lady might be able to do a great deal with it. May she have it?

For an Orphan.

"I wonder if any of your readers wouldn't like to help with clothing for a dear little miss of 12? We have provided room and board for her, but she needs a sweater coat—good size, 38 or 40—shoes or slippers, size 4½, dresses, and hose. M. M. F."

This request comes from out of the city and is for an orphan girl. Can you help a little bit with the clothing your daughters have outgrown or are ready to discard?

Urgent Need for a Stove.

"I would like to get a cook stove, as I have no way of cooking for my three small children. My gas has been shut off and the gas range was taken away. I have wood, and if I could get a cook stove it would be just fine for me.

"MRS. L."

Can you help this woman with the stove she needs in order to feed her young ones? If you have such a stove not in use it would indeed be a charity to donate it here.

Washes for Ten.

"I would be so thankful for a good washing machine. I have a family of ten children, the oldest being only 15. I wash several times a week and do all of it by hand. My husband's health has not been good for a year and he has worked only a little. MRS. S. M."

It's a task to do washing for ten children and a washing machine would be such a help to this struggling mother. May she have the one you are about to discard?

For a Plucky Woman.

"My husband and I are both badly in need of clothing. He is in a sanitarium and I am doing what I can to support us, and at the same time get decent clothing. I will be most grateful for anything your readers may have for us. I wear clothing, size 40, and shoes, size 5½. He wears size 40, shirts 15½, and he is also in need of night shirts. MRS. F."

It's a difficult task for one woman to perform when there are so many things an invalid needs. Just a little assistance would mean so much to her. If you wear the same sizes these people do you will doubtless have an article or two of clothing to give them.

Pathetic Case.

"Please will you help me get some good reading for this vacation? I am in my fifteenth year and am crippled from infantile paralysis. N. O."

This little girl does not live in the city, but if you have any reading matter for her we'll be glad to send you her address.

Wants a Tennis Racket.

"I am a working girl of 15 and am much interested in learning to play tennis, but with the salary of an office girl mother is unable to get me a tennis racket. I am wondering if there is some one who has a discarded one I might have. E. J. P."

If you have more than one tennis racket, or if you are thinking of getting a new one, why not let this girl have yours? She'd get so much pleasure out of it and then, too, the exercise would be fine for her.

Anxious for a Violin.

"Will some one please send me a violin? A friend of mine who plays one well has promised to give me lessons if I get an instrument. I am a boy, 13, in the fourth grade at school. I have been crippled since I was seven years old. LEO."

Leo is missing a great many of the things most boys of his age have, but perhaps we can get him the violin he wants so much. There may be great possibilities in our young musician.

Dictionary for Some One.

"I have an old dictionary I would like to give away. The binding is somewhat ragged, but the reading is perfect. MRS. T. W. C."

If you'd like to have this dictionary write us for it at once.

Offers Magazines.

"I have 1½ years of 'Woman's World,' 'McCall's,' 'Modern Priscilla' and other magazines I would be glad to give to a shut-in or any one who would like to have them. W. M. L."

This is a varied collection of reading matter and if you'd like to have some of it write to us at once.

For an Invalid.

"I would like to have a copy of the April 10 issue of Liberty magazine. I am a patient in wheel chair and I find it difficult to get one. C. G. S."

If you have the issue of Liberty this invalid wants please send it to her. She'll be most grateful for it.

Beauty Answers

J. G. R.: AGE THIRTY-ONE, FIVE feet two, you should weigh about 125 pounds, according to standard tables. You have reason to feel you are skinny, but you can overcome this if you will follow instructions on how to put on extra weight, which I have in printed form. You are told just what foods to eat, how much rest to take, the proper exercises, etc. It will be necessary to send a stamped addressed envelope for the booklet.

JENNIE: I HAVE A SET OF twelve exercises, called "My Youth Preservers," which are just what you need. They may be done every morning on arising, and in a short time you will find you have recovered your usual "pep." Your trouble is that you are too closely confined. It would also be well to spend at least a half hour in the open air. A two mile walk would keep you in the fresh air and would be found very exhilarating. Send stamped addressed envelope for the exercises.

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel, and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative that helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

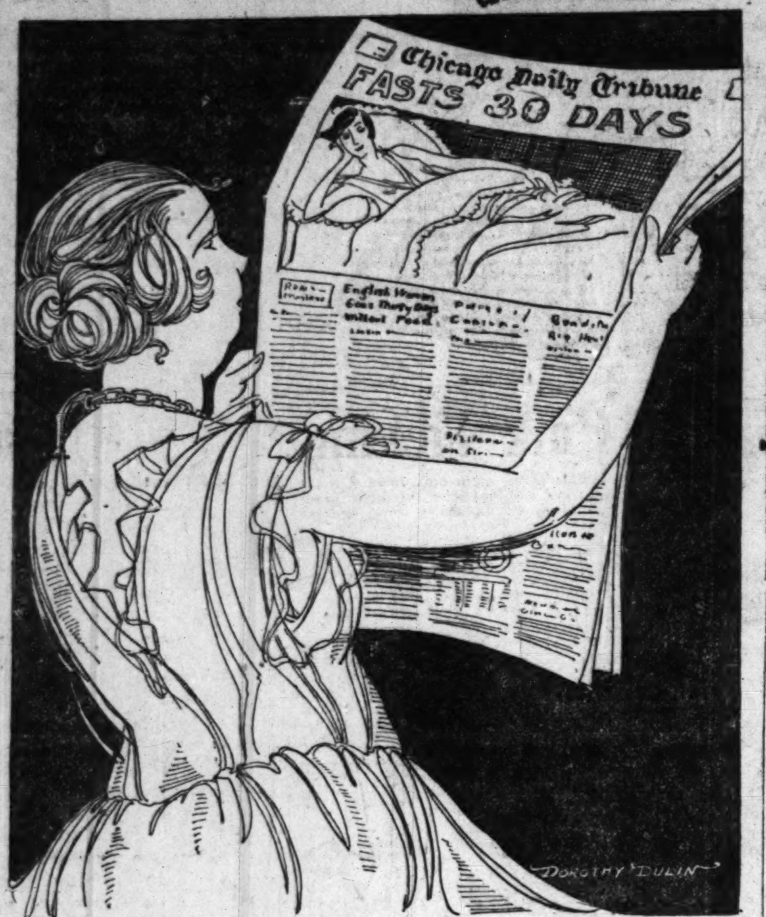
FACTS ABOUT FASTING

by Antoinette Donnelly

Answers to the Questions, "What Does Foodless Diet Accomplish?" and "How Long Is It Safe to Starve?"



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Inspired, no doubt, by the wide publicity recently given public exhibitions of long distance fasting feats abroad, many inquiries come to me about the advisability of going on foodless diets for prolonged periods of time.

I am asked how many pounds one could take off on a fifteen day fast, a twenty and a thirty day fast, if there is danger attached to this method of weight reduction? And so on.

An English woman, Lady Fisher, you will recall, went over thirty days without food, by her own confession, at the end of which time she reported feeling better than she had in years. Her feat gave impetus to the ambition of a number of women to acquire a perfect-flapper-size-32, regardless of how nature designed or intended their personal architecture. The truth is that the English woman was not fasting to reduce, but to clear up a malady of some years' standing. And during the course of her experiment she was under direct medical observation in a health sanitarium.

So perilous to the health of the nation has become woman's passion for the boyish form and the pencil silhouette that a whole body of representative medical men met recently to take up this problem of weight and attempt to show the dangers to health of the wholesale reduction that is going on in our midst. They agreed that if one weighed more than she should, it is not harmful to reduce. On the contrary, it is the right thing to do. Insurance companies agree that people of overweight have less chance of longevity than those of normal weight.

Carrying the Thing Too Far.

But there is a large group of women—particularly to be found among the younger element—that reduces not to be normal in weight but to the point of emaciation. And in this is seen extreme peril to both present and future generations.

I feel a warning should be issued in the face of the many queries about fasting!

Strenuous reducing methods are liable to result in serious loss of vitality and in general health impairment.

Prolonged fasting comes more or less under the heading of fads and should be considered as such. There are successful methods of bringing the weight down to normal without resorting to freak experiments.

When I speak of prolonged periods of fasting I mean fifteen, twenty, and thirty day food abstinences. For the average individual the prolonged fast is inadvisable because it is debilitating. A too rapid loss of weight takes material from important structures of the body, often producing serious and enduring bad effects. It has even been known to impair the intellect. There is always a chance with the long fast of disturbing certain of the large organs of the body.

There is no question, however, that any one who so wishes may fast for a day, or even for a number of days, without danger to health. In certain disorders, more particularly those of the alimentary tract, such as auto-intoxication, intestinal toxemia, and fermentation, it is recommended by medical authorities as one of the best means of giving nature a chance to clean house.

Poisons Are Eliminated.

It is a known fact that almost every individual carries around in his system a certain amount of effete matter that were better disposed of. During successful fasting experiments it has been proven that the liquid consumed was the item of real benefit to the system. It is the liquid that clears up the system, the skin, and the brain, and attains the other miracles of rejuvenation credited to the foodless stretch.

If you consume water or liquid of some kind you may go on a seven day fast with benefit, providing your system needs clearing up. A ten day fast is the longest period recommended for a beginner.

For those of you who may feel the urge to commit your system to a general overhauling at the sacrifice of your three squares per day, the following program may be adopted without fear of anything but good resulting.

Alternate daily with vegetable soup and fruit juices: A bowl of strained vegetable soup for breakfast, luncheon, and dinner one day, the next a glass of orange juice or grape juice for each of the three customary meals. Plenty of water should be taken between meals.

At the end of the seven or ten day fast arrange a moderate return program such as: Breakfast, oatmeal and a cup of tea; luncheon, a glass of milk; dinner, chicken broth, a little toast and salad. Gradually build up to your normal intake.

The idea of the fast as I recommend it is not as a strenuous reducing program, but as a means of ridding the system of poisonous matters that stand between woman and the beauty of her hair and skin and the other items of personal efficiency that are bound to be impaired with the retention of waste products and poisons. A ten day fast will, of course, reduce one anywhere from two to five pounds, which would not come under the category of dangerous reductions.

It is necessary to keep the bowels regulated during the fast. If the liquids are not sufficient, help out with mineral oil.

On an Orange Juice Diet.

The vegetable soups and the liquid juices are recommended because of their nourishing content. Orange juice has real caloric value, and it has vitamin content in large quantity. It has abundance of the valuable acids, turning to alkalis in the blood and iron and other mineral salts.

When I was in California last summer I put myself on an orange juice diet for a week and can therefore personally indorse this fruit as a golden medicine. Though I went without food altogether, I never experienced the craving for food that is characteristic of fasts as a rule.

The liquids consumed are in the nature of colonic flushings, really. One medical authority tells me that before the ten day fast is undertaken it is wise to have a colonic flushing and have another at its conclusion.

While not so thorough as a colonic flushing administered under medical direction, this simple home expedient is recommended:

Take two heaping teaspoonfuls of table salt and five glasses of hot water. Mix in a pitcher and have water as hot as you can stand it. Sit up in bed to take it and gulp down as fast as possible. Then lie down, turning on the right side. At the end of an hour all that water will have traveled through the alimentary system and flushed it pretty thoroughly.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

SUMMER SENSE AND SENSIBILITIES.

THIS is the season when we prefer thin toast to thick, and preferably on thin china. This is the time when we imagine that we want mostly cold foods, but really need to have sense enough to see that a sensible balance between hot and cold is "yours for health." An ice cold drink, containing considerable sugar, will in the end make us hotter than a hot tea containing little or no sugar. The people, or the English, in India long since learned that the drinking of hot tea was the safest thing to do in the heat.

Light and hot beverages, hot soups, and other simple hot foods are far safer in the end for summer consumption than heavy and cold. An ice cream of heavy cream, made agreeably sweet with sugar, may contain, per portion, enough fuel or energy to keep us warm on an exceedingly cold day, and exceedingly uncomfortable on a warm one.

Yet it is a great mistake not to eat a judicious quantity of energy foods during the summer time. We need energy to help us to endure the heat. A diet of tomatoes and watermelon may do for the woman or some women who are reducing, celery alternating with the tomatoes, when it comes in, but the body requires nice attention to make anything of the sort safe, and it is no diet for a hard worker, summer or not. Some women trying it promptly collapse.

Cold oatmeal, with some fruit like raspberries or peaches, may be an agreeable breakfast dish for summer, especially if beautifully served, while giving a body a safe energy supply for a half day or more of ordinary living. It goes without saying that it must be cooked to perfection, but that is easy. Big hominy, cold, may also be agreeable, but it is also agreeable hot, even on a hot morning, just as coffee is. That coffee, or its sugar and cream, is just some flavored energy foods. But as to the breakfast cereals for summer, do not take them if you consider them as moral rather than interesting foods. In the former case you do not get full digestive value from them.

Heat to Sterilize.

Few people probably give a thought to the fact that the sterilizing of milk has done as much for the health of the nation as protecting our water supplies, or far more. Milk and water can absolutely hide their unsafe qualities, as can no end of foods, and be as dangerous as the "smiler with a knife under his cloak" with which he intends to strike you down.

Scalding Vegetables.

It has been said of the French woman that she scalds every vegetable that goes into the pot. She does it to perfect each flavor by doing what an American, who went into the demonstrating of cold pack canning, quite seriously called "laundering" them. The process is brief and the loss, if any, is slight, while it is truly a safety first measure. Look at okra or even string beans under a microscope, and see what they have collected in the period of growing, in the way of dust and dirt. It cannot easily be washed off. And all the greens are safest and most palatable if "laundered," although the process may be brief or but a minute in boiling water, with a dip immediately in the coldest of water to be had. It has been proven that this rapid change of temperature from hot to cold sets them as well on their way to tenderness or edibleness as cooking that is three times as long. And in this connection we might utter the caution about cooking green vegetables for too long a time, as is so often done. A vegetable that is perfectly edible raw, if overcooked may be more like straw than it ought to be, much more. Wisdom in this matter did not begin with us or us moderns. Charles Egbert Craddock a generation or two ago put the following into a story: "'Cynthy, air ye a-goin' ter set thar in the door all day, an' that thar pot a-bilin' all the stren'th out'n that thar cabbige an' roas'in ears?'" Cabbage and green corn are quite universally cooked too long, and the sugar in the corn gets almost completely dissolved in the hot or boiling water. The cabbage loses its flavoring solubles and changes color.

Understanding Boiling Water.

When boiling water is poured over vegetables which have been well washed in cold water it may be reduced, in the act, to a temperature which is far below the boiling point, below the point or degree for effective sterilization. Therefore, it is best, in most cases, to drop them into boiling water over the fire and then let the water at least come to a boil, though in the case of spinach, live steam is often used for the sterilization with a subsequent cold dip, taking pains to have the cold water penetrate the mass thoroughly.

In making drip coffee with boiling water the water poured in a thin stream [through the air at a temperature of 80 perhaps in summer] may not be above 185 or at the most 200 degrees by the time it hits the coffee. Some people get poor coffee for this reason, especially if they pour the water all on the coffee at once, instead of by installments, with boilings between, and in other cooking preparations it may be possible to go through the business of sterilizing food and yet not effect it for the same reason.

Sterilizing Utensils.

Probably more people are made ill every summer from eating from dirty dishes and from eating food cooked in dishes which are dirty than any one could ever guess. Some dangerous bacteria are exceedingly resistant to heat. Our grandmothers did not express it in this fashion, but when they used the three day method of canning, because otherwise their foods might "spoil," they were recognizing the fact in their own way. Heat and moisture are favorable to the growth of bacteria. One heating of bacteria laden food may just "hatch" some of these, as it were, and another cooking or two is necessary to kill them. Pitted aluminum, iron, and in fact almost any utensil except perhaps glass, and this may have invisible pores, holds remnants of food products that may spoil in hot weather and that are certainly objectionable when combined with dish water. One of the ways to make kettles safe after washing them with the utmost thoroughness is to invert them over the gas burner until they are heated much hotter than boiling temperature. Jelly glasses and cans may be sterilized in the same way, and if clean may so be safer than when sterilized in boiling water. Or they may be sterilized in pressure cookers. Though it does not improve a good steel knife to heat it, there are reasons for doing it sometimes, if we want to be surgically clean.

Freezing Foods.

Everybody who makes ice creams and mousses knows that there is a happy medium of physical condition which it is none too easy to secure, that is, these may either be frozen too hard when they do not seem to have much taste, or they are too soft. You find by touching your tongue to an icicle that it "burns." You may find in other ways that extreme cold dulls the taste, so that no matter what went into the ice cream to flavor it delightfully, you cannot get that flavor. Chilled puddings and creams may therefore be more agreeable to eat than many an ice or ice cream.

Unsweetened Condensed Milk Ice Cream.

After a number of experiments we found that the flavor in this milk, native to all condensed milks, could be completely covered up if it was sweetened with a brown sugar sirup and had about two tablespoons of raisins per cup, the milk being diluted according to the directions on the can. Such an ice cream is, of course, a summer convenience, but it is doubtful whether it is worth while to make it with fresh fruits.

White Sauce Ice Cream.

A large family of distinguished folk have found at their summer home, where eggs and cream are not always obtainable, that they can get an ice cream that wins much commendation by using a white sauce to which eggs and cream may be added when obtainable, also fruits. In experimenting with this idea a cup of white sauce was made the day before—they make their white sauce thus in advance—with one cup of milk, two tablespoons of flour and one tablespoon of butter, and a mere suggestion of salt. The next day one-fourth cup of sugar was cooked in a double boiler with one beaten egg yolk, with constant stirring, until smooth and thick. This and four tablespoons of cream whipped, and a half teaspoon of vanilla combined with the white sauce, made a rather heavy frozen thing but excellent and it showed how many varieties were possible.

Frozen Tapioca Cream.

A tapioca cream pudding is improved 100 per cent by chilling and perhaps 200 per cent by freezing like any ice cream. In this case we thicken our milk with tapioca instead of flour, as in making a white sauce ice cream. Use these proportions: One quart milk, four tablespoons granulated tapioca, one cup sugar, two eggs, a little cream—more or less—and vanilla flavor. Wet the tapioca with a little of the milk, stir, add the rest of the milk and sugar, put over the fire and stir and cook for at least twenty minutes, beat the yolks of the eggs and stir into the pudding just before taking it from the fire. Take from the fire and after it has slightly cooled fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Cool, put into a freezer with ice and salt, and when chilled, turn the crank and freeze. When it is partly frozen add a half cup or a cup of cream whipped. Other flavors than vanilla may be used, but a vanilla bean cooled with the milk and tapioca makes a delicious flavor. In making half this quantity, beat up a whole egg and stir it into the tapioca thickened milk. Anywhere from two tablespoons to half a cup of cream whipped may be used with this. Other sweetenings, such as maple sirup, may be used and coffee for flavor is good.

Cooking Green Corn.

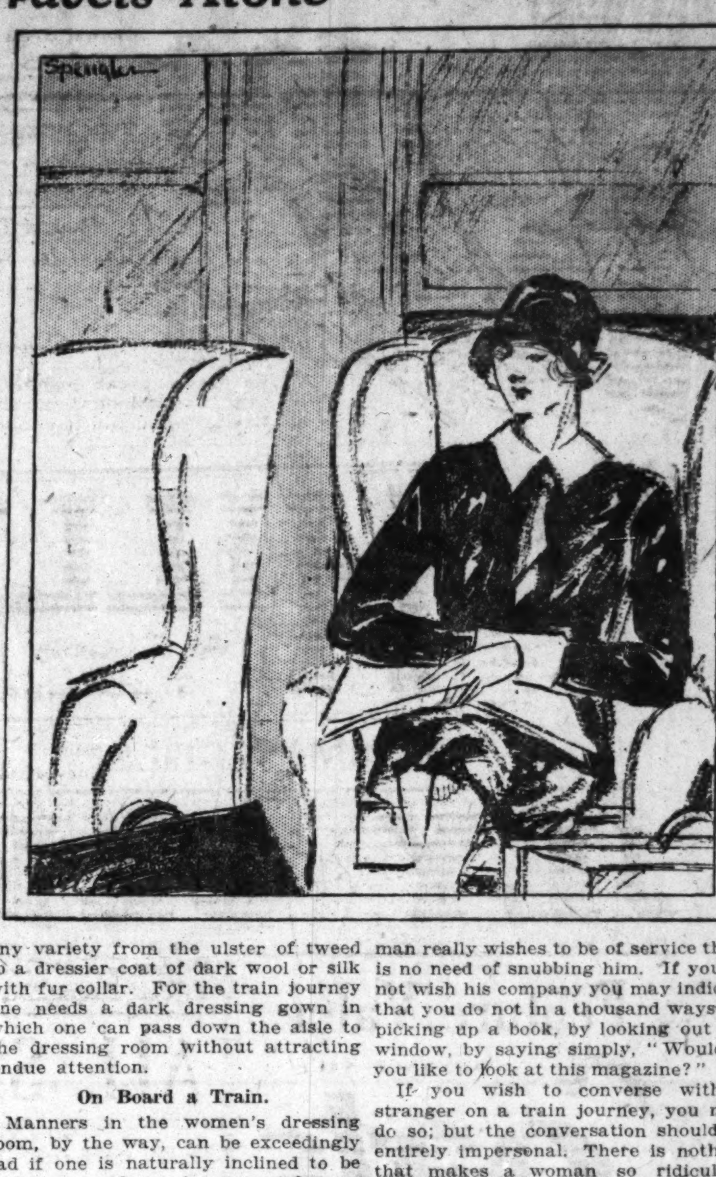
They have a deplorable habit in our modern markets of husking green corn, or in some cases of cutting a square of the husk out of the side, so exposing the delicate inner part. Probably this has come about because so many women have had the habit of pulling open a dozen ears of corn when they intended to buy but one or two, or none. For the sake of the grower, the merchant, and myself, I prefer to take the risk or learn by the feel of the kernels through the husk and buy my corn without opening the husk. I would rather get ears by many people considered too unripe, yet good for soup, than see this enormous waste and the rise in price in consequence which has affected us all as much as "keeping up with Lizzie" ever did. Because Lizzie had to be so fine her father raised his prices on everything and then the community had to raise its and so forth —an endless and a weak chain.

Corn that is taken carefully from the husk with clean hands needs no washing, any more than carefully shelled peas do, and it is the better. Nature has pasteurized the milk in the corn, and it is a shame to unpasteurize its container. Take off the outer husks, then wash and dry your hands, and turn down the inner ones and remove the silk, then turn back the husks. Roasted it is best, but to cook in water, cover with cold water to start with, a little salt, and if the corn is not high grade add also a teaspoon of sugar or more—perhaps a tablespoon to half a dozen ears of corn. After the water around the corn comes to a boil let the corn cook ten minutes, then take up and serve at once.

When a Girl Travels Alone

By Persis Standish

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.



THE vacation letters still come from girls going to Europe for the first time or to a summer resort alone. One letter says, "Please tell me how to eat corn off the cob in a hotel." That may sound funny to the average reader. You may laugh if you choose, but to me it is a symbol of the general discomfort some people feel in public places. To be in a hotel for the first time [and everything happens for the first time, remember] alone, is an ordeal for many people who are not born to walk about the high places of the world.

Imagine the girl who wrote the letter. She lives in a little midwestern town, she has never been out of it further than to go to surrounding cities of no great size which are totally lacking in smartness. Now she is making her first trip to New York. She will spend a week at a hostelry so huge that its population is greater than that of her home town. To her imagination the inhabitants are all cosmopolites who will, with one scathing glance, label her as "hick" if she makes the least false move or wears the least thing wrong in clothing or hats.

The women's magazines, with their shopping service and their sound advice on apparel, have done much for her in the way of knowing how to dress simply and modestly, so that she will no more be noticed in New York than an individual mosquito in a swarm. But nobody has told her how she must act, how she must, in fact, eat corn off the cob.

Avoiding Comedy.

There's no use telling her to eat it just as she would at home, because the chances are, if you did, she'd think you didn't know what you were talking about, and perhaps they will serve holders with the corn in New York if the waiter remembers them, and then she would be confused.

What she really wants to know is just what to do so that she will not seem ridiculous to herself and so communicate comedy to austere clerks, chastely diplomatic captains, and bumptious bellboys. What a terror these must be to timid and unaccustomed travelers conscious of the fact that their savings are really not enough to impress these ambassadors, and unconscious of the fact that a little of their own brand of effrontery would bring them veering around to respectfulness!

A woman traveling alone needs first of all to have inconspicuous but appropriate clothing. Time was when it was an edict of Mrs. Grundy that one traveled in a tailored suit though one sweltered in the heat of August. But that time is past. One may now wear a simple silk dress, cool and of dark color, and carry a plain coat of any variety from the ulster of tweed to a dressier coat of dark wool or silk with fur collar. For the train journey one needs a dark dressing gown in which one can pass down the aisle to the dressing room without attracting undue attention.

On Board a Train.

Manners in the women's dressing room, by the way, can be exceedingly bad if one is naturally inclined to be selfish or careless. A woman takes up as little space and time as possible in the dressing room. She keeps her own things in her bag, and does not spread them all over the place so that she will hamper others. She should do as much of her dressing in her berth as possible. She should be careful not to sprinkle powder about. When she has finished washing she wipes out the basin with her towel, so that the next in line may not be disquieted by the dirty bowl. She waits her turn, never crowding in to the mirror before others who were there first. If she is traveling with a friend, they do not talk about personal matters in the dressing room.

No woman ever traveled without some man either speaking to her or without the woman imagining that some man wanted to. It's much the same thing. If a man speaks to a woman on the train, she should answer politely. It is much more disarming to freshness than a snub and if the man really wishes to be of service there is no need of snubbing him. If you do not wish his company you may indicate that you do not in a thousand ways, by picking up a book, by looking out the window, by saying simply, "Wouldn't you like to look at this magazine?"

If you wish to converse with a stranger on a train journey, you may do so; but the conversation should be entirely impersonal. There is nothing that makes a woman so ridiculous as exchanging personalities with a strange man on a train while the whole Pullman grins behind its hand.

Never allow a man to pay for a meal in a diner. If he is a gentleman, he will not offer to do so. If you are on a long transcontinental trip and wish to talk to him during a meal, that is your privilege; but you must ask the waiter for a separate check or ask him to ask the waiter.

If two women are traveling alone in a drawing room and they happen to become acquainted with a fellow traveler, they may ask him to sit in their drawing room during the day chat time; but while he is there they must keep the door open. If the man has discretion, he will not overstay his visit, but will make it merely a call or for the duration of a bridge game.

Don't Make Advances.

No woman should ever make the advances. If she does, the man has the right to conclude that she is the other kind of woman. There are, of course, unsnubbable men. When they are too annoying, it is a woman's privilege to speak to the porter or the conductor and either have her berth changed into some other car, if possible, or have the man reproved. This is seldom necessary, because a self-respecting woman makes the fact known naturally and speedily, and few men are willing to take a rebuke with fellow passengers looking on.

All this, of course, is for women who are grown up and can use discretion in the choosing of men whom they allow to speak to them in the duration of time they allow for conversation and the number of times they speak to the same man either at meals or in the Pullman.

Mrs. Grundy, of course, says, "One absolutely must not speak to strangers or allow them to speak to you," but Mrs. Grundy needs modifying, and most of her arbitrary dicta are for those who are naturally silly and need to be told that black is black and white white.

At a Hotel.

A woman going to a hotel alone writes first to secure reservations. She requests an answer by wire. This telegram she takes with her to the desk in the hotel and presents it to the clerk, saying, "I am Miss Brown. Have you a room for me?" The clerk then presents her with the register, she signs her name, always with the prefix Miss or Mrs. Since we are talking about an unmarried woman, she signs herself "Miss Margaret Brown, Nona, Wis." She is then shown to her room by a bell boy and possibly a maid. She should tip the bell boy for carrying her bags, and also the maid, if there happens to be one, who will open the windows or turn on the lights, etc.

We will suppose that she is dining alone that evening. She should wear a dressy afternoon gown with a hat or a simple dinner gown without a hat —never an evening gown when she is dining alone. The captain will see her hesitate at the door of the dining hall. He will come forward. She should follow him and take the seat he indicates, never going in and just sitting any place. If she is wise and intends to lunch or dine often at her hotel, she will do well to tip the captain, so that he will give her a table where she will be comfortable, inconspicuous, and have a view of the dining room.

If she so wishes, she may sit a while in the lobby and listen to the music and watch the people; but she should have a book with her, so that she may be engrossed in the same if occasion should arise. There is no hotel, not in America, at least, where a woman alone may not go with utter safety and receive respect and courtesy if she commands it.

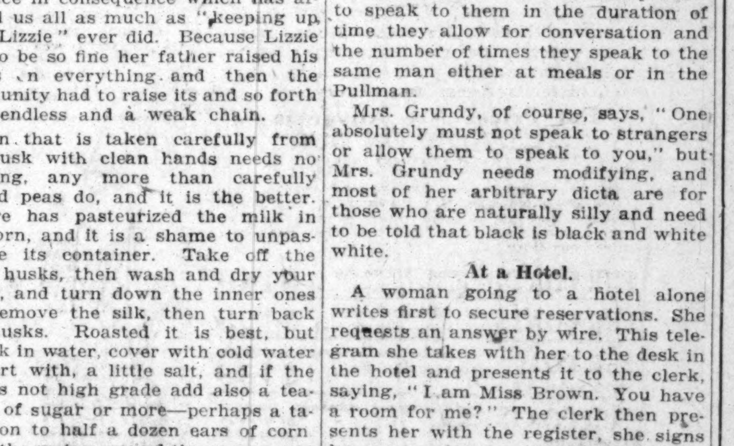
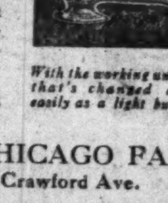
A NEW STEP toward kitchen joy
A STAINLESS Steel Frying Pan
YOU know how superior Stainless knives are compared to ordinary cutlery. Well, here's a Polar Stainless Frying Pan that is just as far ahead of all other frying pans.
It's as bright as a mirror, inside and out,—and simple washing keeps it that way. It will never rust, and a Polar Stainless will look like new for years and years. Better to fry in because Stainless Steel heats evenly and retains heat longer. The easiest pan to clean and keep clean that you ever saw. It will never lose its shape or warp—it will last a lifetime. Don't be without this new miracle of the kitchen—get a Polar Stainless Frying Pan today—at the special Introductory Price offered by leading stores.
POLAR STAINLESS Frying Pan
So Easy to Keep Clean





A Kitchen Conference
THE White-Enamel-Gas-Range, the Spic-and-Span-Kitchen-Cabinet, and the Iceless-Refrigerator were talking things over with the Porcelain-Sink.
"You're all right," they agreed, "but those faucets they pinned on you are all wet. They're twenty years behind the times and they annoy us dreadfully with their constant leaking."
The handsome Porcelain-Sink shed bitter tears through its two old-style kitchen "bibs." It was an awfully embarrassing moment.
Then one day a big good-natured plumber breezed in with a Classic Sink Fixture. Off came the old faucets and on went the Classic.
"Hooray," shouted the Porcelain-Sink. "Look at me now. See my fine new mixing faucet with its swinging spout, its hose and spray attachment, its self-draining soap-dish, its drip-free, splashless nozzle.
"It's a Classic. No more leaks. And it will be here as long as I am because it's a Chicago Faucet."
Modern kitchens deserve Classic Sink Fixtures. Get one from your plumber (Price, $15.00) or call, write or phone

STUDYING A MODEL HOUSE.

In many cities nowadays a house is selected, taken over by the community, completely decorated and furnished by skilled homemakers, and then thrown open to the public that they may benefit by the example placed before them. The object is to develop more efficiency in furnishing and a sense of the artistic in the modern home. Such a house as this has been completed recently in one of the suburbs. It is a brick house with a lovely terrace across the front, set well back from the road. The main entrance opens into a tiled vestibule, where a coat closet is built in at each side. Up three steps from the vestibule is a good sized stair hall, separating the living and dining rooms. The walls are a light creamy gray, the woodwork old ivory, and the floor and stairs are stained walnut. Against one wall is a colonial console table with mirror above, flanked by a pair of ladder-back chairs. A star shaped glass lantern suspended from the ceiling by a brass chain is fitted with an electric light.

The living room, to the right of the stair hall, is entered through an arched opening, as shown in today's illustration. The walls are a deep parchment yellow and the woodwork is dull leaf green. Arranged to draw across a group of four windows are draperies of flowered chintz, in bright naturalistic colors on a pale green ground. Natural colored casement cloth curtains hang to the sill beneath these draperies. Placed vis-a-vis, at right angles to a large open fireplace are two Chesterfield sofas. A delightful coffee table stands between them. The sofas and one large arm chair have slip covers of chintz matching the draperies. A commodious secretary desk is accompanied by a ladder back chair and a wrought iron reading lamp with a parchment shade banded in mauve and green. In one corner of the room is a radio cabinet, supplemented by a comfortable arm chair with an end table which holds smoking accessories—to delight the man of the house.

French doors lead from the living room into the sun room. Here walls and woodwork are pale parchment yellow and the reed furniture is painted leaf green. At the many windows are draw curtains of mauve sunfast. Cushions for the furniture are of the same mauve, piped with old blue. Wrought iron lamps, with parchment shades, and a black and ecru fiber rug complete the room.

Across the hall from the living room is the dining room. Walls are of pistachio green tinted plaster, above walnut wainscoting. The furniture is Heppelwhite, with the chair seats upholstered in mulberry denim, in a small allover diamond pattern. At one side of the room is a group of leaded windows. Stretching across the top of the whole group is a shaded lambrequin, with a floor length drapery at each extremity. These are made of mulberry damask. A deep mulberry rug almost entirely covers the floor.

Balancing the sun room, which projects from the living room, is a breakfast room, adjoining the dining rooms. The walls are old ivory, paneled in pistachio green. Old fashioned maple furniture is used. The table is oval, of the drop leaf type. It is supplemented by rush bottom maple chairs. Curtains of natural colored linen are finished with a gay, multi-colored worsted fringe.

The kitchen is a model of efficiency, being fitted with the best of modern equipment, including an electric refrigerator and a convenient incinerator. One wall is lined with cupboards with glass doors. Wainscoting and cupboards are painted cream color. Above the wainscoting, the walls are a delightful sky blue. A breakfast nook in one corner of the room is fitted with a built in table and pair of benches, painted cream color and trimmed with blue. Cream colored voile curtains at the windows are bordered with bands of blue and white checked gingham. Blue and cream linoleum covers the floor.

Upstairs are three bedrooms and a study which might be used as an extra bedroom if so desired. In the main bedroom the walls are covered with a gray scenic paper and the woodwork is old ivory. At the windows are ruffled turquoise blue silk marquisette draperies, over ruffled ivory marquisette glass curtains. The furniture is mahogany. Covers on the twin four post beds are of turquoise blue silk poplin piped with jade green. A night stand between the beds holds an old fashioned glass lamp with a plaited chintz shade. A comfortable wing chair is upholstered in turquoise blue denim. Built in below a group of windows is a long window bench. It is painted old ivory and fitted with a boxed cushion covered in blue denim, piped in jade. A midnight blue rug covers the floor.

In the second bedroom, the walls are a pale lemon yellow and the woodwork is old ivory. Window draperies and bed cover are of flowered cretonne in a Chinese pattern. A window bench has its boxed cushion upholstered to match. The furniture is enameled a glossy black. On the floor are Chinese rugs with a lemon yellow ground.

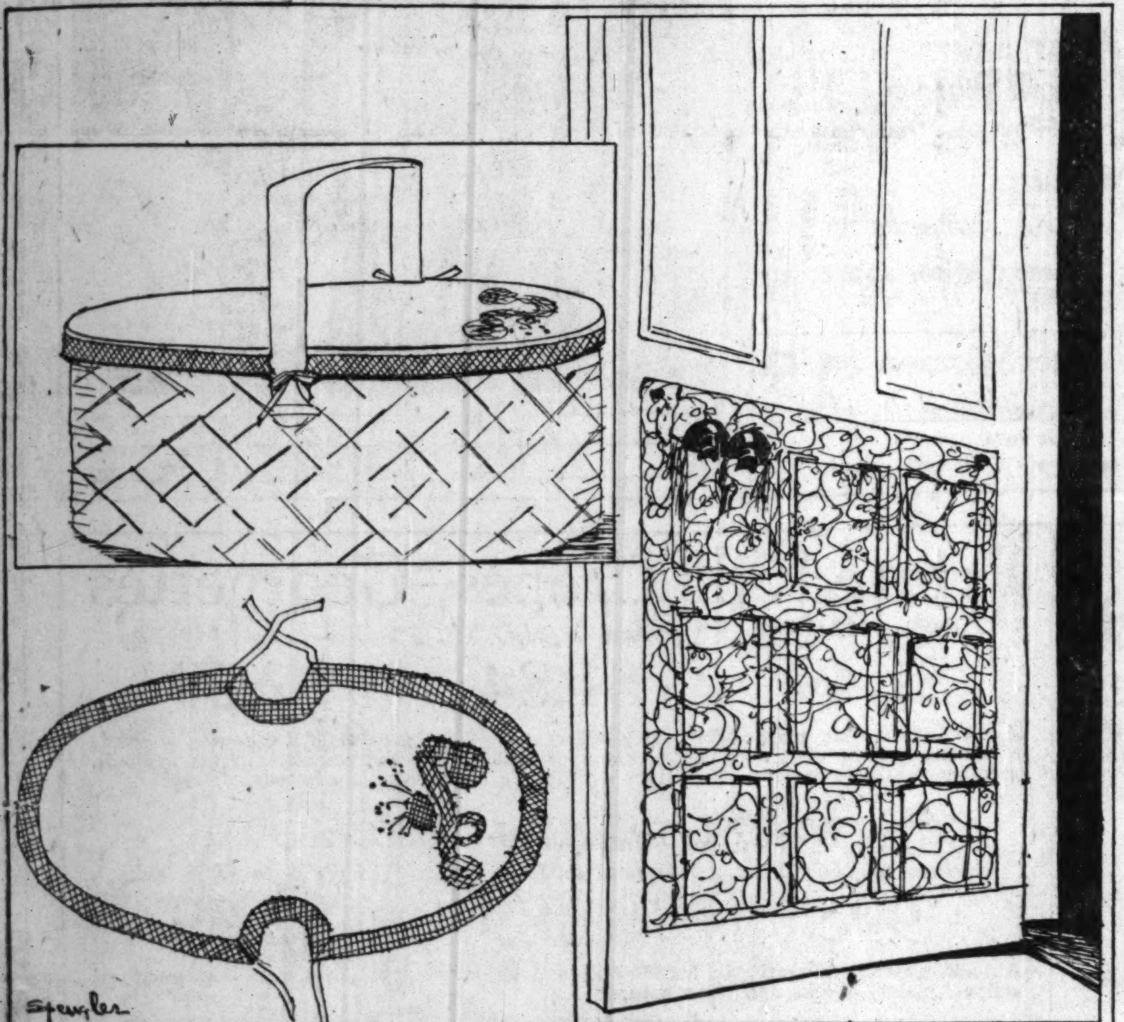
Apple blossom pink walls and light French gray woodwork are the basis for the color scheme in the third bedroom. The furniture is painted French gray. A bed cover is made of orchid taffeta. At the windows are pink silk gauze curtains finished with orchid ruffles. The floor is rugged in deep amethyst.

Completing the house is the study room. Woodwork is painted black and walls are finished in rough plaster, tinted light orange. Against one wall is a day bed piled with cushions of many different vivid colors. Placed at right angles to a double window is a large flat top desk with a Windsor chair. Near by is a geographic globe. Between two windows book shelves are built in. The windows are topped by lambrequins showing flowers in brilliant colors against a black ground. Draperies are of burnt orange sunfast edged with narrow black worsted fringe.

A comfortable Coxwell chair is upholstered in bronze colored mohair. It is accompanied by a low marble topped table on which a lighted cigaret, or a moist cocktail glass may be set down carelessly without detriment to the finish. A large wing chair is upholstered in material matching that which makes the lambrequins. Wrought iron reading lamps are placed by the desk and Coxwell chair and at one end of the day bed. A black chenille rug is used.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in folowing a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

FOR THE PICNIC BASKET.

HAVE you a well fitted cover for your picnic basket? If not, it will take only a short while to make one and it will be wonderfully convenient.

For the ordinary basket a piece of linen 24 inches long and 15 wide will be right. In the middle of the length where the handles come the linen is cut in as the picture shows, to make room for them. The cover shown is of white linen with the edges turned up toward the right side and a bias strip of yellow and white checked gingham is basted in place and stitched on both edges. This makes a pretty finish. Pieces of narrow linen tape should be cut and each one hemmed on one end. Then a piece is slipped inside the mitered corners and stitched. These are then tied around the place where the handles are put. This cover is intended to come well down over the sides of the basket and will keep the contents in good shape.

A design is sewed across each end, the checked gingham being used, the edges being turned in and the gingham hemmed down. Then black floss is used for French knots in the centers of each end, and for the finish of the flowers. Of course, instead of using the gingham you could, if you choose, use cross stitch embroidery in one or more colors and some effective design. This form of embroidery is quick work, effective, and wonderfully pretty.

Have you shoe bags for the inside of your closet doors? One sees these in a great variety of cretonnes, denims, and linens in the shops, and they are most convenient to have. But if you like to sew you can, of course, make things much cheaper than it is possible to buy them ready made. Some of these bags are two-thirds the length of a door, while others have only two and three rows of pockets. The width and length of the bag should be governed largely by the size of the door. Then cut a piece of material for the back of the bag, and then strips for the pockets. Thirteen or fourteen inches deep is the usual width, and the strip must be long enough to make three or four pockets, allowing for a double box plait which is held in place across the bottom and will spread if necessary to its full width across the top.

Bind the pocket strips across the top with mercerized braid and then lay the plaits and baste in position on the back of the bag. The first row of pockets will be at the bottom, having the raw edge of the bottom of the back and of the pocket strip meet. Then baste the other rows of pockets in place, and cover the raw edges of these with the braid basted on flat and stitched on both edges. After this is done, carefully baste the braid on all around as a binding, and stitch. First, however, turn and stitch a hem across the top of the bag—letting it be perhaps two inches deep. This gives a firm place to put a couple of brass headed tacks.

These bags are nice for wrapping paper, dust cloths, and various other articles.

Just as long as you show his attentions to other girls annoy you he will continue them, Blondie. But I should think you'd want him to be pleasant with others.

Ask Him to Your Home.

"Dear Miss Blake: I'm 16 and in love. I only see the boy at dances. He always dances with me. What can I do to win his love? MICKIE."

He has shown he finds you a pleasant companion, otherwise he wouldn't make it a point to dance with you. Show your appreciation by inviting him to come to see you.

No Fair.

"Dear Miss Blake: I smoke cigarets and my girl will not speak to me any more, but she goes with other boys that smoke. Please advise.

"EDWARD."

Tell her it isn't fair to discriminate. If she objects to smoking in one person she should object in all cases.

Mr. Eckstein Talks of Standard Operas

By Edward Moore.

WHAT is a standard opera, inquires Mr. Eckstein, and then out of his fifteen years of experience in running Ravinia, he obliges with an answer.

"An opera becomes standard," he says, "when it makes sufficient impression upon the public to be demanded season after season, and if it should be omitted to make room for something less well known, would bring a protest from a majority of opera patrons. Most of the operas in the standard list have, of course, occupied this exalted position for many years. There is 'Il Trovatore,' which dates back to 1853, and there are others much older than that. Now and again an opera becomes standard in a comparatively short time, as witness 'Mme. Butterfly' and 'La Boheme,' by Puccini, a modern of the moderns. But it takes several seasons before any new work can prove its rightful claim to position on the standard list, for the public is likely to tire of the new offering after a season or so and to turn back to the better known works which have come as a heritage."

The interesting point of Mr. Eckstein's definition lies in his first sentence, where he speaks of a protest from a majority of opera patrons. For the greatest and most voluble protesters are not likely to be a majority at the box office. One does not even need to stop with the opera in English fans to settle that point. It can be found in the foreign works.

There are a few opera patrons, for instance, who perform dances of joy whenever "Le Chemineau" is announced, and incantations of rage when it is taken off. Now "Le Chemineau" is a bit of high art if there ever was one on the operatic stage. It has a most touching dramatic story and it is packed full of the finest kind of tunes. Yet audiences stay away with astonishing unanimity, and operatic producers, including Mr. Eckstein, have been heard to comment feelingly, not to say bitterly, upon that fact.

You can say, if you like, that the trouble with "Le Chemineau" is that its drama is of middle age and not of youth. Yet drama or its lack makes not the slightest discoverable difference in the popularity of an opera. If it did, how would you explain the hold of "Il Trovatore?" You might add that the tunes of "Le Chemineau" are mostly in the orchestra's instruments and not in the singers' throats. That is probably a more valid argument. At any rate, this department will refrain from recommending its revival until the public stops refraining from buying tickets.

Operas Standard and Operas Rare.

Once there was a man with a collector's soul who devoted himself to making a complete list of all the operas ever written, beginning with Monteverde's "Orfeo." Before he had finished I am told that he had listed over 26,000. Out of this army a small squad, two or three dozen, have come down as the sure fire standards.

It is one of Mr. Eckstein's problems to be progressive as far as the traffic will bear and at the same time to present the standard operas worthily. He admits that he regards the latter as the more important function of the two. Certainly he has succeeded admirably. You will search far, probably all over the world, before you will find finer and better balanced casting than out at the opera house in the woods. In fact I heard a somewhat waspish remark the other night to the effect that it would be a real relief to see a bad performance there, if only to break the unbroken chorus of praise that is Ravinia's inescapable due.

Yet Ravinia has made many excursions into remote and unstandardlike fields. "Le Chemineau" has been mentioned, and it is hard to forget what Giuseppe Danise and Ina Bourskaya did in that work. A few years ago there were some performances of Franco Leoni's "L'Oracolo." That opera seemed to be the peculiar artistic property of Antonio Scotti, who gave a most extraordinarily vivid sketch. Donizetti means "Lucia di Lammermoor" to the average opera goer, but Ravinia includes two delightful comedies, "Don Pasquale" and "L'Elisir d'Amore." Mascagni is known by "Cavalleria Rusticana," but also by "L'Amico Fritz." Only a few years ago Adamo Didur appeared in "Boris Godunoff." Two years ago Ravinia gave the American premiere of "La Legende du Point d'Argentan."

You may add Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" to the list of unusuals, certainly Auber's "Fra Diavolo," and likewise Thomas' "Mignon," Leoncavallo's "Zaza," and Giordano's "Fedora," and "Andrea Chenier." When the Ravinia repertoire was first announced it included "La Vida Breve," "Mme. Sans Gene," and several others. It is a good list.

During the coming week four of the six operas will be staged for the first time this season, and a fifth, "La Boheme," will have some important changes in its cast. The four are "Don Pasquale," "The Barber of Seville," "La Juive," and "Manon," the last named being the Massenet version, in which Lucrezia Bori will take the name part as she did in the earlier Puccinian "Manon Lescaut." Tomorrow night's concert program will have Elisabeth Rethberg as soloist, in which she will present a generous recital, consisting of arias from "Der Freischuetz" and "The Marriage of Figaro," and three groups of songs in French, German, and English.

Cheer by Indirection.

There may be words of cheer, though perhaps cheer by indirection, over the financial aspect of opera when it is learned on the authority of Edward Ziegler, assistant general manager of the Metropolitan Opera company, that this famous organization also loses money in plentiful amounts. An editorial in the New York Herald-Tribune maintained that the company under the present management is making money. Mr. Ziegler, who would seem to be in a position to know, holds that it does not. Here is part of his reply.

"The editorial states that Mr. Gatti-Casazza 'is the first impresario who has succeeded in making opera pay at the Metropolitan.' That assertion is wholly at variance with the truth.

"The fact is that Mr. Grau made the Metropolitan pay very handsomely and retired after his term of office with a very comfortable fortune. Mr. Conried, his successor, likewise made the Metropolitan pay very handsomely, and his stockholders received dividends as high as 42 per cent in one year. On the other hand, under Mr. Gatti-Casazza's management, not one cent of interest or dividends or other remuneration for the large capital employed in the operations of the company has been paid for eighteen years.

"The difference between the amount paid out for producing opera and the amount taken in from the sale of tickets shows, and has always shown since Mr. Gatti-Casazza assumed control, a very considerable deficit, the precise figure of that deficit for the last season being $226,991. It is only through the skillful utilization of sources of revenue other than those which the opera going public supplies that this deficit has been diminished, or covered, or at times somewhat more than covered.

Opera Costs Increased 100 Per Cent.

"It may not be out of place to mention in this connection that, since the days of the Grau régime the cost of giving opera has gone up considerably more than 100 per cent, as against which the average price of subscription seats has been increased by only 35 per cent."

The stage is thus set for a pleasant little summer battle, one with barbed adjectives, winged epithets, and the other evidences of agreeable reading. In fact, the Herald-Tribune promptly took occasion to hurl back a javelin or two:

"This is a disturbing statement on its face, in view of

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

As a press sheet at hand admits brightly, the neighs certainly have it in this picture! And if you've never before been "crazy about horses, horses, horses"—here's where you get that way.

"The Devil Horse" is one great animal picture! The mere humans in the cast acquit themselves admirably, but the horses take unto themselves wings of histrionic skill and fly away with the piece. (That listened good when I thought it—didn't look so well when I wrote it, but—it is written——!) Just so you get the idea.

I understand that some historical legend or other furnished the basis for the story of "The Devil Horse." Whether it did or whether it didn't makes no never mind. The yarn as stands is an engrossing one and, flung as it is, against the grand and glorious scenery of Montana and Wyoming, it becomes a never to be forgotten one.

Story and scenery, then, being great, what else holdeth this fillum of interest?

It has Injuns: A whole reservation of them! And, though you'd never dream it from the savage manner in which they treat their little playmates, the pioneers and the United States army—college graduates, every one—according to the press sheet. Heap smart Injuns, who, obligingly and with alarming reality, stage war dances, tribal wedding ceremonies, raids, massacres, and pow wows. Tepees, costumes, ponies, and all that was theirs were, I am told, placed at the director's service with the entire Crow membership of the Montana reservation under instruction from Chief Plenticoos—which probably means plenty cows—to do, even unto the smallest detail, as the white father told them to through the Big Horn.

Add to the Indian hordes, hordes of wild horses obedient to the commands of their separate leaders, The Devil Horse and The Killer; the appearance of the champion cowboy and stunt rider, Yakima Canutt—who, by the way, is scheduled to ride in the rodeo next month—and exceedingly much in the way of delightful detail and crashing climax—and I guess you'll think there's plenty in this photoplay to warrant your spending—whatever you DO spend—to see it.

Introduced to an Orphaned Colt.

You meet The Devil Horse when he's a tiny orphaned baby. Indians have killed his father and mother and there he is all alone on his four wobbly little legs with nobody at all to depend on but small Dave Carson traveling with his father and mother with a wagon train of settlers that, for many weary days in the '70s, had been winding its way through the Indian lands of Montana.

The earnest little boy feeding the earnest little horse is a bonny picture.

Then hostile Indians descend upon the settlers and wipe them out, with the exception of Dave. Hidden under the seat of the wagon from which they detach the horses, he escapes, and lives to be a scout in the United States army—hating the red men with a mighty hatred for the tragedy they have brought into his life.

The trembling colt is captured and treated roughly, but he, too, escapes. Escapes to hate. It is something worth seeing to witness the little fellow pounce upon an Indian head dress, worry it like a terrier does a rat, paw at it with vicious little forefeet, kick it with furious back ones, and face you with a look of vengeful triumph on his beautiful face. SOMETHING to see!

He's the Terror of the Indians.

The colt grows into The Devil Horse—a powerful black stallion called thus by the Indians because of his hatred for themselves and his persistent and terrifying attacks upon them. Wherever two or three of them are gathered together, there will almost assuredly appear a snorting, rearing creature, apparently impervious to arrows or bullets—a devil horse bent on their destruction. They regard him as supernatural and shudder accordingly.

Dave, attached to Fort Baldwin, commanded by Major Morrow, is in love with the major's daughter. Also desirous of the girl is Prowling Wolf, supposedly a friendly brave, who comes and goes as he pleases about the fort. In reality, though, Prowling Wolf is a spy, faithless to all the whites and especially anxious of getting Dave out of the way.

He and some companions capture the young scout one day out in the hills—capture him after a ferocious struggle that makes great picture material. It being Prowling Wolf's idea that no revenge could be sweeter than to see Dave killed by The Devil Horse—the young man is securely bound near the place the stallion is known to often frequent.

The redskins retire and, making themselves one with adjacent foliage, eagerly await the slaughter. With equal confidence, but less eagerness, waits Dave.

The moments pass and then—the thundering hoofs are heard. Nearer and nearer they come. The earth trembles—and The Devil Horse plunges on the scene. And starts to do murder, when something makes him pause. Across his memory flits a vision of an earnest little boy feeding an earnest little horse—such a hungry little horse—from a bottle.

They Both Remember.

The big horse that was the little horse pauses and trembles. The man, drawing choking breaths of exhaustion and fear, looks at him with a sick horror that gradually changes to recognition, as he, too, remembers. Slowly and painfully he toils at the task of freeing himself with The Devil Horse waiting anxiously and impatiently and the Indians watching with wonder that changes to terror as they behold the man, at last liberated, mount the black and go plunging away out of sight.

And that is one ride, my hearties!

Here is no movie cowboy riding. It is Yakima Canutt, champion cowboy and stunt rider, performing some of his most difficult feats for you. He comes down the hillside with the powerful animal he rides doing everything but loop the loop under him, and it is a thrilling exhibition I can tell you!

And it's only one of the thrilling exhibitions of the piece. The fight of the two stallions, The Devil Horse and The Killer, over Lady, the silver mare pretty Marion Morrow loves so well, is another great spectacle. And there are many others of which I shall let the picture tell you.

In practically all of them Rex figures gloriously. The Killer is no mean actor, either, and Lady, whom both gentlemen preferred (yes, I'm tired of it, too), is without doubt a charming and capable blonde.

I DON'T SEE HOW ON EARTH THEY GET THOSE HORSES TO DO THE THINGS THEY DO!

Well—I haven't told you about how Prowling Wolf plays traitor. Haven't described the Indians' descent on the fort. Nor do you know what happens when Marion is kidnaped and carried away to be the bride of Prowling Wolf. Neither have you the slightest idea what happens to this bad Injun and starts him well on his way to the Hunting Grounds that you are sure—and hopeful—will not be happy.

All of these things, however, will be revealed to you at the State-Lake, where "The Devil Horse" is playing. And, though you may not believe me—I'll say it again: "The Devil Horse" is one great animal picture. (And THEN some!)

Holy Writ

By H. L. Mencken.

PURSUING, of late, advanced researches into theological pathology, I have had the sad duty of reading certain "new," "modern," "American," and "idiomatic" translations of the New Testament, including those of the Rev. MM. Weymouth, Moffatt, Goodspeed and Ballantine. All of these translators, I believe, are pious and righteous men, and every one of them undertook his task with the sole object of making Holy Writ more intelligible to the plain people, and hence more persuasive and precious. But I can only report professionally as a theologian that all of them, in my judgment, will go to hell for their pains.

And richly deserve the singeings there in store for them. For all they accomplish, in putting the original Greek into familiar English, is to put it into English so flabby and preposterous that all the beauty is gone out of it. Consider, for example, the sonorous and magnificent line in the Lord's Prayer—thus in the authorized version: "Give us this day our daily bread." Well, this is what it becomes in the Weymouth version: "Give us today our bread for the day." And this in the Goodspeed version: "Give us today bread for the day." And this in the Ballantine version: "Our bread for the coming day give use today." And this in the Moffatt version: "Give us today our bread for the morrow."

Could vandalism go further? It is almost like arranging Schubert's serenade as a waltz for the bagpipes. All the loveliness is squeezed out of the line. Its ancient charm and eloquence vanish into thin air; it ceases to be a prayer and becomes a mere demand. And is there any compensating gain in clarity? Is an error in the Authorized Version rectified? Certainly not. As a matter of fact, the four experts simply introduce confusion and obfuscation into what was formerly crystal clear. Two of them make it appear that the bread asked for is wanted at once; the other two say that it will not be needed until tomorrow.

I turn to the book of John, and to an episode that most latter day preachers of the Word delicately avoid: the episode of the woman taken in adultery. It is unpleasant reading for vice crusaders, prohibitionists and other such wowsers, for it sets forth, in succinct and highly dramatic form, the basic principles of the Christianity actually preached by Christ. You recall, no doubt, the great speech that confounds the scribes and Pharisees, eager to put the woman to death: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." But perhaps you have forgotten the superb dialogue that follows, between Christ and the woman—the most stupendous scene in all drama, sacred or profane. I quote it from the Authorized Version:

> When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? Hath no man condemned thee?
> She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more.

Well, what do the modernizers make of this austere and colossal beauty, this masterpiece of simple and lovely English, as it was of Greek? Goodspeed, more discreet than the rest, omits it altogether: I can't find it in his version of John. But Weymouth tackles it boldly, and with this almost unbelievable result:

> Then standing up, Jesus spoke to her. "Woman," He said, "Where are they? Has no one condemned you?" "No one, Sir," she replied. "And I do not condemn you either," said Jesus. "Go, and from this time do not sin any more."

Imagine it! "No one, Sir!" And "do not sin any more!" But Ballantine, as impossible as it may seem, is still worse:

> Jesus raised himself up and said to her, "Woman, where are they? Has no one sentenced you?" She said, "No one, Sir." Jesus said, "Neither do I sentence you. Go. From now on sin no more."

And Moffatt, with a herculean effort, manages to be yet worse than Ballantine:

> Raising himself, Jesus said to her, "Woman, where are they? Has no one condemned you?" She said, "No one, Sir." Jesus said, "Neither do I; be off, and never sin again."

Give your eye to that "be off." And then ask yourself if a million centuries in hell will be enough for that translator!

All of these dreadful perversions of incomparable beauty, as I have already said, are full of good intentions: they show enough, indeed, to pave hell from the Torquemada monument to the Avenue of the Revivalists. What ails them is simply a gross misunderstanding, on the part of their rev. perpetrators, of the nature of religious feeling. These worthy gentlemen all seem to think that it is a product of ratiocination—that it arises out of logic and evidence, like the belief, say, that two and two make four. It does nothing of the sort. It begins, not as a series of ideas, but as a mystery, and it remains a mystery to the end. Religion is most potent to sway the mind, indeed, when the evidences of its objective truth are most vague and unconvincing—when it is apprehended, not as fact at all, but as sheer poetry, the very negation of fact.

The success of Christianity in the world, I believe, is due largely, if not chiefly, to the unmatchable beauty, as poetry, of its sacred books. It is hard to think of any other oriental religion that is not logically more plausible and persuasive, but not one of them has a sacred literature even remotely to be compared, for simple loveliness, to that of the decadent Judaism which, alone among them, has conquered the west. There are single Psalms that have ten times more beauty in them than the whole literature of Brahminism, ancient and modern; in the story of the Christ Child there is more poetry than was ever heard of in Greece and Rome. It is precisely this profound and disarming poetry, this irresistibly beautiful evocation of the unattainable and ever to be desired, that give Christianity its continued strength in the modern world, despite the gradual destruction of two-thirds of its objective evidences.

Poetry does not fetch a man by convincing him; it fetches him by robbing him of the wish to be convinced—by lulling the censor within him and so giving free rein to his deepest emotons. Few Americans of the present day, I take it—that is, few of the more enlightened sort—accept the story of the Christ Child in all literalness. It violates their notions of the probable; in part, at least, it seems to them to be plainly fanciful. But that man must be a dull clod indeed who is not moved by it, and never catches himself wishing a bit wistfully that such things could really be. It is, of all the stories ever devised by man, enormously the most beautiful. Whoever reduced it to words, conquered, by that stroke, the whole civilized world.

But poetry is a fragile flower, and will not bear transplanting. Forced into the harsh forms of prose all its charm is gone; it becomes simply nonsense. This is true of great poetry as well as of poetry that is not great, as every fresh attempt at a prose translation of the Odyssey bears witness. It is preëminently true of the poetry which makes up the sacred books of Christianity. Try it with any of the Psalms, with the Sermon on the Mount, with the story of the Nativity, with the roaring strophes of Revelation. The thing becomes, in the speech of every day, a mere absurdity. It is not only not moving; it is, only too often, perilously close to being laughable.

So all such "modern" versions of the New Testament as those of MM. Goodspeed, Ballantine, Moffatt, and Weymouth are bound to be botches. They reduce the narrative to a series of syllogisms, and so make it banal. The fundamentalists, in their different way, do the same violence upon it. Trying to make it literal and impeccable, like a stock report, they succeed only in making it preposterous.

RUMINATIONS OF A CRITIC OFF DUTY

By Burns Mantle.

THERE is a wonderful interest in the theater wherever you go. Everybody wants to know what the Barrymores are going to do and why "Abbie's Irish Rose" is a success. Not knowing, it is not as easy for me to tell them as it would be if I did know.

It is much the same way with politics. Everybody, for reasons past my defining, seems to be asking everybody else what he thinks of Al Smith, and why. And does he think it would be possible for Al Smith to be elected?

ANITA LOOS struck a Gold Mine in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

There is a growing Smith sentiment through the west, but it seems to be largely a sentiment of curiosity. Everybody is interested, but nobody seems to care much about it. That, I suspect, is the trouble we Democratic hosts are going to have when we have another election. President Coolidge is not, as I understand it, a strong candidate, but nearly everybody insists on voting for him.

I remember the last time he ran, all my friends who know politics assured me it was not a Republican year in the first place, and in the second place, Mr. Coolidge was extremely unpopular because of his frugal habits and cooling exterior. But see what happened!

As a candidate for whom nobody is going to vote before election, this Vermont fisherman certainly can pile up the most amazing majorities. It is discouraging, in a way.

Among the common people who do most of the voting there seems to be a feeling that if we can elect Mr. Smith in some fair and distant November we will be able to serve light wines and beer by Christmas and get back to formal drinking by March 4. But, I don't know. It does not sound any too reasonable to me.

I heard one man advance the suggestion at a party the other night that he would vote for Al Smith on the sidewalk issue if nothing else. If, said he, Al could do as much to popularize the sidewalks of the country as he had done to popularize the sidewalks of New York, it would, in a manner of speaking, be a better world to walk in. But, of course, he was one who had not been to New York recently. The sidewalks are not used for walking any more. Not any more than the dance floors are used for dancing. There are always too many people on them.

A Moving Picture Capitol.

Another feature of life on Broadway that I find of great interest in the west is the frequently discussed question of the stage's nakedness. Nobody appears to be for it, but they all want to talk about it.

Seat me at a dinner table and I'll wager two to four that somebody's first question will be concerned with the reports that the little girl was right when she said the three genders were "masculine, feminine, and nuder."

It is not an easy question to answer, either. "Is the nudity as bad as they say?" is a common query. "How bad do they say it is?" you ask. "Well, they say it's pretty bad," they fluster. "And they're right," you say.

There isn't much of any place to go from there, is there? Now and then some slightly over enthusiastic young person will demand to know just what they do wear. Are they really—or, on the other hand, are they not? Not really!

"What," you ask, "do you mean by really?" and they can't say. Not there, before Phyllis and everybody.

And so it lapses until later in the evening, when some one is certain to bring it up again.

The movies edge into the conversation frequently. No one, probably out of respect for my job, seems to be for the movies, but, like the voting for Mr. Coolidge, everybody goes.

Even I, who am not easily bowled over, find myself toppling as I ride past the built and building picture palaces of Chicago. Huge, gorgeous amphitheaters, taking in a whole community at a single sitting and seating it comfortably. Apparently there is an endless number of them.

I never come back to Chicago without feeling that the big town, at its best, offers a stimulating contact. Just now it is very much at its best. The folks, just recovering slowly from the Eucharistic congress, are swinging back into their normal stride and pointing with pride to the permanent, rather than the ephemeral glories of this spreading metropolis.

Everybody Knows Paul.

For instance, we go for a spin—though such are the traffic problems it is pressing a bit to speak of it as a spin—through the northern district that started to boom so tremendously the moment I moved away.

"There is another new picture theater," they will say, pointing to an imposing Coliseum taking up half a city block. "Do you know Paul Ash?"

You regret that you don't know Paul and are assured that he certainly has a wonderful personality.

A dozen blocks farther on: "There is another new picture theater—seats 5,000 or something like that. Did you say you knew Paul Ash?"

And again, as you turn the corner: "You surely must see Paul Ash before you go back. His personality——"

This Ash person, you have concluded, is a builder of theaters. But it appears he is only a filler of them. He is a combination night club host and leader of the orchestra at one of the largest of the temples to Zukor, Lasky, et al. A man, they all insist, with a personality who grows amusingly if not impertinently chummy with his audience, and is as comic as the deuce when the mood is on him. He was so completely exhausted keeping the eucharistic crowds interested, they tell me, that he had to rest up over several matinés and the whole town worried.

The Economical Urge.

Nobody, as I say, or at least few with whom I talk, are movie addicts. None can see the future for the pictures that the picture promoters boast. And yet that future must be assured, else there would not be the amount of planning for it we see all about us.

I used to think and, to a considerable extent, still think, that the interest in the pictures is traceable largely to the fact that they offer a maximum amount of entertainment for a minimum cost. The drama is too expensive, and frequently too disappointing. The average family can see five or six disappointing pictures, count the cost of them waste, and still recover with better grace and less hurt than it can after having invested the better part of ten dollars on a single disappointing entertainment in the theater.

But in the amusement field the theater is still the aristocrat of the arts. The people of Chicago, I suspect, are prouder of having established the success of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," than they are of having built a whole row of movie temples. Excepting the one in which Paul Ash plays, and moves and has his personality.

Trying Them on Chicago.

I find several of the Broadway boys trying their next season's wares on this friendly and discriminating public. Miss Loos' "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is the most talked of of the current attractions. The Flora Le Breton who played briefly for us in a crude drama is trying out another Cinderella story called "Betsy Nobody" which has failed to enthuse the experts.

Frank Keenan has scored one of those personal successes in "Black Velvet," a black and white drama, that may mean anything or nothing. Margaret Lawrence has gathered her husband, Wallace Eddinger, and Bruce McRae into a revival of "Divorcons" of which I have heard many pretty words, but I notice it is closing this week.

George Cohan's "The Home Towners" is, they tell me,

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

JOHN DREW says that he will not act again: and the announcement at once makes me sad and gives to me a large measure of joy. I cannot fairly be charged with overestimating the importance of actors in the art of drama: few are as good as they believe themselves to be, and fewer still possess the talent with which they are credited by most reporters of acting and by the general public. I have still to see an actor I would term "great": yet, that is an adjective which slips easily from the pen of most reporters of what goes on in the theater. I've seen all the acting there has been to see since two or three years before the Mauve Decade set in. It is true that all of it may not have been seen intelligently: that is, that my few enthusiasms in that time may have lacked warrant and my indifference to much that has been lauded may have been shy in the quality of trained perception. Modesty keeps me from believing that my attitudes have ever been lacking or shy; but I admit the bare possibility, even if it be a matter beyond proof pro or contra. . . .

JOE LAURIE He's moving to the Cort to continue "If I Was Rich!"

As to John Drew, I never heard him say how good he thought he was; nor has his opinion in the matter, if he ever expressed one, been reported to me by any of his intimates. But he was a player for whom I had a high enthusiasm in my childhood theater-going, and one for whom I never lost my liking: for the excellent reason, probably that it was a right liking in the beginning, and did not make an idol of one who was simply a good actor within the limitations his Maker had imposed. Few of the professional critics in the 'Nineties and later regarded him as a good actor: rather, they treated him as an agreeable performer in unimportant comedy of whom the public was fond. The public was measurably fond of him, but never, in my discerning, because of a belief that he was anything more than the critics described him as being. "He's always John Drew!" was said of him by most theater-goers in a tone of tolerant complaint,—as if they would have been immensely happy to have gone to see him and found that he has ceased to be John Drew, and had become, instead, N. C. Goodwin or De Wolf Hopper or E. H. Sothern.

Best of the Native High-Comedians.

The truth is that the same John Drew was the most efficient high-comedian among all the native players of his day;—and by his day I mean the years of his maturity. I have seen but one other player in our theater as good as Drew in the latter's gamut—the late Charles Coghlan, an alien. England has had in the years since Coghlan's death no player of fine comedy as gifted as Drew: the best of the drawing-room comedians now active there, Gerald DuMaurier, could profitably go to school to the veteran American. . . . I am able easily to summon to memory Drew's Petruchio, his Charles Surface, his King of France in "Love's Labour's Lost," and his acting in other rôles held by the older players to be tests; and I have, in the many years since I saw him in those parts, seen nobody else as good. . . .

It was told of him that, when he left the pompous management of the celebrated Augustin Daly to become a pro-forma star under Charles Frohman, he made the change because the former had refused to give him an increase that would have changed his pay from $100 a week to $125—or it may have been from $125 to $150; and I mention this legend for the interesting reason that a man doesn't have to be much of an actor these days to get $100 or $125 or $150 a performance. Mr. Frohman, although in those days virtually without competition as an importer of plays from London and the Continent, assigned Drew to comparatively few that were better than third-class, and gave to the actor more than a few that were beneath contempt as drama and as conveyances. That I recall the actor more vividly for his acting in Shakspere and the old comedies than for what he did in the modern plays that fell to him later-on is not because I was a kid when I saw him in the standard plays, but because they were good plays. He was still the best of our comedians when he had half a chance in the matter of a rôle: as in "The Bauble-Shop," in "A Marriage of Convenience," in "Second in Command," in "Rosemary," in "The Tyranny of Tears," in "The Duke of Killikrankie," and in "Jack Straw."

And my joy in his retirement is that he goes into it without fuss, and without a stunt, while my sadness is that his retrospect is not of a warmer general acclaim. I haven't the slightest doubt that I feel this more keenly than he, himself, feels it: not that we have known each other well; for, although fellow-townsmen, we haven't. But I've carried a long, long way and for a long, long time my sincere regard for this actor's genuine talent—a talent that had the aid of few or none of those advantages that were, in John Drew's prime, regarded as essential in the actor of what we used to call "parlor-knights." He had the dry, slightly-harsh voice of all the Drews and of all the Barrymores save Ethel; and that wasn't a help. Neither was the insistent nose, nor yet the picene eye.

Or Nearly Always.

Letters About What Seemed a Bad Break.

A communication signed Universities was the first of forty-three received within the week regarding Dryden's tragedy of "All for Love": the point of the senders being that I seemed in last Sunday's issue to believe that Marlowe wrote the play. Cheyne Walk, an old and valued faultfinder, wrote in to say that he wouldn't take the trouble to try to set me right because he knew I wrote as I did in order to provoke letters. . . . The explanation is that I was careless in reading proof: I meant to quote the statement as made by Mr. Horace Liveright, who sent the announcement concerning that play and some others, and failed to put in the quotation-marks.

Miscellany.

The Duo-Masque Players, who preface their announcement with the explanation that they have nothing to do with a little-theater group of like name, say that they will stage "Visionaries," by Ivan Sokoloff, in "either the Goodman or one of the smaller Loop theaters" late in November. The director of the new "group" is Oscar B. Serlin, who is said to have made a reputation in the theatricals of De Paul University and Wabash College; and 'tis added that Mr. Serlin "is now en-route to London, Paris, and Berlin, where he will attempt to secure plays that will suit the Chicago fancy." . . . Other excerpts from the tentative prospectus are that "an all-Chicago revue will be staged late in the season," and that the Duo-Masque Players are "composed of astonishingly-young men," and have all the money "regarded as necessary and vital in an undertaking of this nature."

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

SAVE that "If I Was Rich!" which had been bulletined to close last night at the end of its tenth week in the La Salle, moves into the Cort, the week in Chicago is without change. . . . And nothing new is in sight until two weeks from tonight, when "The Great Gatsby" will be acted in the Studebaker by the cast headed by James Rennie, starting the final year of the tenancy of that theater by Mr. Gazzolo and Mr. Hanks, who took it over in the Autumn of 1922.

Mr. Ridings, as intendent of the Four Cohans, makes public notification that the midweek matinée of "The Home-Towners" has been dropped for what remains of the Summer, and that the week of that merry piece from now on will consist of eight performances.

Whereas, down in New-York, the later-day trick for the hot months is to drop the Saturday matinée; while a better trick that has been used profitably is to cut out Saturday night, also: the argument is that everybody with the price of a theater-seat uses it to pay railroad-fare somewhere else for the week-end.

Somebody thinks that a piece heretofore called "Cowboy-Crazy" will have a better chance if called "Love 'Em Cowboy!"

A farce by Benjamin M. Kaye is named "She Couldn't Say No."

Frank Fay, for a time regarded as a performer whose appearance was not to be relied on, will by Thursday night have made 120 consecutive appearances as master of the ceremonies in New-York's principal two-a-day theater. The chore involves some of the attributes of the old "chairman" in the English music-halls, as the variety-houses are still called over there, and some of the compère of French revue. . . . Mr. Fay goes to London to take up like duties in one of the variety-houses.

"Potash & Perlmutter, Detectives," is at present the title of the new piece about Perlmutter and Potash. . . . The first of the series was staged back in 1913. The new one, like the others, has Montague Glass and Jules Eckert Goodman as the authors.

New in Manhattan.

Two novelties are listed for the week in the New-York theaters—"Pyramids," by Samuel Ruskin Golding, with Miss Carroll McComas, and "Honest Liars," by Robert Weenolsen and Sherrill Webb, with Robert Woolsey. . . . Mr. Golding has had other plays acted, and without success. "Honest Liars" is to have a belated Broadway showing; it has been held back through what seemed to the producer the necessity for revision. The authors are now at it.

Five plays were taken off the New-York stage last night: that is, not fewer than five; for this paragraph is written Friday night, while the end of a New-York venture is frequently decided on at 10:55 Saturday, with or without the approval of the actors' union. . . . The especial five were "Kongo," which seems to have been deliberate dirt piled on the formula of "White Cargo" with something of "A Bird of Paradise"; "Alias the Deacon," a slow-burning success since last Winter; "Love-in-a-Mist," sentimental stuff that had Miss Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer to perform the principal parts; "My Magnolia," a Negro piece that was short-lived; and "The Patsy," the A-B-C thing shown last Autumn in the La Salle.

VACATIONS

What is your notion of the ideal vacation? A fishing jaunt, an ocean trip, or a lake voyage, a stay at a fashionable resort, a stretch of lazy idleness in the woods, a long motor tour—or what? Write us your idea of the ideal vacation. We'll pay $1 for every letter we print. Address Vacations, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

A Seawashed Island.

When vacation time is nearing—
How it draws me to the sea,
To a seawashed, lonely island,
Which means happiness to me.
Hours and hours I spent a-roaming
Through the dunes along the shore,
To the lighthouse in the distance,
Where the wild waves break and roar.
I love to stretch out on the sand
And watch the seagulls' airy flight,
To dream of strange and far off lands,
To watch the rising of the tide.
To run and meet the playful waves,
That can be, O, so strong,
To dive and swim and frolic
While the morning is still young.
To watch the glorious rising
And the setting of the sun
'Way back on the horizon
Where earth and sky are one.
Far from the noisy city,
Far from the shams of life,
I gain the strength and vigor
To keep up life's old strife.

Her Idea Is a Change.

I am 60 and never had a vacation, but my idea of an ideal one would be just to get away from hoeing in the garden, raising chickens, canning fruit, washing, and scrubbing. I would just love to go to the city and hear the whistles blow, eat in a restaurant, go to the movies, ride through the streets, and see the sights. I would just love it! MRS. F. W.

When Work Is a Rest.

For five years I have had tuberculosis of the lungs and spine and as a result am practically helpless. As I lie here on my sleeping porch I have often reviewed the vacations I had in the past and the ones I would like to have in the future. A week among the bright lights, a trip to the mountains, or a few weeks at a beach used to be great, but now I would consider it a holiday if I could step out and work about twelve hours a day.

To go to bed physically tired and sleep sound for ten hours and then wake up refreshed ready to tackle another big day's work would be a wonderful change and consequently a vacation. They say a change is as good as a rest, and I am tired of being a gentleman of leisure. E. F.

TELLS WHAT'S COMING NEXT

MISS SALLY STARR

SHE is in Le Maire's Affairs; and her business is to serve as what in the French school of revue is known as the "god-mother": that is, she trots on at intervals, explains the purpose of the impending Affair, and, saying "Thank you!" trots off. . . . Miss Starr shares this chore with William Halligan, and is liked by the patrons of the new show in the Woods.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

No Place to Go.

Pat and Mike were good friends. Pat was trying to tell Mike unless people were good they would be lost in the hereafter. Mike said he did not believe in heaven, hell, or purgatory. Soon Mike took sick and died. Pat was sad and stood gazing on Mike's quiet face and finally said, "Poor Mike—all dressed up and no place to go." B. T.

One Name for It.

A Jew and his wife went into a store to buy a suit of clothes for the hubby. The suit which they wanted cost $70.

Hubby tried to make the merchant lower his price. But the salesman was stanch to anything below $60. After a long argument wifey finally said: "O, Able, let the man have his price. Don't be so Scotch." E. C.

Turning the Tables.

A member of a congregation, becoming angry at a sermon the minister was preaching, wrote the single word, "Fool," on a sheet of paper, called an usher to him and had it delivered to the minister in the middle of the sermon.

The minister opened the paper and read what was written, then he said, "An unusual thing has happened. A member of the congregation has signed his name without writing the letter." N. K. V. K.

Self-Service.

Sambo—Mandy, can I kiss you?
Mandy—Piggly Wiggly.
Sambo—What you all mean?
Mandy—Help yo'self. B. K.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

"Thank You."

A friend of mine and myself were enjoying a heated game of singles in tennis, when a young man and an attractive girl companion approached the court.

To accommodate them we broke up our game and played doubles instead. We were enjoying ourselves immensely, when suddenly one of the nearby courts was vacated and the young man and his companion decided to use this to play singles.

The young woman approached me and said, "I'm afraid we'll be leaving you now."

In trying to be polite and thank her for her company, imagine my embarrassment when I later discovered that what I had actually said in response to her remark was, "Thank you." A. J. R.

Right Over the Table.

On Fourth of July I decided to go horseback riding. Picking out a horse, I went happily down the road until I saw some people having a picnic. At that moment some one threw a fire cracker under my horse and so startled him that he jumped over the table on which the picnic was held, throwing the whole thing over. With cries of rage the people chased us away, to the amusement of a crowd that had collected. I was never so embarrassed in my life. R. L.

Mistaken.

At an important assembly at school awards for scholastic achievements were being given. Expecting one, I was not surprised to hear my name called and proudly stepped forward. I reached the platform, only to realize that I had misunderstood, my name hadn't been called.

How embarrassing it was to face the amused, pitying crowd and walk back! A. H.

promising Cohan stuff, and "If I Were Rich," with the diminutive Joe Laurie cutting up in it more legitimately than usual, is the type of comedy of which it is said that it has a chance.

Hal Skelly is here with "The City Chap," that young Mr. "Skeets" Gallagher performed in when it started on Forty-second street, and there is much waving of type over the approach of Sophie Tucker and Ted Lewis of the night clubs and Lester Allen, late of London, in a revue frankly and intimately entitled "Rufus Le Maire's Affairs."

A prevalent hope appears to be that they are not, really. Rufus' affairs the last we heard of them in the east, were more or less tangled.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune Chicago.

Taking the Roast.

The cheekiest person I ever met is my neighbor. She borrows everything that she thinks she'll get. The other day put all her past borrowings in the background. She came in my flat and said: "I've company unexpectedly. Have you any meat in the house?" I had just cooked a nice roast, so I told her she might have part.

She proceeded to cut off four thin slices which I thought were for her, but no, she left me the slices and she took the roast, broth and all. How's that for cheek? L. B.

Thoughtless.

The cheekiest person I know is a married woman who was invited to my home for the first time to play bridge. When she came she brought unannounced her two daughters, Mary, age 8, and Gertrude, age 10. After we had played a short time she asked if the two girls might lie down.

Just before dinner was served she awakened her two daughters. About the same time her husband made his appearance. I had my table set, place cards, favors, etc., arranged for sixteen. It was most inconveneint to provide for three uninvited guests.

To cap the climax a severe storm suddenly came up. Immediately after eating the family left in their seven passenger car, not offering to take a single person home. M. T. S.

Graceless.

A young woman was staying at our place and working in town for the summer. As we were quite good friends she was rooming with me. She used my comb repeatedly and as I am particular about it I asked her not to do this. But this did not seem to do any good for she used it the same as ever.

Finally, one morning, finding her using it again I reached in my purse and took out fifty cents and said, "Here is the price of my comb. Please buy yourself one." She took the fifty cents and never even said "Thank you." H. B.

Hinting.

While at high school I had made friends with Blanche, who was well-to-do.

It was two weeks from Christmas, when we were having our examinations. After the examinations, if we had a few minutes left, before the period was over, we would write notes.

Blanche wrote me a letter telling me she expected to give every girl in our room a present. I wondered why she wrote this to me. I read on and found out. She wrote at the end of the note that she would not give her locker mate a present because she never received any from hr.

She was trying to tell me she wanted a gift from me without putting it strongly. Cheek, eh! A. K.

Mr. Eckstein Talks of Standard Operas

By Edward Moore.

the mediocre, routine, and slipshod quality of many of the performances. If Mr. Gatti-Casazza's artistically damaging economies and compromises have resulted only in 'very considerable deficits,' those who may still insist upon calling themselves friends of the Metropolitan will be hard put to it to account for that 'unalterable confidence' in his ability as a manager which the board of directors voiced in their generous letter announcing the extension of his contract until 1931. We shall look forward confidently to a season when the Metropolitan modifies its present policy of headlong mass production; when it refrains from attempting to give a dozen different operas and ballets in six days; when its performances betray fewer signs of inadequate preparation (or none at all); when it shows itself unwilling to produce 'Der Ring des Nibelungen' with scenery which would discredit a poverty stricken German theater; when it forbears to give leading rôles to second rate artists. In short, we refuse to be discouraged by Mr. Ziegler's pessimistic satisfaction with things as they are and hark back to that spirit of optimism and progress with which Mr. Kahn put forward his imaginative conception of a new and mightier opera house in which present handicaps would be ended and the Metropolitan could achieve its fitting rank with the greatest opera houses of the world."

Mostly About Music.

More European impressions from Manager Herbert M. Johnson of the Chicago Civic Opera:

"Paris is a genuine rival of Italy's musical capital, Milan, for the honor of recognition as the world's mart for musical 'trading.' A large proportion of the professional engagements, not only for the continent, England, and the United States but also to a smaller extent for lyric activities throughout Latin America and more remote points, are negotiated here. The practice is growing, and facilities are being organized along lines calculated to concentrate this business here.

"A highly organized association acts for French authors, composers, and librettists in their dealings with the outer world, with the result that, as a class, they derive higher royalties and more advantageous commercial relations than authors, composers, and librettists of any other land. In fact, frequent complaint is made that they are too 'hard boiled' and exact conditions unfavorable to the producer, obtaining for themselves more substantial rewards than the creators of Italian works of far greater popularity.

"There is no such nationalization, if the term may be used, in handling the business affairs of singers. Numerous agencies are engaged in this field, representing artists of various nationalities, scattered in all parts of the world. One of the most active of these agencies is conducted by an American (Alexander Kahn) formerly located in Chicago.

"American music students embarking upon operatic careers, and particularly those from Chicago, seem to regard Paris as their headquarters, even though their struggles center in Italy, which frequently is the case, more especially since France and Germany adopted the policy of insisting upon native talent and Austria was eliminated through dire poverty.

Trials of an Embryo Prima Donna.

"The experience of a Chicago girl who recently sang for me here, Ethel Hottinger, is indicative of the struggles all must undertake in order to acquire the finish and authority demanded by audiences at home before according an artist a hearing, and also speaks volumes in disclosing how great a factor the element of chance becomes in making a career.

"Miss Hottinger is the daughter of a northwest side Chicago druggist and when studies at home disclosed that she had a splendid voice of fine possibilities he sent her to this side last October for more advanced training and experience. Through the instrumentality of one of the Paris agencies she secured an engagement to sing minor rôles with an itinerant opera company touring southern France and Spain by automobile. Scarcely was the season well under way when this haphazard method of transport caused the prima donna to suffer an accident that incapacitated her. Expediency compelled the management to substitute Miss Hottinger for lack of an available more experienced artist and through this circumstance she is enjoying opportunity to sing most important parts before critical audiences, making the latter a clinic through which to perfect herself in the difficult rôles. Ordinarily years would be required to achieve this headway and I look for splendid results from Miss Hottinger after this grueling apprenticeship.

And Paris Is Gay as Ever.

"July seems to be propitious for Americans here in Paris, with Mary McCormic making a hit in 'Romeo and Juliet' at the opera, Mary Lewis having a good reception in 'La Bohême' at the Opera Comique, and Charles Hackett scoring in gala performances of 'Manon' and 'Tosca.' Gayety is at its height, the tourists are on hand in droves, and, in spite of all the weeping and wailing over politics and finances, every one, visitor and native alike, seems intent on having a good time. The opera, concerts, and theaters are doing well, although with the opening of July fashionable Paris heads for the mountains and the seaside, leaving the capital to the tourists. Hence the roads are full of citroens and other 'mosquito' cars to the exclusion of more dignified vehicles. The nervous energy with which they are driven about emphasizes the truth that Paris, madder and merrier than ever, is having a good time.

"We will bid it good-by for the year soon, to return to Italy to complete our work there, and ere long sail for home."

Two communications, one signed by initials, the other by James Hamilton Lewis, inform me that my quotation about "Il Trovatore" a week ago was from the poem, "Aux Italiens," by Owen Meredith, otherwise known as Robert Bulwer, Lord Lytton. Many thanks.

Here is something new in musical expression, and it is attested by the soprano, Luella Melius. She says that while studying the piano as a child she one day asked her teacher the meaning of the letters M F in the musical score. Most people would call it mezzo forte. This teacher, speaking with a somewhat pronounced accent, answered, "Don't you know that? It means 'Mit feeling.'"

A cello recital by Jaroslav Gons will be given at the Central theater next Tuesday afternoon. Another in the same place a week from that day will be a two-piano program by Edward Collins and Moissaye Boguslawski.

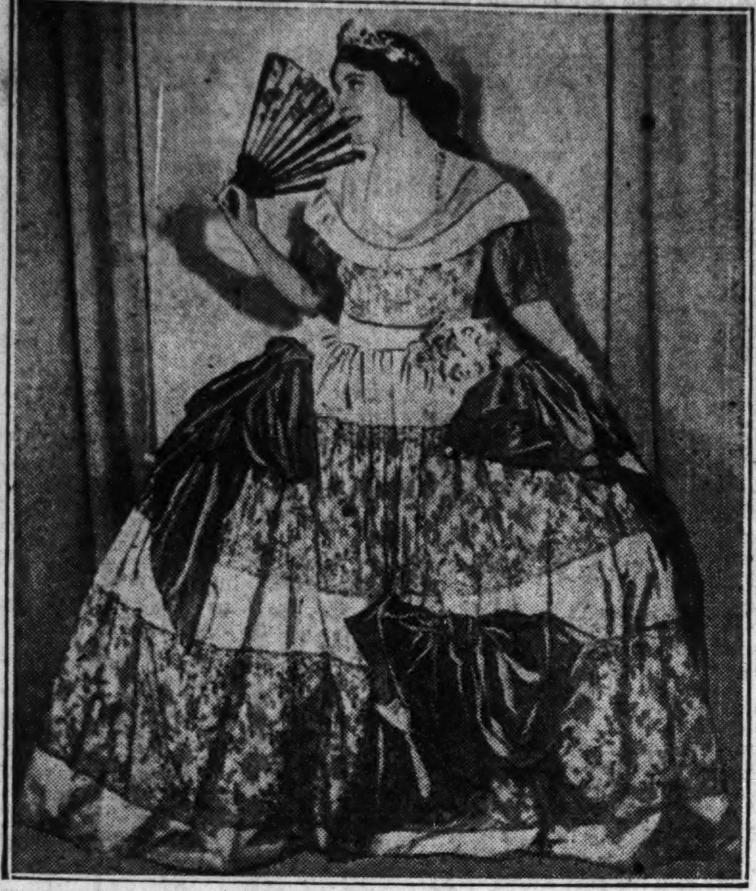
Harold Henry, formerly one of the Chicago pianists, sends word of a series of summer recitals at his studio, "The Yellow Barn," in Old Bennington, Vermont. Sascha Jacobsen, violinist, led off the list July 13. Other events will be by Arthur Kraft, tenor, July 29; Mr. Henry himself, Aug. 17; and Horace Britt, cellist, Sept. 2.

AN ORNAMENT TO OPERA.



LUCREZIA BORI.
[Strauss Peyton Photo.]

One of the good reasons for going to Ravinia this summer is to behold the appearances of this daughter of Spain, who sings many different roles with unfailing charm, loveliness, and fine sense. The picture represents her as she is in "Traviata," an opera in which she has not yet appeared this summer. There is reason to hope that it is a deferred joy.

NEWCOMER.

HAROLD LINDAU.

Here is an early new engagement for the coming season of the Chicago Civic opera. Under the name of Aroldo Lindi he has been singing in such opera houses as La Scala, Milan; Costanzi, Rome; Massime, Palermo; Regia, Parma; Royal Opera, Madrid; San Carlo, Lisbon; Royal Opera, Stockholm; and Covent Garden, London. He was born in Sweden and reared in the United States. His principal vehicles have been the leading tenor rôles in "Aida," "Tosca," "La Forza del Destino," "Pagliacci," and "Il Trovatore." When he comes here he will resume his former name.

Movie Colony Has Wedding Epidemic

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.] — Several marriages of interest have occupied the attention of the movie colony recently. First of these in the attention attracted was that of Ben Turpin to Babette Elizabeth Dietz of Bismarck, N. D. The Rev. Father Michael J. Mullins of the "movie church," the Church of the Good Shepherd, in Beverly Hills, officiated and the bride made a sight for sore eyes in an afternoon dress of gray chiffon trimmed in silver lace, wearing a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley and a large satin picture hat. While Babette was giving Ben an eyeful in this stunning costume Ben gave Babette a platinum bracelet encrusted with diamonds for a wedding present, and the couple departed for San Francisco on a honeymoon tour that will continue through Yosemite National Park in Ben's own car. Ben will not drive it, though his type of optic might be helpful to see around the curves ahead.

He proved an intrepid and whirlwind wooer, as he had only known his bride a few months when he proposed to her. Babette confesses she was not aware of his admiring glances for some time, but on his proposing she accepted him at once, as she feared his eyes might wander further.

All good wishes go with Ben, for he proved himself a devoted husband during the long illness of his wife, who died last year, giving up picture work and all outside interests to be at home with her.

Mary Astor Engaged!

Ralph Ince, screen actor whose career dates back to the early days of pictures at the old Vitagraph studios in Flatbush, and brother of the late Thomas Ince, producer, was married to Lucilla Mendez, dancer and screen actress. A honeymoon at Hawaii will follow.

Josef von Sternburg, born Joe Stern, was married by a justice of the peace in Sherman to Risa Royce, actress and assistant director with him on Edna Purviance's new picture, "A Woman of the Street." Miss Royce played the starring rôle in the stage play, "Dancing Mothers," in New York, according to local reports.

Mary Astor has just announced her engagement to Irving Asher, who is one of the business managers at Warner Brothers. They are to be married within the year.

Too Much for the Dog.

Many and lively were the goings-on of a recent afternoon on the "Annie Laurie" set at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's. Lillian Gish and Norman Kerry were enacting a scene in the huge hall of the castle of Glencoe wherein Lillian as Annie Laurie comes to warn Norman Kerry as Ferguson that he must sign the treaty of the clans or Scotland will be lost. It was a serious moment, Ferguson in love with Annie, but nettled with her, and she trying to talk above the din of the bagpipes. A large Scottish stag hound raised in America was lying at Kerry's side, and the pipers proved much too much for him. The stag hound lifted his mzuzle and told high heaven what he thought of the pipers. Lillian giggled, Kerry grinned, and the hound finally had to be led out and calmed.

Scotch jokes seemed to be the order of the day. Holbrook Blinn, a Scotchman himself, who is playing the laird of Glencoe, was recounting several. One that raised a general laugh was that of the two Scotchmen, one of whom complained of a large sliver in his tongue. "Mon," said Angus, "how come ye to get a sliver in the tongue?" "Weel," said Sandy, "Ah was joost aboot to take a drink when Ah dropped the bottle." "Wood alcohol," remarked a bystander.

Lillian Gish was an enchanting picture as Annie Laurie in a black velvet dress with tiny fitted bodice and huge hoop skirts and white lace collar. A cape, long, with tiny shoulder capes bound in mink was accompanied by a bonnet of brown, shaped much like a sunbonnet, with loose hanging cloth to protect the curls of the wearer against the inclement weather of the highlands. Many long blonde curls were bunched on each side of her face, which increased the fragile ethereal look of her in the old fashioned garments.

Norman Kerry, wearing bobbed hair and with his six feet something clad in the swaying plaited kilt, was no less striking. He proudly displayed some antique Scottish cutlery he was wearing in the form of a long horn knife case trimmed with silver, jeweled and engraved. The case carried the short sword which served as a weapon and also a knife, and the fork and spoon, each with a large jewel in the end of the handle, that made a perfect camper's kit for a highlander of wealth in those days. In castle or on the heath each man had his own cutlery, which helped make up for lack of toothbrushes in those times.

Up from the Keys.

Patricia Avery, the stenographer who pounded her keys unnoticed in the offices of the studio for several years and who was selected to go higher and become a film actress recently, is playing Lillian Gish's sister, Enid. She, too, had her hair dressed in the short curls worn at that time, but when she went to the wardrobe to have another dress selected for her she pulled her curls back straight from her face and said laughingly, "There, pull my hair back tight. I'm going to give Lillian all the 'breaks.'"

A few minutes later Norman Kerry came up to admire the large and extremely thick wedding ring she was wearing as the wife of James Striker, in the picture. "My gosh, you are married, with that ring, aren't you?" asked Kerry. "O, that's not a wedding ring," she came back, "that's the band off a peanut butter jar."

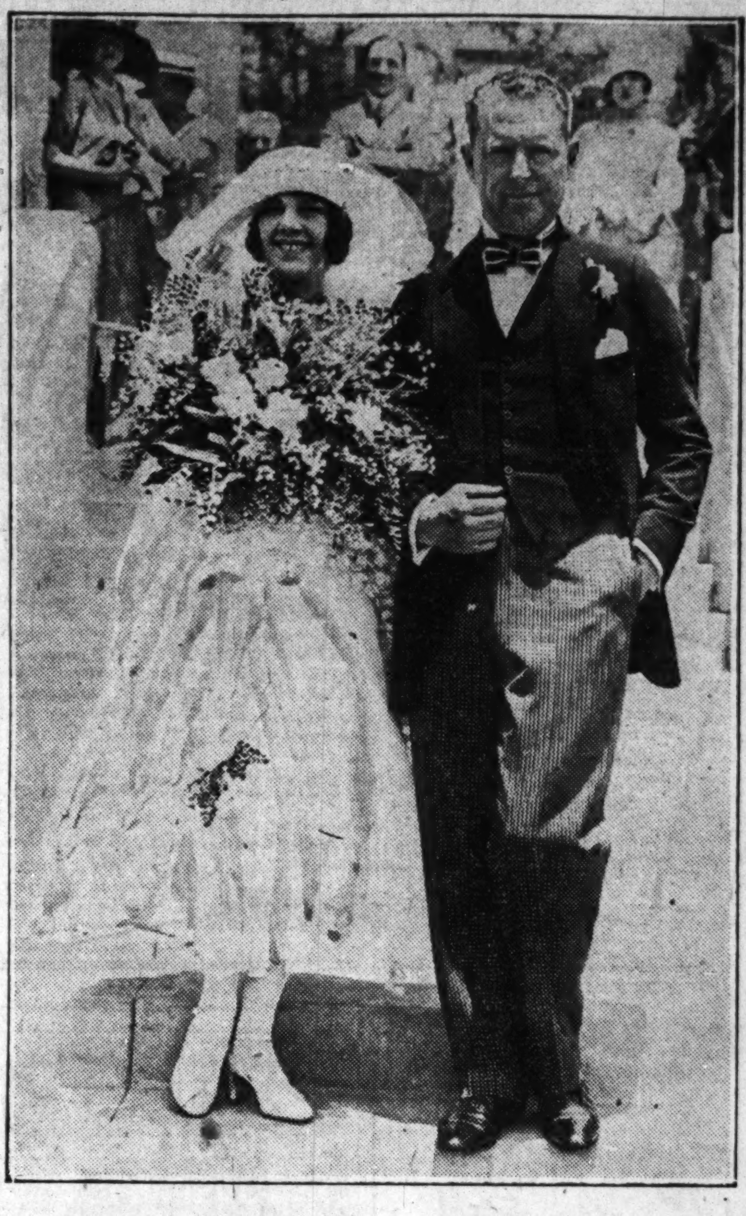
Something New.

Incidentally, Hollywood dope says Anita Loos had Lillian Gish in mind when she wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," getting an unholy kick out of the thought of Lillian speaking the lines of the heroine. Peg Talmadge, mother of Constance and Norma, is also supposed to be represented as the Dorothy in the book. Miss Loos once took a sea trip with Peg—who is a most interesting character, and used a lot of the lines Peg spoke in real life.

At a recent party of girls in Hollywood which included some women writers and picture actresses the conversation began to drift towards slightly naughty stories. Lillian Gish is said to have been present and when the party had begun to get interesting Lillian said, "O, let's talk about birds; I just adore wild life!"

FILM NOTABLES WED



Ralph Ince, known on the screen back in Vitagraph days, and brother of the late Thomas Ince, was recently married to Lucilla Mendez, daughter of a former president of Venezuela, at Hollywood.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer, send stamped, self addressed envelope—please!

Correcting an Error.

Madame: In the picture section of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Sunday, June 27, below Lon Chaney's picture, you state that the cloud in his left eye is a collodion preparation. This is erroneous. The "cloud" happens to be a thin glass eye placed over his natural eye. This is technically called a "bulbous shell." This artificial eye was made by one of the eyemakers of the firm of — — —, Chicago. The order was taken from Mr. Chaney while our expert was in Los Angeles this spring.

I think this should be published because some one may put collodion in their eyes in order to appear blind, whereas a thin artificial eye would answer the purpose, and it is absolutely painless. Respectfully,

M. LAURIE, Secretary.

Editor's note: Thank you, M. Laurie, and we hasten to print your letter—with one slight omission. The note printed in THE TRIBUNE was copied word for word from a description sent us by the publicity department of the company employing Mr. Chaney. It is unfortunate that zeal occasionally instigates misrepresentation.

Another Bouquet for William.

Dear Miss Tinée: Although I have always read your column, this is the first time I have written to you and I want to say that I thoroughly agree with R. M. S. concerning the acting ability of William Haines. He was wonderful in "Memory Lane". and even more so in "Brown of Harvard." [The latter I've seen at two different theaters already and I'm waiting to see it again.]

Hoping your sentiments are the same as mine, I close as one of your constant readers. R. M. O.

Three Reasons Why.

Dear Miss Tinée: I just read your review about the picture, "The Unfair Sex," which you say is N. G. Now I suppose you sometimes get into difficulties with the exhibitors and producers because you feel compelled to give us the lowdown about their wares. However, you can tell them for me and lots of other people I know that we make a special effort to see these N. G. pictures. First, for the same reason that the old-fashioned vaudeville house is packed on amateur night; second, because we can better appreciate the good pictures, and lately there have been oodles of them, thanks to criticism; third, we get more fun out of them than a lot of the intentional comedies.

Now as Ted Lewis says, "Is everybody happy?" R. C. F.

Editor's Note: Now all together, let us sing: "There is SOME good in EVERYthing!"

$10.00 up

WHAT makes ADAPTO Shoes so comfortable to wear? Have they any built-in devices or other mechanical contrivances? No—nothing like that. It's really very simple!

The arches of ADAPTO Shoes are higher—just a little higher—than those of ordinary shoes. They follow right along the lines of your own arches and support them restfully—oh so restfully!

And the heel-seats in ADAPTO Shoes are just a wee bit narrower than in ordinary shoes. But this wee bit provides snug, comfortable fitting for the narrow heel... That's all there is to it! That's why ADAPTO Shoes are so comfortable to wear! Try on a pair and feel the difference. (Sizes up to 11, widths AAA to EEE).

If you suffer from any manner of foot ailment, visit our Foot Service Department for a consultation. This completely equipped department is under the personal management of a specially trained Foot Specialist. Our service also includes the professional supervision of shoe-fittings upon request.

CHICAGO'S LARGEST THEATRICAL CIRCUIT

BELIEVE COMMON SENSE OF YANKS WILL SAVE RADIO

Trouble May Be Annoying but Not Lasting.

Washington, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—Although admittedly it is now every man for himself, American common sense and spirit of fair play is confidently relied upon to save radio broadcasting from going to the bowwows between now and next December, when congress is expected to provide an up-to-date and workable radio law.

Of course, no one can tell exactly what may happen, but it is the opinion of Judge S. B. Davis Jr., solicitor of the department of commerce, one of the best radio legal authorities in the country, that broadcasting will go on pretty much as usual.

In the opinion of commerce officials there may be some conflict between broadcasters at present operating and broadcasters who have erected stations but have not been permitted to operate. The latter will now be privileged to go on the air at once and virtually to help themselves to any wave length they desire.

Hoover's Power Vanishes.

An example of this is the Chicago Federation of Labor, which went on the air this week. It had a station ready to begin broadcasting, but had been refused a license. Now it is broadcasting, using, it is claimed, a wave length of 491.5 meters, the wave length previously used exclusively by WEAF, the American Telephone and Telegraph company of New York.

In fact, excepting with regard to the supervision of wireless equipment in ships, which will continue as usual, the commerce department has done a quick disappearing act, so far as the control of commercial broadcasting stations is concerned. Secretary Hoover, however, did tarry long enough to make an earnest plea that for the sake of the continued good will of Canada and international relations that broadcasters of the United States refrain from appropriating Canadian wave lengths.

One Ray of Hope.

The silver lining to the present cloud appears to be that, for the time being, at least, no new radio stations are likely to be built. The argument advanced by government officials is that under such conditions as now prevail a broadcaster would not venture to invest from $25,000 to $250,000 in a radio station he might never get to operate without interference.

Although admittedly the more than 500 stations now operating are too many, nevertheless, all things considered, they have been doing as well as might be expected under the present arrangement, and it is believed by officials that business will continue pretty much as usual. Of course, some of them may hop off their wave bands or increase their power—which they are also at liberty to do—but after all, the real trouble anticipated is what interference may be caused by the new broadcasters.

The whole question, therefore, appears to resolve itself into a case of good judgment and calm self-control on the part of the industry, which has already distinguished itself along this line. Secretary Hoover has repeatedly said that he never knew of a great industry which from its very beginning had shown such self-restraint.

$350,000,000 Spent in 1925.

No authentic figure is at hand approximating the value of the investment involved in the radio stations of the country, but an idea of the magnitude of the industry is that there are now estimated to be 20,000,000 listeners, and, during the year, something like $350,000,000 was spent on radio by the people of the United States.

If chaos should result, besides the huge investment being put into jeopardy, receiving sets of listeners everywhere might be rendered useless and fans by the millions deprived of radio entertainment.

Government officials have pointed out that the American people are entirely too sane and sensible to allow such chaos to be brought about. Therefore hope is held out that, while the situation may be bad in some places during the summer and fall months, generally speaking, tolerable broadcasting conditions may be expected until the hoped for relief comes in the early winter from congress.

INGENIOUS MODEL DISPLAYS RADIO BEACON AT WORK

That radio may meet the demands soon to be placed upon it by the great development of commercial aviation, a model illustrating the principal of the double beamed beacon for guiding aircraft has been set up by the radio laboratory of the bureau of standards.

This ingenius device is a working model, simulating on a small scale the exact manner of guiding aircraft in flight by means of radio signals transmitted from two coils of wire, or antennae, on the ground. After turning a switch on this model and plugging in the head telephones, signals are heard.

The action of this animated model is a true reproduction of the double beam radio beacon or interlocking system in charting a course of airplanes through fog, darkness, or other adverse weather conditions.

SHORT WAVES

One in every seven families in the state of Victoria, Australia has a receiving set and the popularity of radio there is rapidly increasing.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, July 18.)

(Chicago Daylight Saving Time.)

THE baseball game between the Cubs and the New York Giants will be broadcast at 2:50 o'clock this afternoon from the north side park. Inning by inning, the entire contest will be pictured for listeners. Before the game starts a brief story of the scene, the crowds, and the players will be given. Every Saturday and Sunday game of the Cubs to be played at home the remainder of the season will be presented by W-G-N.

The famous Irish-American tenor, Allen McQuhae, will be heard in another of his weekly recitals on W-G-N tonight at 8:15 o'clock. He is to be assisted tonight as usual by Nicolai Berezowsky's orchestra. Mr. McQuhae's program includes: "Comfort Ye My People," from "The Messiah," by Handel; "In the Garden of My Heart," by Scott; "My Ain Folks," by Mills-Lemon; "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs Bond; and "Little Mary Cassidy," an old Irish song.

This afternoon's musical program will open with an hour's recital by Ambrose Larsen at the Wurlitzer organ. Classical selections and favorite ballads will make up the major part of this performance. Mr. Larsen will begin his recital at 1 o'clock.

The composers, Haydn and Weber, will form the subject of tonight's discussion in "Our Music Room," at 9 o'clock. Among the numbers by Haydn to be heard tonight are the first and the second movements from "The Surprise Symphony" and one of his best known songs, "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair." The Weber selections include "Invitation to the Dance," and the overture from his opera, "Der Freischutz." During the program in "Our Music Room" tonight, Kathleen Ryan, contralto, and Olive June Lacey, soprano, will present several selections.

The Lyon & Healy program will be given at 2 o'clock this afternoon by Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto; John B. Miller, tenor, and Erma Rounds, pianist. One of the features of this program will be "Home to Our Mountains," from "Il Trovatore," which will be sung by Mrs. Gannon and Mr. Miller. Some of the solos to be presented by Mr. Miller are: "Feldeinsamkeit," by Brahms; "Znerznung," by Strauss; and "If With All Your Hearts," from "Elijah," by Mendelssohn. Among the selections Mrs. Gannon will give are: "Thou Wilt Keep Him in Perfect Peace," by Patten; "O Del Mio Amato Ben," by Donaudy; and "Come and Trip It," by Handel.

Several melodies popular the world over will be presented this evening at 7 o'clock in "The Million Sing." Artists in the W-G-N studio will sing these and listeners will be invited to take part. The songs scheduled for this evening include: "The Star Spangled Banner," "Lead Kindly Light," "Sweet Genevieve," "How Can I Leave Thee," "The Long, Long Trail," "Long, Long Ago," "Abide With Me," and "America."

R. M. A. TO HOLD CONVENTION OF 1927 IN CHICAGO

Three New Committees Are Formed.

A decision was reached by the board of directors of the Radio Manufacturers' association, assembled at Buffalo, to hold the 1927 annual spring meeting of the association at Chicago during the week of June 8.

Three new committees were created. The first of these was on interference, to go thoroughly into the causes of interference, other than that caused by radio with a view of working with various agencies to eliminate it.

The committee on radio receiving installation was appointed for the purpose of coöperating with organizations in the construction industry in wiring of houses for proper radio installation as a means for improving the service to the public. Following the suggestion of Secretary Hoover, a statistical committee was organized to make a survey of the statistical needs of the industry

New Association Paper.

Authorization was given for publishing the R. M. A. News at Chicago as the official medium of the association under the direction of B. W. Ruark, executive secretary. Its purpose will be to keep members informed of the progress of the association work.

Important changes in the government of the association were forecast in the proposed new constitution and by-laws presented by President Haugh. This contemplates associate membership for jobbers, creation of a technical group in the association, election of officers under the Australian ballot system and various other matters. It will be presented to the association at its forthcoming New York meeting at the time of the radio show in September.

Importance of Farm Market.

The board of directors approved the national contest proposed by the department of agriculture to intensify interest in radio among farmers and recommended that members of the association coöperate through the donation of prizes and otherwise to carry the contest to a successful conclusion. The importance of the farm market to radio manufacturers cannot be over estimated and the contest will develop data of value in reaching that market.

WGES Installing New 1,000 Watt Transmitter

WGES is installing a new 1,000 watt transmitter and is temporarily silent. It will be back on the air again with a gala program Saturday, July 24, at 8, which will be broadcast from the new transmitter.

JULY IN RADIO HISTORY

1897—July 10—Marconi maintained wireless communication for a distance up to 10 miles.

1902—July 14—Marconi received messages from Poldhu on the Italian cruiser Carlo Alberto, lying at Cape Skagen, a distance of 800 miles; and at Kronstadt, 1,600 miles.

1911—July 11—Radio service organized in department of commerce and labor.

1912—July 23—Act approved by the United States government extending act to cover cargo vessels and requiring two or more skilled radio operators in charge of the apparatus on certain passenger carrying vessels.

1915—July 27—Wireless communication between the United States and Japan was effected. Two terminal stations were located at San Francisco and Funabashi, near Tokio, and the messages were relayed through Honolulu.

1915—July 28—The American Telephone and Telegraph company, working in conjunction with the Western Electric company, succeeded in telephoning wireless across the American continent from Arlington to Hawaii, a distance of nearly 5,000 miles.

1918—July 31—The United States took over all wireless land stations in the United States, with the exception of certain high power stations.

NO INFRINGEMENT SAYS JUDGE IN NEUTRODYNE SUIT

A decision of vital importance to the entire radio industry was handed down last week by Judge Robert A. Inch in the federal courts of Brooklyn in an action brought by the Radio Corporation of America and its associated companies, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, and the American Telephone and Telegraph company, for infringement, by the manufacture and sale of a neutrodyne receiver licensed under the Hazeltine corporation patents. The decision holds that the Hazeltine neutrodyne receiver does not infringe the Rice and Hartley patents, which are owned respectively by the General Electric company and the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

The importance of the decision lies in the fact that it substantially assures the continuance of the activities of the Independent Radio Manufacturers and its sublicensees in the manufacture of neutrodyne receivers under the Hazeltine patents.

Although Judge Inch in his decision rules that the claims of the Rice and Hartley patents, which were sued on, are invalid, he suggests that certain of the remaining claims in those patents may be valid and cover the specific instrumentalities disclosed in the patents.

CONTEST TO FIND MISS RADIO WILL CLOSE AUGUST 15

Seek Woman Who Heard Most Stations.

Owing to the large number of entries, the competition among the feminine broadcast listeners of the United States to determine who is entitled to the distinction of being named "Miss Radio, 1926-7" will end Aug. 15.

"Miss Radio" will be a guest of honor at the Radio World's fair and be introduced to the visible and invisible audience at the opening ceremonies on the night of Sept. 13 in New Madison Square Garden. She will also be guest at entertainments, receptions, and theater parties arranged by women's clubs, radio organizations, and other associations, for a week. All expenses including transportation to and from New York, will be allowed "Miss Radio."

Co-ed 1925 Winner.

The present holder of the title is Rena Jane Frew of Beaver, Pa., who as a student in Geneva college won the 1925 contest.

The winner will be judged on skill in operating a receiving set to bring in long distance stations and for the best essay on "What Radio Is Doing for Women" or a kindred topic. The log will be judged with respect to kind of set used, locations, and other factors. Women in the middle west, for instance, send in records that outshine those on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and ten tube superheterodynes naturally will bring in more stations than a one tube outfit—although last year an invalid woman reported 250 stations received on a single tube receiver.

Professionals Barred.

Logs and letters, with a photograph, should be sent, preferably immediately, to G. Clayton Irwin Jr., general manager of the Radio World's Fair, at 1475 Broadway, New York City.

Cups will be awarded to "Miss Radio" and the winners of second and third prizes.

Professionals, by which is meant people who directly or indirectly earn a living from radio—there are many women in radio—are barred from the contest.

RADIO ON PLANES MAKES IT TOUGH ON RUM RUNNERS

In an effort to make life more hazardous for rum smugglers, five United States Coast Guard seaplanes have been equipped with radio. This follows an experiment at Gloucester, Mass., where a coast guard plane is already using radio with considerable success. The communication range covered by this experimental outfit is in the neighborhood of ten miles.

W-G-N TO OPEN NEW STUDIOS AT DRAKE THIS WEEK

Will Be Models of Radio Perfection.

In preparation for the unusual program of entertainment and public service it is planning for the fall and winter, W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, moves this week into its recently completed studios and control room on the twelfth floor of the Drake hotel.

Products of one of the finest engineering organizations possessed by any radio station, the new studios and the control room have been specially designed and constructed to meet the various needs of the swiftly moving day and night schedule of W-G-N. The present studio facilities have been taxed to the utmost, and when the enormous program developed for the fall and winter months came under consideration, the station officials realized they were inadequate and plans were at once drawn for new studios and a control room that would be the last word in radio engineering.

First Programs This Week.

Work was started in May, and fruition of the months of labor comes this week when the first programs are to be broadcast from these modern studios.

New studios and control room cover a total area of over 1,700 square feet. Studio No. 1 is 20 by 40 feet; studio No. 2, 20 by 30 feet, and the control room 15 by 15 feet. A third studio, ten feet square, has been built particularly for "Sam 'n' Henry," W-G-N's popular colored boys.

Past experience has played a large part in the design and equipment of these new studios. While mechanically perfect, they are bare of unnecessary tables, chairs and lamps. The customary gaudy magnificence of the radio station has been sacrificed to insure a site where the special programs and productions of the type W-G-N has featured in the past may be presented under ideal conditions. W-G-N's new studios are ideal radio workshops. All lighting is overhead. There is no desk for the announcer, who will do all his talking into a special microphone fixed to the wall. Only such chairs as are necessary for musicians will be permitted.

Control Room a Marvel.

The new control room is a marvel of its kind. Four huge panels, designed under the direction of Chief Engineer Carl Meyers, and constructed by Assistant Engineer George Leverett and his staff, have numerous unique features in addition to being modern in every respect. Chief among these is the "mixer panel," permitting simultaneous broadcasting from twelve microphones. This panel will be used for productions and feature programs where unusual blending of music is necessary.

The panel also contains facilities for chain broadcasting to five stations, while W-G-N can operate 100 "remote controls" [broadcasts that emanate from a point other than the studio], without overtaxing the panels. A special panel is also maintained for the features programs brought by leased telephone wire from New York studios.

The operator seated before the panels has the master control of all station mechanical activities. The complicated task of switching from studio to studio, from remote control to remote control, has been reduced to its simplest terms and the work of making changes can transpire in less than a second's time. While a special switching device will be placed in the studios so that the announcer can operate the various microphones, a mistake on his part can be instantly rectified by the operator, who has a clear view of all studios through heavy plate glass windows.

Extra Studio Great Help.

The new studios are expected to assist in speeding up programs. When one orchestra is scheduled to follow up another there is often a delay to permit the exit of one group and the entrance of the second. The two studios will eliminate this. The second orchestra can be getting ready in the other studio while the first is completing its program.

In the case of a feature where numerous people are necessary, such as the series of "Old Tim Prize Fights," when the first studio "mob" was used, the extra studio will permit the preceding and succeeding feature to move forward without discomfort or interruption from the "extras."

U. S. TO HAVE BIG RADIO DISPLAY ON EXHIBITION

The exhibit of the radio division of the department of commerce at the sesquicentennial at Philadelphia promises to be a visual education to fans. The display includes the oldest and newest of appliances. In it is the enormous old loop Dr. J. Harris Rogers of Hyattsville, Md., used underground so successfully in communicating with foreign stations during the war when the Germans were cluttering up the air.

The method by which a transmitter is kept in operation in emergencies when the power plant of a ship is placed out of commission will be demonstrated. Also the methods of locating types of interference such as leaky power lines. There is in the exhibit a 500 watt phone broadcasting transmitter and a one-half watt Marconi quenched spark transmitter. According to the radio division it will be one of the most illuminating exhibits ever shown and well worth the time of fans to look it up.

RADIO SAFEGUARD OF CONSTITUTION, DECLARES DAWES

Publicly praising radio for the second time within the month, Vice President Dawes declared it one of the greatest safeguards of the American constitutional government.

"The political blatherskite and demagogue," Mr. Dawes told an audience at the 300th anniversary of the founding of Salem, Mass., "more often appeals to the mind of the crowd through its emotions, but his radio audience of millions are unable to hear or be swayed by his emotional claptrap."

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

OH, no, applause letters are not the only letters we get in a radio station. No, indeed!

Not all of the listeners who write letters dip their pens in attar of roses. No, siree!

And all is not gold that is posted. No, no!

Go to any radio station you please, and you'll find a seamy side to the mail bag. There'll be flocks of flora and fauna like this:

"Gentlemen: This is to tell you that we picked you up last night for a while. Appreciated your concert by remote control. Where was it held, in a roundhouse?"

"Dear Sir: Upon hearing your three solos tonight, I was overcome with emotion. I have been wondering what I might do for you in return. As a small token of my feelings, I am sending you under separate cover a bouquet of early June cactus."

"Gentlemen: Your new tenor, Mr. O'Lampshade, has been singing every time I have tuned you in. My-o-my, where has he been all the sheriff's life?"

"Hey, there, I heard your lecture this afternoon, and it certainly was a lecture. The next time you're on the program, I'm going for a ride on my bicycle."

"Dear Mr. Announcer: I see by the papers you're the proud father of a baby girl. I hope you have to walk the floor where the nights are six months long."

"Dear Sirs: Last evening you were coming in strong. Listened to you for almost five minutes. Your male choir sounded like a bowling ball in a china shop. Yours truly."

THE RASPBERRY
For Radio Announcer
RADIO ANNOUNCER

"Gentlemen of the radio station: I should like to get the address of your singer, Percy Pigeon. If he's ever passing through our town, I'd like to do him a favor. I'd press his clothes for him free of charge—with him in 'em."

"Dear Announcer: We were quite surprised this evening to hear your ladies' duet. We had always believed that one of the Cherry Sisters was dead."

"Say, mister, if you're a piano player, then I'm a herring."

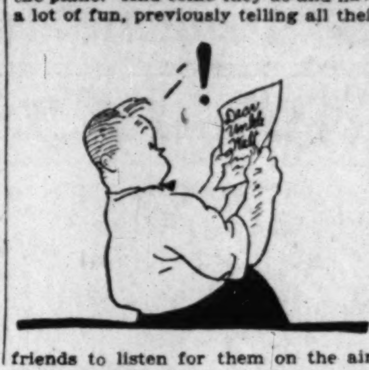
IT'S GETTING TO be such a mercenary world that people will soon expect money for telling you it's pretty warm today. Only yesterday we encountered so striking an example of this that we sat right down and sobbed out loud.

Lately we've been inviting all the little boys and girls who would relish the experience to come to the radio station during the children's period and speak a piece, or sing a song or play the piano. And come they do and have a lot of fun, previously telling all their friends to listen for them on the air. Well, yesterday we received this note, scrawled in a large infantile hand:



"Jun 11 1926
Dear Unkle
Walt how much money would
I get if I played Old black
Joe and My Contry tis of thee?
I am 6 years and 1 months old."

And the chances for a big business deal fell through because the writer signed no name!

REPORTS FROM Washington tell us that radio will soon be handled on the cafeteria plan. Broadcasters can just step up and help themselves to wave lengths—and tell the cashier to paste the checks in her album.

One dispatch says, "An opinion by Attorney General Sargent holds that the secretary of commerce is utterly without power to enforce or deny the use of particular wave lengths or fix the power of individual broadcasting stations. This opinion leaves the door wide open for the pirating of wave lengths."

So, now, if the broadcasters start shooting fireworks all over the place and spending all day and night firing cap pistols at one another, they're going to look up all of a sudden to find that the audience has walked out on them.

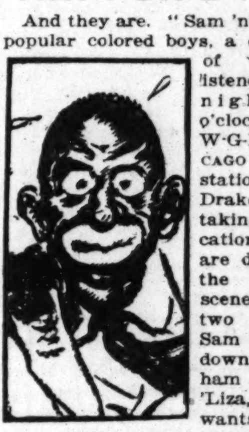
SOME WEEKS AGO we wrote herein of an apartment dweller who had to trot from the third floor down to the mailbox one evening and was able to here from radio sets on the second and first floors, a program he didn't want to miss. Now, another listener tells us that from his set on the third floor he supplies entertainment to radio-less neighbors on the second and first floors, by connecting horns in their apartments with his receiver.

And there comes the community radio set! [The only trouble with which is that the world is full of humans and their tastes never agree.]

Was it in Brooklyn that they planned to supply "radio" entertainment through the electric light wires and sockets? Just plug in and be entertained with music, clear as a bell—but if you didn't like it, there was nothing else to turn to.

SAM 'N' HENRY TO BE MISSING FROM AIR FOR 2 WEEKS

And they are. "Sam 'n' Henry," the popular colored boys, a cross section of whose lives listeners hear each night at 10 o'clock over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, are taking their vacations. Opinions are divided as to the prospective scene of their two weeks' rest. Sam plans to go down to Birmingham and see 'Liza, but Henry wants to keep his lovesick friend as far from the Dixie beauty as possible.



SAM.

The news is that they'll be missing from the air for two weeks, following tonight's performance. They will make their reappearance on Aug. 3.

RADIO GREAT AID TO DAIRY FARMER IN PORTO RICO

Carolina, P. R., July 17.—Amateur radio communication as a business asset has just been demonstrated with the conclusion of a year and a half of consistent schedule work between United States amateur station 3JW, operated by W. R. Ebensperger of Glocester City, N. J., and Porto Rican amateur station 4KT, owned and operated by Señor B. Pinero of this city.

During the eighteen months in which the schedule between the two stations has been in effect, Señor Pinero, who operates a large dairy farm near San Juan, has found his private radio station of incalculable benefit in transmitting and receiving orders, stock quotations, etc., when the cable and mail services were inadequate. Cattle were ordered from New York markets; shipments of cigars were directed from the Porto Rican wholesalers; daily bulletins from doctors in New York City to relatives of the patients in Porto Rico were transmitted, and a great deal of other important traffic handled.

In a number of cases, the Porto Rican station would "stand by" for a few minutes while the United States amateur telephoned the message to its destination and secured an immediate answer for transmittal back to the island.

DOES SLIPPING OF THE WORLD AFFECT RADIO?

It seems a far cry from the movement of the earth's crust to wireless telegraph signals, but, nevertheless, an effort will be made during October and November to determine the fact.

The observations will be to determine the differences in longitude of different points in the world, and the permanency of their relative positions. The principal stations conducting the tests will be the naval operating base, San Diego, Cal.; the Algiers observatory, and the Shanghai observatory, all of which are nearly in the same latitude and spaced approximately eight hours apart in longitude.

Sanctioning this unusual undertaking will be the International Astronomical union and the International Geodetic and Geophysical union.

Pavloska, Chicago Opera Star, on WJAZ Program

Tonight from 7:30 p. m. to 8 p. m. WJAZ will have for its principal artist Mme. Irene Pavloska of the Chicago Civic Opera company. Mme. Pavloska's program will include several of her popular arias from the operas of last winter, among them being the "Habanera" from "Carmen."

CASHING CHECKS BY RADIO TO BE AID TO TOURISTS

London Hotel Plans to Honor Them.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 17.—Success of the radio picture transmitting apparatus between London and New York makes it likely that this system is to be extended to all the principal cities of the continent. It will thus be possible for a photograph of an important event to be in London in under an hour of its taking place, whether it be 3,000 or 300 miles away.

An interesting and extremely useful development of this system makes it possible for tourists to cash checks on their banks thousands of miles away and have the money in their pocket in about half an hour after signing the check.

Savoy Hotel to Cash 'Em.

When the system is working fully the Savoy hotel, for one, it is understood, hopes to make arrangements for visitors from any European capital, as well as America, to cash checks by this photo transmission method. Thus they will be saved the responsibility of carrying large sums of money or even letters of credit about with them.

Many of the radio clubs of Britain are to start a "drive" next month with the object of gathering more radio enthusiasts into their ranks.

Considering the number of amateurs who take a keen interest in radio, the proportion of those who are members of clubs is small.

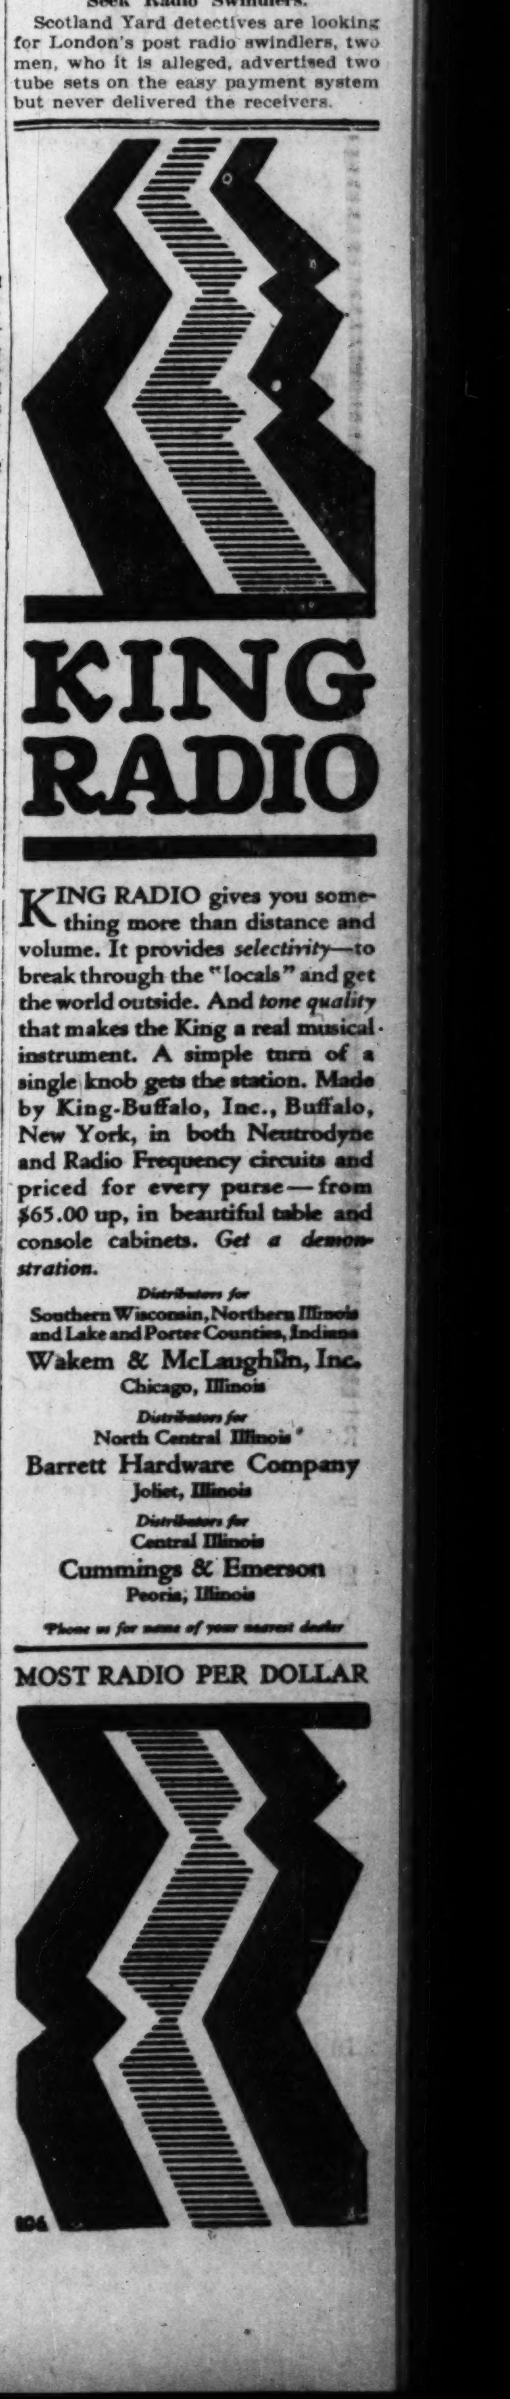
Hold Radio Excursions.

It is suggested that this is because radio is so largely an indoor pastime and does not lend itself to gatherings for the mutual pursuit of the hobby to the same extent as motor clubs, photographic clubs, and cycle clubs.

Some of the leading radio clubs, however, are to alter this during the summer months, for they are to arrange a series of excursions to interesting parts of the country, and accompanying them will be the latest and lightest designs in portable receivers. All kinds of tests will be made in the open air, while those who are not so interested in the technical side will be able to draw in open air concerts from various stations.

Seek Radio Swindlers.

Scotland Yard detectives are looking for London's post radio swindlers, two men, who it is alleged, advertised two tube sets on the easy payment system but never delivered the receivers.



KING RADIO

KING RADIO gives you something more than distance and volume. It provides selectivity—to break through the "locals" and get the world outside. And tone quality that makes the King a real musical instrument. A simple turn of a single knob gets the station. Made by King-Buffalo, Inc., Buffalo, New York, in both Neutrodyne and Radio Frequency circuits and priced for every purse—from $65.00 up, in beautiful table and console cabinets. Get a demonstration.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

That Did It.

When I was about 10, I was interested in people's initials, and I discovered that while mother's maiden initials were S. I. M., getting married had given her the initials S. I. M. P.

"Oh, Dad," I called, "did you know that mother's initials spell simp?"

"Why, that is so," Dad replied. "It's queer how initials tell what a person is like, isn't it?"

"Well," flashed back mother, "I wasn't a simp until I married you."

E. P.

Presents.

My husband had been away on a long trip and the evening he returned was one of much merriment among the children. Dad felt they were just bubbling over because of his return, and winking, turned to me and said: "Mother, I wonder why they are all so happy?"

To which I replied, "It is on account of your presence, I am sure."

"Presents," he cried, "and I was flattering myself on being the cause."

MRS. WM. H.

Even Later.

My aunt was reading the paper and said to my uncle, "I read in the paper the bridegroom was late for the wedding because he didn't wake up in time."

My uncle replied: "That's nothing. I didn't wake up until after I was married."

F. H. K.

The Reason Why.

Wifie—Dear, why do they always say "she" when they're talking about a train or a boat?"

Hubby—"Because it takes a man to run them!"

D. K.

She Said It.

It was the first of the month and the bills had just come in.

In glancing over them I exclaimed, "Dear me!"

My husband looked at me and said, "I quite agree with you."

L. F.

Dumb Enough.

The other day my wife asked me to bring her a drink. As I was bringing it to her I said: "Who made me your waiter?"

And she came back with: "Well, whoever did certainly made me a dumb one."

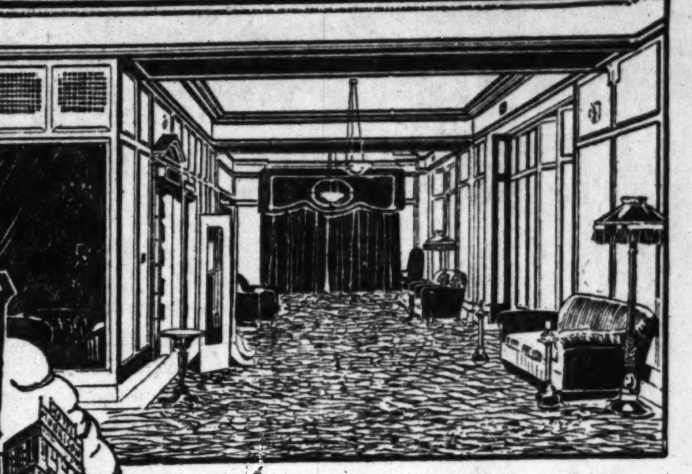
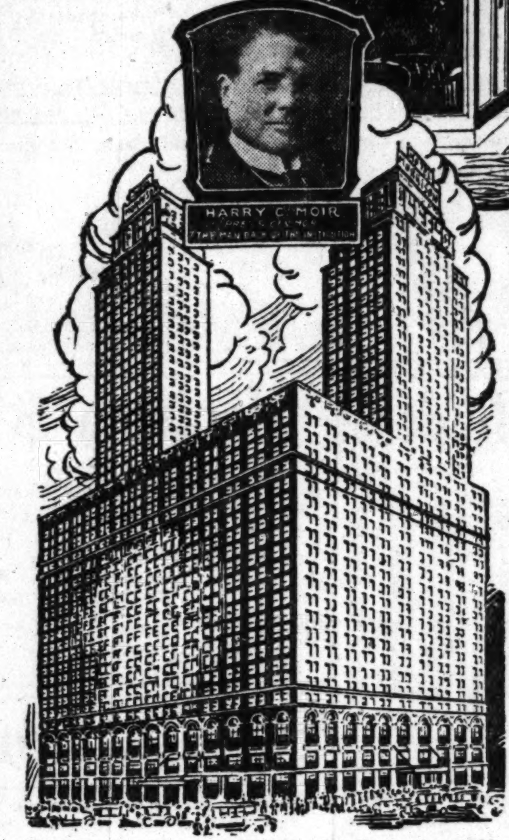
Greatest of Convention Hotels

The Morrison



FOYER LEADING TO CAMEO ROOM, PRIVATE DINING ROOMS AND SMALL CONVENTION ROOMS



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

EVEN before the construction of its new 46-story section, the Morrison was a strong favorite with convention secretaries. But the scientific judgment with which reception parlors, meeting halls, committee rooms, etc., are now planned has made this the greatest convention season in the history of the hotel.

The Famous Cameo Room

Fraternal orders and business associations have found many of their convention problems solved by the long experience of the hotel management. The beautiful Cameo Room seats 2,000 without a single pillar to obstruct the view. Dancing, sparkling entertainments and delicious meals are enjoyed in the Terrace Garden, where the different specialties are broadcast every evening by Station WSWS from 6 to 7 p. m., 8 to 9 p. m., 10 to 11 p. m., and 12, midnight, to 1 a. m.

Closest to Offices, Theaters, Stores and R. R. Stations
1944 Outside Rooms With Bath, at $2.50 Up

Every room is outside, with bath, circulating ice water, bed-head lamp and Servidor. A housekeeper is stationed on each floor. All guests enjoy garage service. The central location promotes great economy in rates, as revenues from lucrative subleases pay all the ground rent, permitting charges of $2.50 to $5 for rooms that would cost $5 to $8 in any other hotel of high reputation.

All guests are invited to visit the tower-roof free of charge

For a Vacation in a Car

Here's a playground which has about everything that you can wish for on a motor vacation.

Splendid paved roads—2,000 miles of them; good hotels all the way; woods and streams for sportsmen; in less than a day's driving distance of city comforts, but providing such fishing, hunting, camping, as you would otherwise go hundreds of miles further to find—golfing, canoeing, bathing. Drive in from anywhere, Toronto to Chicago, and enjoy yourself any place along the Lake Erie-Niagara Falls Trail or the Michigan Trail. Whether you stick to main roads or follow the paved byways, you'll be glad you came. You'll find it an economical vacation, too, if that appeals to you.

Just two last words before you start on your vacation "Cheque" out

"Chequing" Out means Chequing your money—protecting it against loss or theft—by changing it into a form of travel funds which, if lost or stolen, loses you nothing and which is acceptable everywhere, spendable anywhere.

You may not lose your cash, nor have it stolen, but most everyone does, sometime. Relieve yourself of this danger. Make your vacation money safe. Go into any one of 22,000 banks, American Express, or American Railway Express Offices, and "Cheque" out before you start—change your money into—

American Express Travelers Cheques

Sky-blue in color, about the size of a dollar bill, these Cheques are issued in denominations of $10, $20, $50 and $100, and they cost only 75c per $100.

You simply sign your name in one corner when you buy them. When you spend them you sign your name a second time, in the presence of the acceptor. The agreement of your two signatures is your identification.

Whatever your plans, wherever you go, whatever the length of your holiday, whatever your method of travel—before you start "Cheque" out and see for yourself this summer what a happy difference these sky-blue Cheques will make in your vacation days.

Always plan your cruise or tour—and secure your tickets and hotel reservations through

MISS ELOISE REQUA, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. ReQua of 33 Bellevue place, is to be one of the bridesmaids in the wedding on Saturday of Miss Martha Morse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse, to Carl Stibolt of Davenport, Iowa.

Mrs. T. Philip Swift and Mr. Swift, who are spending the summer at "Swiftcroft," Lake Forest, are to depart some time next month for a fortnight's stay at Watch Hill, R. I.

Mrs. William S. Covington (nee Elizabeth Morse), who is Miss Martha Morse's sister, is to be maid of honor at her wedding which will take place at the Morse estate in Lake Forest.

Calendar Proclaims Midsummer's Here

By Mme. X.

IN spite of sunspots and a season which at this writing is 224 degrees below normal in temperature and three inches above normal in rainfall, we are today in the heart of midsummer. Never in our imperfect memory has the foliage in the region lying about Chicago been so luxuriant nor the roadsides so full of blossoms. Latest comer of these wayside wild flowers is the blue chicory, or "succory," as New Englanders call it. Perhaps you remember Emerson's ode to "The Humble Bee," where, in exquisite lines, he sings of "Grass with green flag half mast high,

Succory to match the sky,
Columbine with horn of honey,
Scented fern and agrimony."

It's a delicious set of half a dozen stanzas that gives the reader the very essence of this moment of the year.

Wanted Beauties.

Little heed, however, does the world that amuses itself pay to wayside blooming. People drive too fast in high power cars to see what grows beside the road. They are hurrying to golf, tennis, bridge games, dinner parties, luncheons, dances, and teas. Emerson and the poets and thinkers of his generation walked through fields and woodlands. They knew nothing of slicing the ball, of an overhand serve, of no-trump bids, of dancing the Charleston. Dinners, luncheons, teas, balls were not on their calendars. The only gustatory feasts recorded of that set were the round table luncheons of the great publisher, James T. Fields, where met together Lowell, Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Emerson, Thoreau, et al, and where plain food and high talk were the order of the day.

It is truly a different age in which we live, one where the surface glitters so that most of us are too dazzled and entertained to poke below it. But it's a most pleasant life we of today lead. I think even the meditative Emerson would have enjoyed a spin in a luxurious automobile. I am sure Longfellow would have enjoyed golf. One can even fancy Thoreau being a nimble tennis player, while it is more than likely that Dr. Holmes would have played a skillful game of bridge and found pleasure in it, too. Margaret Fuller might have been lured by the Charleston's intricate shuffle.

New Quirks in Bridge.

But I am wandering too far, led by the sky blue of the wayside chicory.

Apropos of bridge: there are certain new quirks in this enticing game which open fresh vistas to the player. One of them is that nowadays all honors have the same value no matter what the suit may be, which gives a wider scope in bidding. The recently instituted practice of not waiting for a five card suit, but making a declaration in a four card suit also enlarges the player's opportunity to bid. Another change is that the low cut no longer gets the deal; it goes to the player who cuts high. Alas, the X family, which has for years cut high, now turns up the low card! Fate is a persistent and attentive jade. Changed card rules mean nothing to her.

Two Distinguished Visitors.

Two men of different races and outlooks, but both notables, visited Chicago last week—Maj. Gen. Umberto Nobile of Italy, and Viscount Astor of England. Gen. Nobile was the designer and captain of the Norge, the big dirigible in which Capt. Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth sailed across the north pole from Norway to Alaska. Gen. Nobile is of the best type of Italian, modest, steadfast, courageous, and capable. He is extremely young to be a major general. He has regular features, dark hair and eyes, is slightly under medium height, is slender, but well built. His manner is quiet, but he has a charming smile and, in spite of a not overwhelming familiarity with our language, is a delightful companion at a luncheon or dinner. Wherever he goes he takes his lively little fox terrier, Titina. When asked how many the Norge carried over the pole, he said: "Seventeen—sixteen men and one lady, Titina."

He left a wife and three youngsters in Rome when he embarked on what was certainly a perilous air trip. The polar regions are not friendly to the tiny bipeds that increasingly invade those lonely, icy wastes. Howling winds, blinding snowstorms prevail there nine-tenths of the year, nor has nature placed there any kind of refuge. An angry sea and wide fields of tortured ice are all that the adventurers saw up there. The only traces of animal life were more than a hundred miles distant on every side. No fishes, seals, birds, or mammals invade that lonely spot.

It was a stroke of genius for Elizabeth Robbins to create a hero like the man in her "Magnetic North," who, having made his way to the north pole, the first man to do so, destroyed his records and kept the fact a secret so as to leave one final mystery spot on this shrinking globe of ours.

The discovery of the north pole did take from the adventurous their last goal, but the airmen could get one more thrill from it. Now the north pole is conquered and its phantom can no longer haunt us. Fettered and bound it lies at the meeting of all the longitudinal lines. Airmen may in time fly over the south pole, but the feat, though it may be more difficult, will not seem so original and thrilling as this final victory over its rival at the other end of the orange.

About Expatriates.

As quiet, unassuming and genial as Gen. Nobile was the week's other distinguished visitor, Lord Astor, who with his son, William Waldorf, spent three days here.

Lord Astor's father, whose name the son of the present Viscount bears, was never extremely popular with his American countrymen. Although this nation is largely composed of citizens who have left their native lands and come here to adopt our language, laws, and customs, we resent it when a native-born American forsakes this country and transfers his allegiance to another. Therefore, both William Waldorf Astor and Henry James lost caste over here when they became English citizens. Probably the reason for our attitude is because the foreigner who comes to our shores to take up citizenship does so for the reason that he is unable to make a living in the land of his birth. In return for this great privilege here he throws in his destinies with those of the U. S. A., making this the place where he both makes and spends his substance. The American who gives up his American citizenship continues to draw his revenues from his American investments, but spends it in foreign lands, thereby by so much sapping the vitality of the country which gave life and prosperity to him and his forebears.

Can you see an Englishman or a Frenchman of means renouncing his own country and taking up citizenship in any other? It is highly improbable.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

inch a man—in English clothes—and looks more like a British peer than most of his fellow peers of entirely English stock.

His wife, who is one of the famous gay and handsome Langhorne sisters of Virginia, was first married to Robert Shaw, a member of one of Boston's best families. This union of the north and south was not a happy one and was ended by divorce some twenty-five years ago. Lady Astor will go down in history not as one of the Langhorne beauties, though she's extremely good looking, nor will she be recorded because she married an Americo-British peer; but because, in spite of her American birth, she was the first woman member of parliament. She has made a name for herself there as a lively debater. She is also a believer in prohibition and often makes speeches advocating laws to curb and restrain the wide-spread use of liquor, which is one of the serious problems of the day in the British isles.

She has presented Lord Astor with five children, a lively family, of whom the 19 year old son, who accompanies him on his American trip is the eldest. A sun browned, good looking youth, he has perhaps more of his mother's vivacity than his father's reserved manner.

The two social affairs given for the Astors during their stay here were the dinner of thirty-six guests which Mrs. Medill McCormick gave in their honor last Monday evening at the Saddle and Cycle club and a men's dinner at which Samuel Insull was Lord Astor's host at the Chicago club on Tuesday night, while young Astor was entertained by the Robert G. McGanns at their Lake Forest residence.

A Mysterious Party.

Lake Forest's smart set is all agog over the festive and mysterious party the Charles Edward Browns are giving next Saturday evening. No one adds more to gayety of nations than handsome Mrs. Charlie Brown. She has a flair for the original and unusual, and also, as the poets would say, "slings a nifty pen." The rhymes with which she invited her guests and the further ones with which she gives them directions as to costume and place of meeting immediately impart a cheerful and original flavor to the coming fête. Everybody will assemble in high spirits and ready for anything that is provided in the way of entertainment.

Capricious as this summer of 1926 is so far, it hasn't prevented hostesses from arranging open air platforms for dancers. The John Bordens had their supper-dance of July 10 on the charming terrace of the A. A. Sprague house, which they are occupying for the season in Lake Forest. It overlooks the lake and is a lovely spot for such an affair. Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Dick planned their dance last night to be on the terrace of their Lake Forest abode. Over it they built a platform. A part of the evening's entertainment was a vaudeville. They gave the affair for their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Matthews Dick of Washington, D. C.

Among the sojourners in Lake Forest at the moment are Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, who have leased the Stewart Prosser house on Woodland road. Mrs. Porter is a young woman of much talent and energy. She is a delver into philosophy and theosophy. When her sister, Miss Manziarly of Paris, came over here some months ago, the two established a book shop on East Ontario street, designed especially to cater to people interested in the same line of literature and intellectual diversion. In spite of our materialistic civilization there are many such to whom the immeasurable spaces of intangible thought are far more interesting than the immeasurable spaces of that part of the universe which we can perceive with our senses. Mrs. Porter spends every other day at her book shop.

In August Mr. and Mrs. Porter will occupy Mrs. Medill McCormick's new country house overlooking the Rock river, near Byron, Ill., while Mrs. McCormick and her three children, Katrina, John, and Ruth Elizabeth, go to a western ranch for the simple outdoor life offered in such a place.

A Much Needed Boon.

The last two generations have seen such a development and improvement in the line of scientific care of the ill as was not made in the unnumbered preceding centuries. The trained nurse has been evolved in the last thirty years, an invaluable aid to the medical world. A trained nurse, however, is an expensive luxury beyond the reach of people of moderate means and moderate illness. The genuinely needy and poor can call on the services of the Visiting Nurse association which sends ministering angels into dark and disease infected homes to bring sweetness and light. But the families with certain but limited incomes have a hard time when illness comes.

For them the Illinois State Association of Graduate Nurses has started a bureau of hourly nursing. There are many cases that only need the ministrations of a trained nurse for an hour or two a day. These hourly nurses may be obtained at the Chicago Nurses club and registry, 116 South Michigan avenue. Many people who live in hotels or small apartments will welcome this form of service in time of need. I mention this new enterprise because Mrs. John Gary and a number of other well known women are interested in getting it established. It ought to mitigate somewhat "the high cost of sickness," of which the mere thought makes the sick sicker, and shakes the health of the healthy.

Chicago Loses an Artist.

The death last week of Miss Mabel Key, a sister of Mrs. William P. Martin and Mrs. J. Allen Haines, took from the community an artist of great talent and remarkable achievement. She made a specialty of paintings of flowers, chiefly in water colors. She had a rare sense of color and a masterly technique. Strong, yet fine and spirited, her canvases are a delight to any art connoisseur. I know no one who quite equals her in her own, especial field. She was a great granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, the author and composer of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner."

Gay Crowds Throng Beach at Deauville

By Henry Wales.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DEAUVILLE, France, July 17.—Dazzling, red hot weather drew everyone to the beach to enjoy surf bathing last Wednesday. Hundreds of parasols dotted the sands, and many parties remained all day on the beach, lunching in their bathing suits.

In the middle of the afternoon the giant steamship Paris steamed majestically past Deauville en route to New York from Havre.

The finish of the Paris-Deauville tandem bicycle race woke the visitors early as crowds assembled and cheered the sprinters. All tennis courts were occupied and the route to the golf course was popular.

At the Casino.

The large new wing of the Normandie hotel was officially opened, providing an additional 150 rooms and making this one of the largest hostelries of Europe, having 600 rooms.

There was high play at the casino, with forty tables going and a monster baccarat game. Punters hit the syndicate bank hard during the evening, it being estimated that they cleaned up more than 2,000,000 francs [$55,000].

Mrs. Jean Nash returned to Deauville and appeared twice at the beach for morning and afternoon dips.

Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, who has a villa, entertained at dinner, as did also Kingsley MacComber and Alexander Revell.

Richard Klegin photographed many bathers, using a superacting ray permitting enlargement to life size.

Guests of the Normandie.

At the Normandie hotel were Ravenger Crawford, N. E. Carrell, A. Holedade, M. Moyer, E. M. Connell, M. De Claneros, R. Deveux, J. G. Bullock, Mme. Carello, Mrs. Munn Amory, Mrs. Montagne Williams, F. H. May, J. E. Lancaster, J. Ogden, O. R. Singer, H. Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. M. Wolff, Mrs. Gould Jennings, Miss E. C. Hammond, Ralph B. Strassburger, W. R. Richard, and A. Hatfield.

At the Royal hotel were Mme. Marie Grunbaum, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Nathan, Mrs. Elizabeth Stuyvesant Floresco Astoreca, Maurice DeKobra, Jean Monferrato, Alfred Barnaud, Louis Montant, Arthur O'Neill, Miss Lily Dryfer, Oscar Stern, Richard Klegin and Mme. Julie Blanding.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Tuxedo Owns One of World's Finest Clubs

By Howard White.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The announcement that the members of Tuxedo Park, an abode of the socially famous, are to expend $750,000 on improvements of the clubhouse, adds another chapter to the history of this colorful colony. For several decades Tuxedo has been identified with many of the all important events of society. Winter and summer, spring or fall there always are affairs at the Park of great interest to the smart set.

It was in 1886 that Pierre Lorillard II. founded the colony which is now Tuxedo Park. During that year there was built a railroad station, a village, the stone gate, which stands today, and the present massive stone wall which shuts out the gaze of the curious. Beginning with twelve families, the exclusive coterie developed to what it is now, with about 150 families enclosed in the charmed circle. All the dwellers rank among the leaders of national and international society.

The money to be raised in the drive under way will obtain further grandeur for the luxuriously appointed club and place it among the finest of its kind in the world. The membership numbers approximately 325.

Distinguished Membership.

The honorary president is Pierre Lorillard. S. Sloan Colt is treasurer. Among the members are Vincent Astor, George F. Baker, William M. Chadbourne, Chauncey M. Depew, Amos Tuck French, C. Oliver Iselin, Clarence H. Mackay, Newbold Morris, Herbert C. Pell, Philip Rhinelander, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Col. Arthur Woods.

Apart from its social prominence, Tuxedo Park contains fine natural scenery and opportunities for almost every feature of outdoor sports. It has been compared with the country about Lake Como, Italy. Parts of it are carefully tended to a superb state of beauty, while other sections are allowed to retain the natural wildness of the country. Partridges abound there, while deer are not uncommon, and all of this within a few miles of New York.

Among the sports events which attract unusual attention and are the nuclei of many brilliant affairs are the programs offered annually by the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet club, the Tuxedo Lakes Yacht club, and the Tuxedo Golf club. The horse show held there each year is noted for the social prestige which surrounds it.

About two years ago the Park dwellers were aroused over the threatened invasion of the public into their retreat. Purchase was made of 6,300 acres of the adjoining Lorillard estate at an outlay of $1,400,000, which was welded into the community. Thus was the sanctity of this social Gibraltar preserved.

Looking Forward to Polo.

From all indications the eastern section of the country will enjoy the most active polo season in the history of the game in this country. This sport has an especial appeal to the members of the smart set who gather at the numerous house parties, dinners, and dances which have become a part of each contest. From Westbury, Long Island, to Rumson, N. J., and in Westchester county and at Narragansett Pier, elaborate preparations for the matches and entertainment of players have been completed. The whole will form a brilliant social calendar in itself, in which many of the noted international contestants will figure.

At Narragansett Pier polo will continue well into September, making probably the longest period on record, according to George F. Naphen, who is president of the Point Judith Polo club. One of the outstanding events will be the twelve goal championship in which British and American teams are scheduled to appear.

The junior championship match of the United States, second only in importance to the open championship, will be staged at the Westchester-Biltmore club, in Westchester county, beginning July 31. This will attract a large number of well known folk from Long Island, Westchester, and Fairfield counties and from other sections. From all indications, the biggest entry list in the history of the junior event will participate, for an extraordinary number of polo players will be concentrating in this section when the tournament starts.

The junior championship is at present held by a United States army team composed of Maj. A. H. Wilson, Capt. C. H. Gerhardt, Capt. P. P. Rodes, and Lieut. J. A. Smith. An army team will defend this title, though several of the members of this quartet are no longer eligible for play in the junior event, wherein no player may exceed a six goal handicap and no team may exceed a total of twenty.

Off to Europe.

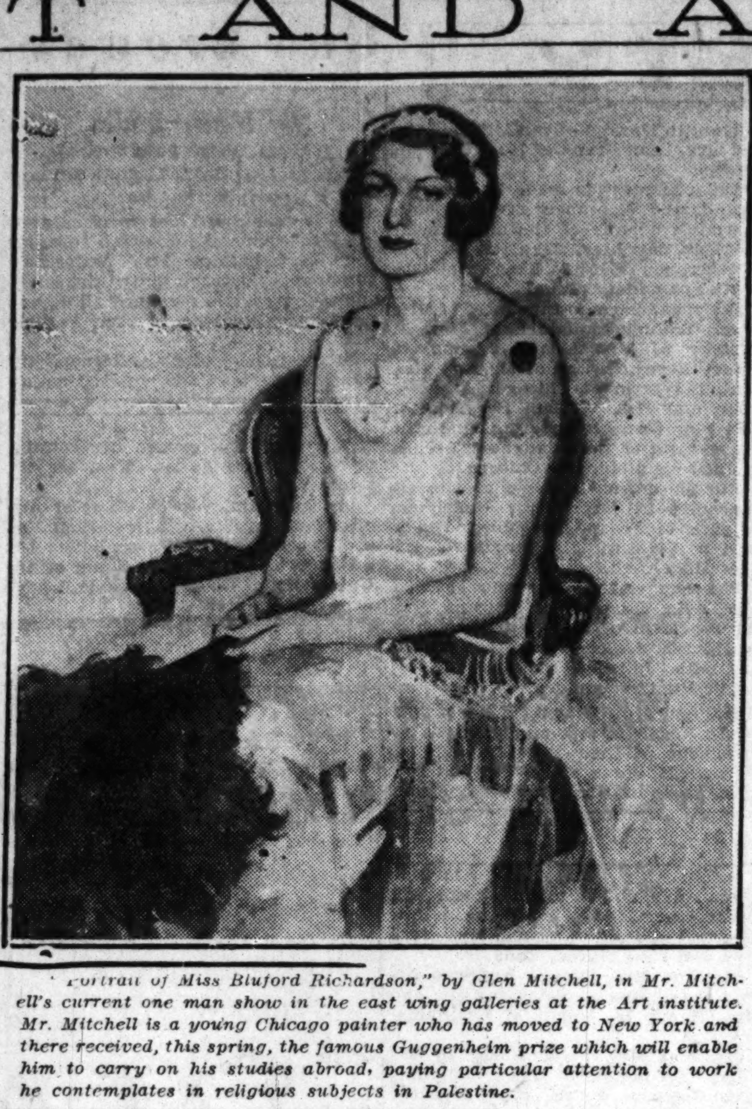
Although many members of New York society, seeking to recuperate from the strenuous winter, hasten to the Adirondacks, country and shore resorts, with the approach of hot weather, there is almost an equal number who sail for the old world to obtain rest and recreation. A glance at the departure list of one of the big ocean liners which left this port the other day reads like a page from the Social Register. Among those who went away were Gen. W. W. Atterbury, Mr. and Mrs. Cass Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rich Steers, Gifford A. Cochran, Mrs. Eliphalet Nott Potter, Miss Nancy Potter, Mrs. Beverly Chew Duer, Miss Sophie B. Duer, Mrs. Theodore H. Price, Miss Harriet Price, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston L. Redmond, Miss Katherine E. Redmond, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Riker Jr., Miss Lavinia Riker, and Samuel Riker III.

Speaking of European sojourns, an interesting ceremony, familiar to many of the social leaders here, took place in London a few days ago when four New York debutantes were presented at the third court of the season at Buckingham palace. They were Miss Florence Clarke, Miss Mary M. Breckenridge, Miss Thalia Millett, and Miss Alice Preston, all popular members of the younger set. Others who shared in presentation honors at the same time were Miss Catherine Crerar of Chicago, Miss Josephine Grant of San Francisco, and Mrs. Robert McAtee of Baltimore.

ART AND ARTISTS

Summer Shows Run Gamut of Modernism

By Eleanor Jewett.



"Portrait of Miss Bluford Richardson," by Glen Mitchell, in Mr. Mitchell's current one man show in the east wing galleries at the Art institute. Mr. Mitchell is a young Chicago painter who has moved to New York and there received, this spring, the famous Guggenheim prize which will enable him to carry on his studies abroad, paying particular attention to work he contemplates in religious subjects in Palestine.

THE summer exhibitions opened last Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute and there an unusual variety of manner and method in painting is shown. The one man shows, of which there are several, illustrate aptly the differences in the personal equation which make human nature the fascinating study it is. From the heavy, labored richness of color that characterizes the paintings of William S. Schwartz to the light, appallingly light, green and yellow tinged portraits of Frances Crammer Greeman, the gamut of contemporary styles in modernism is run.

The first large gallery in the east wing is devoted to a loan collection of famous old masters, but, on a first visit, interest centers in the less famous young masters and that gallery is hurried through to discover the excitements and fascinations of the adjoining room where hang the paintings by Irving K. Manoir and Elmer E. Forsberg. Irving Manoir has been living in California, on the Pacific coast, for the last two years or so and the west and southwest atmosphere has played the same marvelous trick with him that it did with Martin Hennings. Taos has taught him, also. Except for the two decorative screens, bearing their tale of magnificent birds, the Irving Manoir of the Palette and Chisel club exhibits is no more. He has lost himself in a bigger personality and a wider field of accomplishment.

Birds, at one time, were the game in hand of Mr. Manoir. He had a good share of the feeling for them that carries Stark Davis at present to success in decorative painting. California has trained his brush more into the path of the landscape artist. The slender aspen and the drooping eucalyptus have captured his imagination and led him to play themes upon the melody they pipe.

Gypsy School of Painters.

The vagabondage of trees is a gypsy song. Corot, Rousseau, Diaz—there were many of the old masters who surrendered to its music. Today there is a school of American painters in New Mexico who listen to the wind that ruffles the leaves; who catch the soft sigh of the falling leaf; who wait eagerly for the first tiny hint of green in the new spring bud. Manoir is falling heir to this school.

Corot and Diaz and those others chastened their trees by introducing dancing nymphs or women bathing in a deep brown pool, or a flat boat that lay like a wounded bird on the river's breast. Today, Hennings, and Ufer, and Henderson and Higgins reduce the forest mysteries by bringing upon the scene white robed Indians on whiter horses, or Mexicans, or sure footed, head burdened women of dusky skin. Chiefly, however, they take issue with the Indian chiefs and picture them, either in commonplace or ceremonial dress, riding single file through the aisles of those picturesque trees.

Manoir has taken his toll of Indian chiefs, too. You will find his braves mounted on white steeds patrolling the silences of the forest. The largest canvas, perhaps the most beautiful, is the "Fairy Tale Land of New Mexico." Two little forest glades, in which the trail of yellow is like a precious band of metal, are found in "Aspen Trail" and "Trout's Paradise."

"Taos in Winter" is a study in blue and white that is rather soothing and most pleasing. The "Adobe and Snow" is owned by the Commission for the Encouragement of Local Art in Chicago and is a solitary canvas, lonely and a little forbidding. The "Gypsy" is a delightful study of a girl's head. A twist of poetry is in her hair and eyes, and the scarf that binds her head is a flag to delicious liberty, where sun kissed days and starry nights make the long road short.

Art Minus Modernism.

In the same gallery are hung the paintings by Elmer E. Forsberg. This is a distinctive exhibit and a fine one. Mr. Rorsberg has been for many years a leading instructor in the Art institute art school. Recently he has returned from a year's visit to Europe, where in Finland, his native country, he finished a great many paintings. A group of these foreign landscapes is included in the exhibited canvases.

Possibly the distinguishing feature of these pictures is the absolute honesty of the work, the sincerity of the man who painted them. You do not find a perverted cubism, or modernism, or futurism intruding between you and the spirit of the artist. There are no puzzles to be read nor riddles to be solved. After a fashion the paintings remind one of the clear, solid work of a near neighbor, the head of the Saugatuck summer school of painting, across the lake, Frederick F. Fursman. His one man show last summer at the Art institute was one of the pleasant events of those hot weeks.

Meanwhile, to return to Mr. Forsberg, the paintings are simple and carry weight through their simplicity. "The Unfinished Boat" and "The Cold Plunge" are two that make a strong appeal because of the direct approach of his subject by the painter. The last is a view of houses backing up on a stretch of dark water. A hint of Venice or Holland sucks in the flow of river that forms the plunge. Was there ever a canvas of houses near the water that did not suggest at once those two canal-cut places to us? Venice and Holland here are but a dim thought; the icy bath of a Finnish fiord is more near the mark.

Then there are several figure paintings. "Maja" is an attractive girl in the gay costume of the Finnish peasant. "Margaretha" is a well-grown child of eight. "Maja Stina" is an old peasant woman, stooped and withered, sitting alone in her humble cottage. There is a strong portrait of a man, presumably a fisherman, that more than any of the others bring sharply to mind the exhibit of Mr. Fursman last summer.

A review of the other ninety and nine, to exaggerate a little, exhibits must wait for another week. The summer is longer than this column. It will be rather amusing to hurry the weeks along with a "continued in our next" art discussion.

News of Vacationers.

While many of the regular instructors in the school of the Art institute will remain during the summer to teach in the summer term, others have arranged to spend the next few weeks not quite so near the shores of Lake Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. George Oberteuffer are at Salsmouth, Massachusetts. Both Mr. and Mrs. Oberteuffer are artists of consequence in our Chicago colony, and her work in particular is always delightful, she having remembered the wistful charm inherent to French blues and grays and being dreamer enough to transfer it unhurt to mere everyday canvas.

A great many of the instructors are abroad. Among them are Ethel Coe, Helen Gardner, Catherine Heller, Mary Hipple, William Owen Jr., and J. Allen St. John.

Miss Salcia Bahnc has taken a studio for the summer in Greenwich Village; Miss Grace Conrad will study at the University of Chicago; Miss Louise Perrett is going to Connecticut; Miss Ruth Hutchins will teach at the Berkshire Summer school; Miss Jessie Lacey will paint in California and Miss Laura Van Pappelendam will tour the country about Santa Fé and the canyon country of New Mexico.

Art Notes.

Last Sunday the Polish Arts club held its monthly gathering at Ravinia park. The club welcomes into its membership persons of Polish ancestry interested in any of the arts and also any one interested particularly in the art, music or literature of Poland. Dr. M. J. Kostrzewski, 1152 Milwaukee avenue, is chairman of the membership committee.

Next Tuesday morning the dedication of the monument to Father Marquette, sculptured by Hermon A. McNeill, will take place. The monument is to be placed at Marshall boulevard and Twenty-fourth street.

The Children's Museum, on the main floor of the Art institute, will be rearranged for the summer with the objects especially provided for the room. These have been put away during the past weeks while special exhibits of children's work from the Art institute school have been in the room.

The Beverly Hills Woman's club is arranging its schedule for a study of the collections in the Art institute. A leader will be chosen who is familiar with the museum and its treasures, and a course consisting of twelve lectures will be given on "Appreciation of the Permanent Collections of the Art Institute."

In the Print galleries of the institute are to be found etchings by Anders Zorn, the famous Swedish artist. The prints have been selected from the extensive collection of Zorn etchings given to the Art institute in 1914 by Wallace L. DeWolf.

Added Beauty in an Hour

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I use a hair dressing which great experts made especially for me. It keeps my hair curly, gives it a sheen. I never go to a hairdresser, never have a Marcel wave. Yet everyone who sees me on the stage or off marvels at my curly, glowing hair.

Now I have placed this dressing at every woman's call. All toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c My guarantee comes with each bottle. If it doesn't delight you, doesn't double the beauty of your hair at once, ask for your money back.

Go try it now. It is one of the best helps I ever found for women, especially for those with bobbed hair.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Dr. Tindley Speaks at DesPlaines Today

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

THE Des Plaines camp meeting of the Methodist Episcopal church near Des Plaines, Ill., which began last Friday evening will have one of its two most important days today. Services will be practically continuous, beginning at 9:30 a. m. Dr. King D. Beach, pastor elect of St. James' church, Chicago, will preach at 10:30, and at 2:30 and 7 p. m. Dr. Charles A. Tindley, Philadelphia, will be the preacher. Dr. Tindley is pastor of what is said to be the largest colored church in the denomination, and is said to be a pulpiteer of surpassing excellence.

Tomorrow will be preachers' day at the camp. A complimentary luncheon will be given all pastors of Rock River conference by Raymond G. Kimbell, president of the camp meeting board of trustees. The annual meeting of the association will be held at 1:30. The three Chicago districts will each have a day. Tuesday, Chicago Northern; Wednesday, Chicago Western; Thursday, Chicago Southern district.

Friday will be women's day and Saturday laymen's day. Dr. Merton S. Rice, Detroit, will speak Thursday and Friday evenings and Dr. C. Claud Travis Tuesday evening. On Saturday Bishop Fred B. Fisher, Calcutta, India, will speak at 3:15 p. m. and Bishop Charles E. Locke at 8 p. m.

On next Sunday, the closing day of the camp meeting, Bishop Locke will preach at 10:30 a. m., Bishop Fisher at 3 p. m. and Bishop E. H. Hughes of the Chicago area at 7 p. m. Several church choirs will sing and Prof. Earl Harper, author, and leader of the music at the Methodist general conference at Springfield, Mass., will be director of music. He will also lecture on the general subject of music and worship.

Arrangements are made for the parking of motors and a special railroad schedule on the Chicago Northwestern railroad, Wisconsin division. The Rev. H. Clifford Northcott, pastor of the Euclid Avenue church, Oak Park, is general chairman of the program. In separate buildings the Swedish and Norwegian-Danish Methodists will conduct services throughout the week.

Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Wedderspoon will be tendered a farewell reception next Wednesday evening by members and friends of St. James' Methodist Episcopal church, of which Dr. Wedderspoon has been pastor for nearly ten years. On Oct. 1 he will take up his new work as pastor of the Bryan Memorial Methodist Episcopal church at Cocoanut Grove, Miami, Fla. Next Sunday will be his last in the pulpit of St. James' church.

The novena of St. Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin Mary, will begin in many Catholic churches today and will end on the feast day of St. Anne, July 26.

THE REV. ALFRED NEWBERY.

The Rev. Alfred Newbery, assistant rector of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Blackstone avenue, who will have entire charge of the church during the six months' absence of the rector, Dr. John Henry Hopkins, has had an unusual career in the foreign and home field. He was for five years a missionary in China. In 1919 he returned to America to assist in the nation-wide campaign in behalf of the benevolent budget of the church. He then had charge of the distribution of the national Episcopal publication, "The Church at Work."

Later he was given charge of the national speakers' bureau, and also made a survey of the field department of the church. His last appointment before coming to Chicago was that of assistant secretary of the national department of social service.

The Rev. Mr. Newbery is a graduate of Amherst college, author of the national study book of the church last year, "The World and I" and has contributed many articles to the various church periodicals. The Church of the Redeemer has recently dedicated a $75,000 parish house and is equipped for full time social and devotional service.

Frank Wood, for 30 years teacher of the Wesleyan Bible class of the Western Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, and Mrs. Wood will be present today at 3 o'clock at the Bible class session. Mr. Wood will give his experiences on a western trip which he and Mrs. Wood have just completed as a gift from the class.

The Rev. William A. Simms, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, 4427 Drexel boulevard, sails this week for two months in Europe, where he will visit old cathedrals, particularly those of England and France.

Mrs. Kathleen M. Lord of Lake Forest has donated a set of tower chimes to the Episcopal church of the Holy Comforter, in memory of her late husband, Russell Lord. They will be installed in the new tower and dedicated at Christmas services.

The Rev. W. E. Biederwolf of Monticello, Ind., who has just been chosen chairman of the Winona extension and endowment committee, is at Winona Lake for the opening of the school of theology. Dr. Biederwolf and his committee expect to raise two million dollars.

The Rev. J. J. Martin, who saw active service overseas as a chaplain during the world war, and who celebrated his silver sacerdotal anniversary a few years ago, has been appointed to the pastorate of St. Patrick's church at La Salle, Ill., effective Aug. 1. La Salle is the birthplace of Father Martin, who was named president of De Paul university of Chicago in 1903, and in 1910 was elected president of St. Vincent's college at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

A committee of episcopal clergy has arranged for regular Sunday morning holy communion services and a series of concerts for the benefit of the boys at Camp Roosevelt, Fort Sheridan. The Rev. Herbert W. Prince of Lake Forest will be in charge, with the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, Winnetka, and the Rev. George S. Keller, Highland Park.

Cardinal Mundelein has appointed the Rev. Joseph Morrison to succeed the Rev. J. K. Fielding as pastor of St. Justin's church, 71st and Wood streets. Father Morrison was ordained in 1911, served as assistant pastor of St. Jarlath, Nativity and Holy Angels' churches, was made assistant director of the archdiocesan Union of the Holy Name society in 1916, and was in charge of the Catholic Big Brother movement for three years.

The thirty-fourth annual Old Folks Home festival will be celebrated at Arlington Heights today by the Missouri Synod Lutherans. A German service will be held at 11 o'clock, and an English service at 2:30. Speakers will be the Rev. W. Gahl and the Rev. O. Fedder, both of Chicago.

◆

The Rev. Robert Freeman, D. D., pastor of the Pasadena, Cal., Presbyterian church, will preach today at 11 o'clock at Mandel hall, University of Chicago.

Dr. L. K. Williams, pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, 31st street and South Park avenue, which has a membership of 11,500, is celebrating the tenth anniversary of his pastorate. On the evening when the church mortgage was burned he was presented with a gift of $1,000, and Mrs. Williams was given a damond ring. Dr. Williams has been a national leader among colored Baptists, having been for the last four years president of the National Baptist convention.

Frank Strouse, who will speak this evening at 8 o'clock at the Epworth Methodist Episcopal church, Kenmore and Berwyn avenues, on the subject, "The Human Side of a Great Industry," is manager of the welfare department of the Pennsylvania railroad system.

On Sunday, July 4, Dr. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Chicago, spoke three times at the Winona assembly, Winona Lake, Ind. The assembly, followed by the interdenominational and international Bible conference, will continue the rest of July and through August.

Beginning next Sunday and continuing Aug. 1 and 8 the Rev. Edward Shillito, author of many books, contributor to the London Times and other publications, and editor of the volume "Life and Work," giving an account of the Stockholm conference in August, 1925, on the subject, will speak in the Kenwood church, 4600 Greenwood avenue, at 11 o'clock. For the four Sundays following the speaker will be the Rev. Theodore G. Soares, D. D. The pastor, Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, will leave this week for his vacation. He will preach today on "Christ's Summons to Rest."

It has been decided by representatives of the various Congregational associations of Illinois to institute again an every church visiting program for next fall beginning Sept. 26 and continuing to Dec. 1. Every church in the state will be visited and the work Congregationalists are expected to do the coming year will be presented.

◆

John Halk, violinist of the St. Louis symphony orchestra, will play "Romance," by Wieniawski; "Aria," by Tenaglia, and other selections at the New England Congregational church, North Dearborn avenue and Delaware place, this evening at 8 o'clock.

Immanuel Baptist church has inaugurated a health project in connection with its summer vacation school. With the coöperation of the department of health, a clinic is being conducted in which fifty-two children have already been examined. Of that number several cases of defective vision, enlarged tonsils, defective teeth and curvature of the spine have been discovered by Dr. Roy Bernard, and reported to the parents. Lantern slides, charts, pictures and stories are employed by a department of health nurse in emphasizing the building of health habits in the children.

Old St. John's, 18th and Clark streets, begins this afternoon at 3 o'clock a nine day novena in honor of St. Anne, conducted by the Rev. C. M. Theunte, O. P., Dominican lecturer. Services will be held each afternoon at 3 and each evening at 8 o'clock until July 26, the feast of St. Anne.

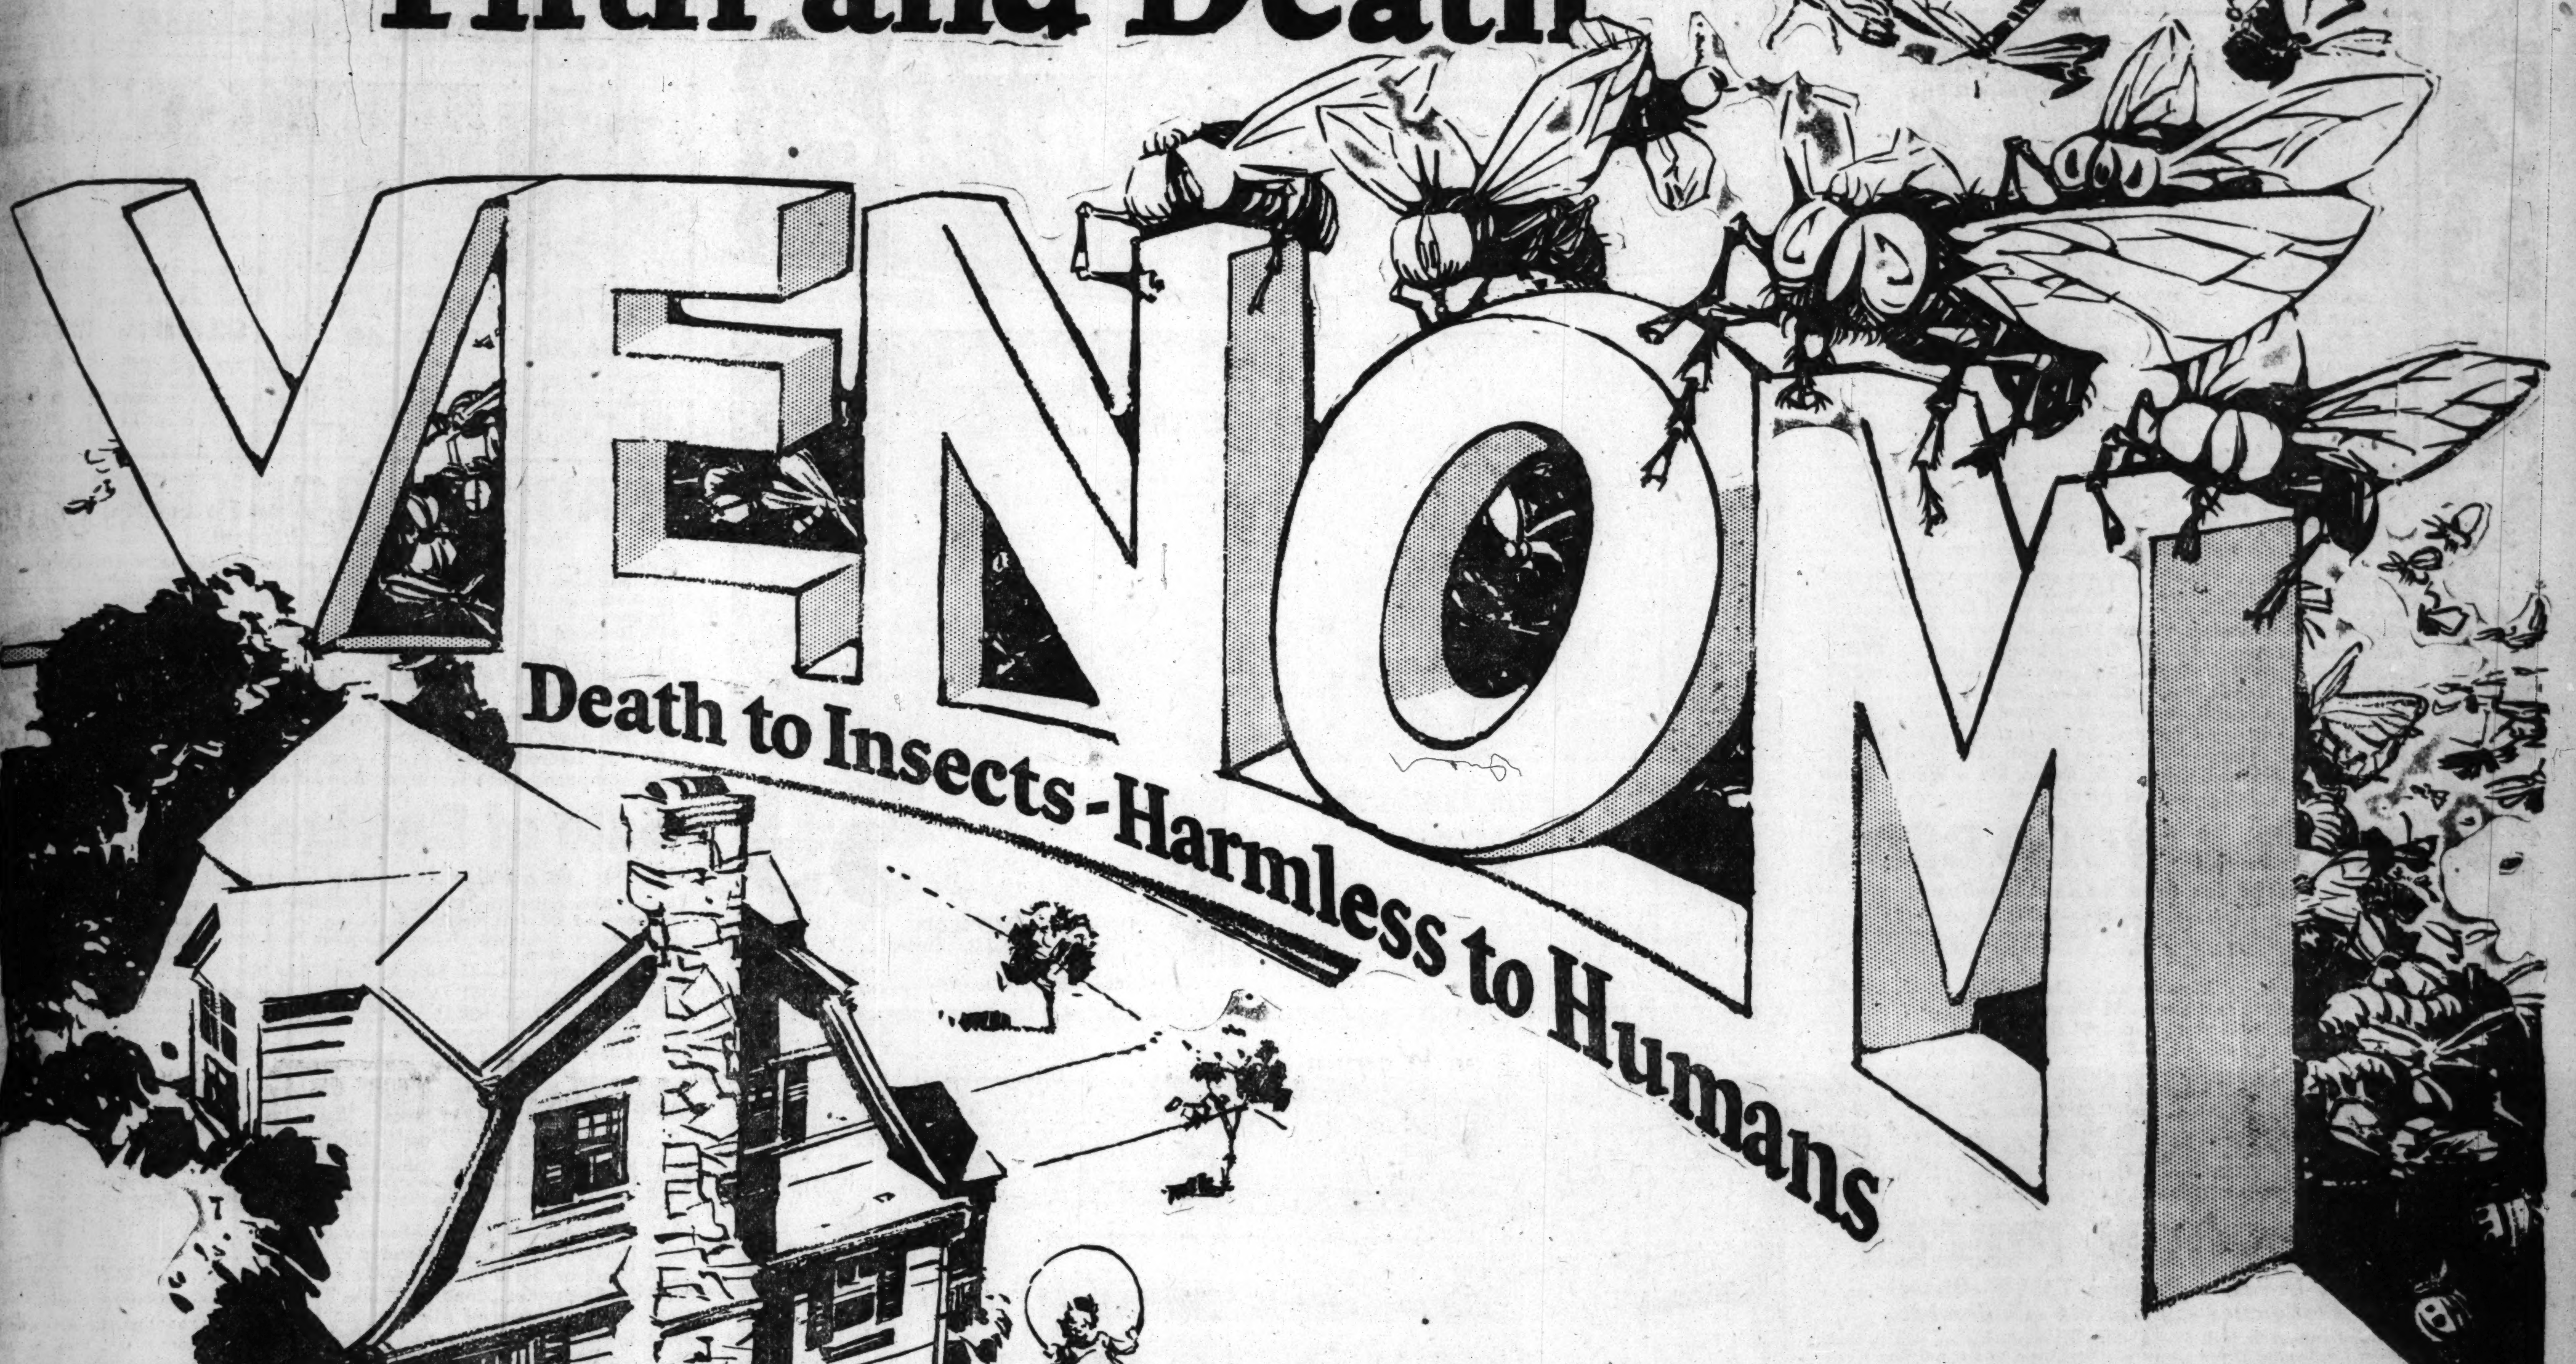
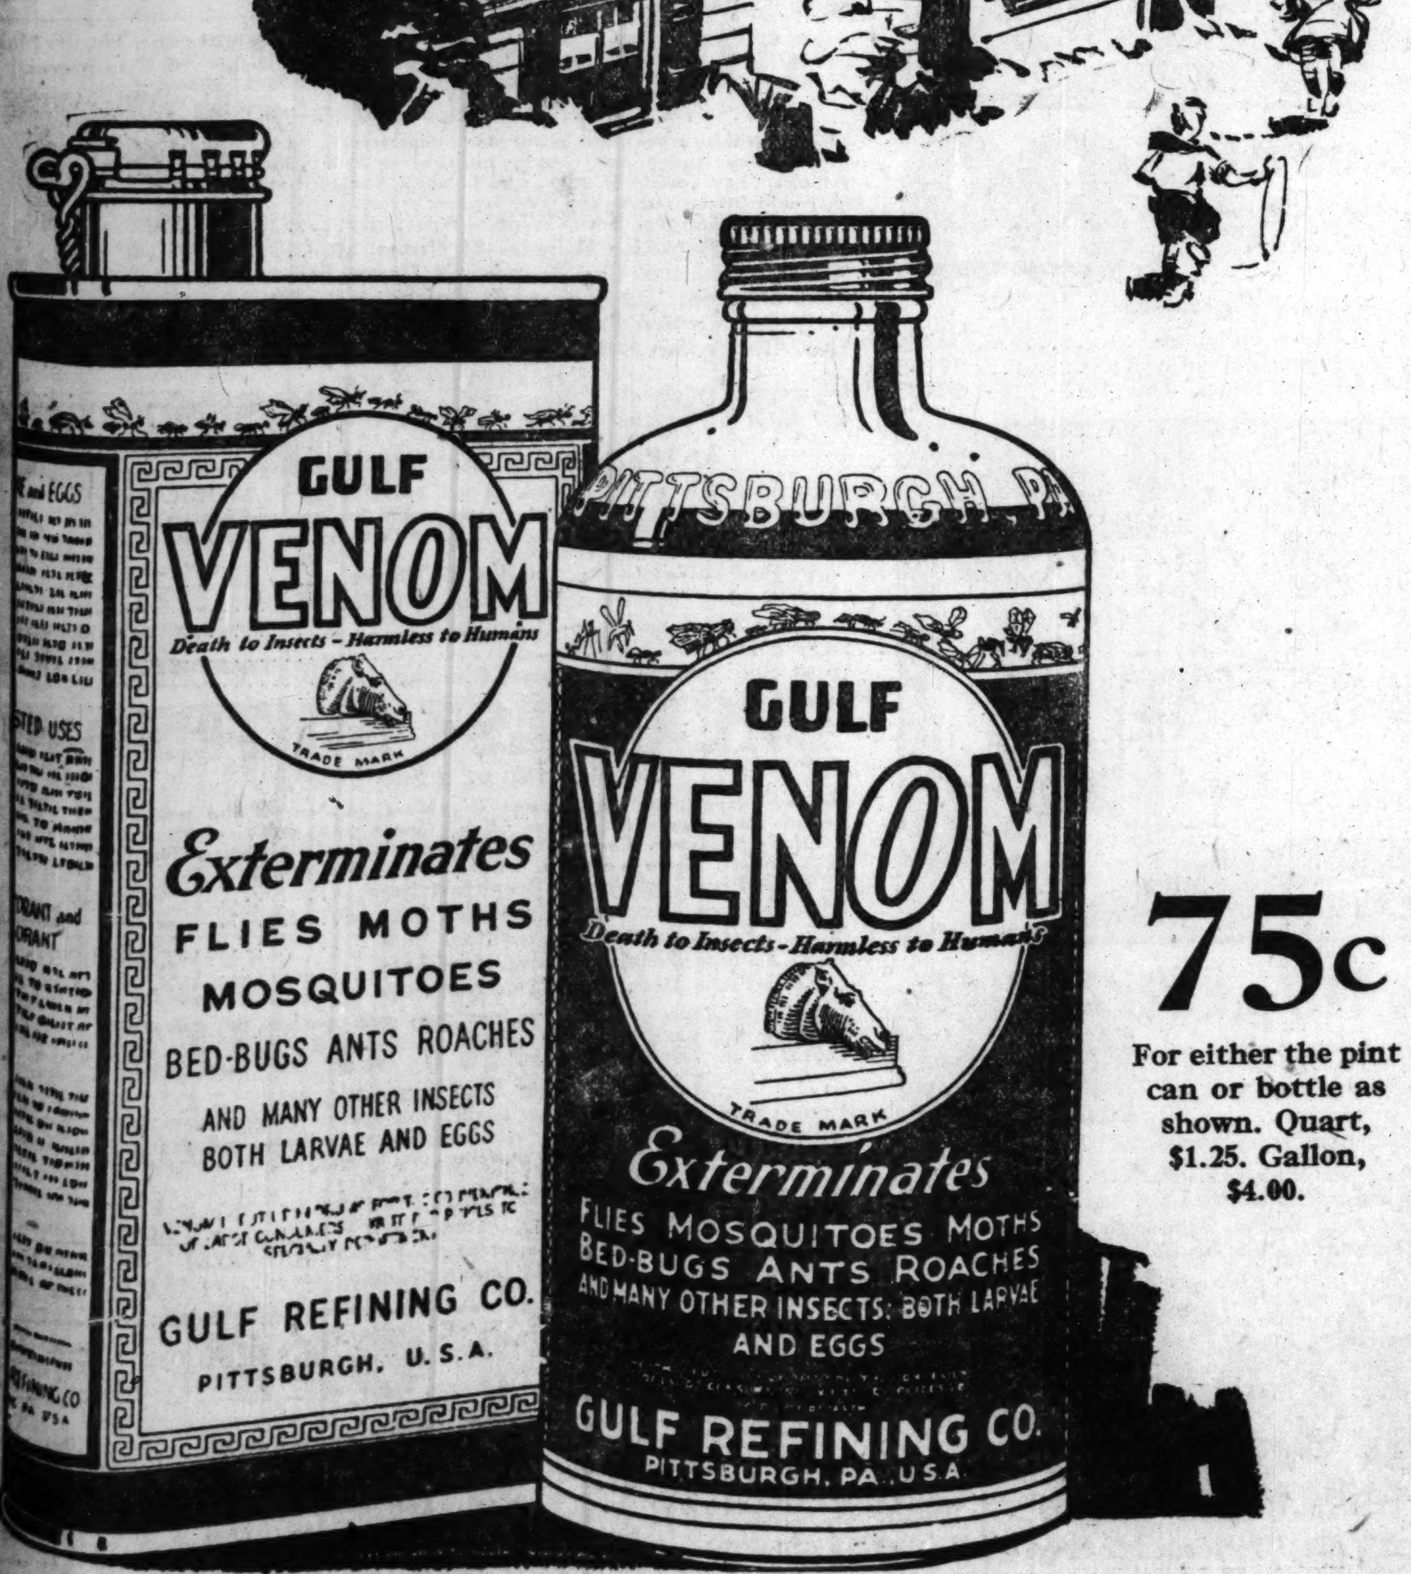
Protect Your Home from this Army of Flies Carrying Diseases, Filth and Death



VENOM
Death to Insects-Harmless to Humans



75c

For either the pint can or bottle as shown. Quart,
$1.25. Gallon,
$4.00.

If there is a fly in your home you are taking Death-Chances

Flies are murderers. They live and breed in dirt, garbage, sewage. And bring that distant filth to your home—to your very eating-table. Along with this filth flies bring the deadly germs of typhoid, of diphtheria, of tuberculosis. Kill every fly! By Venom-izing every day you can be rid of flies and all insects.

VENOM-ize every day

Venom is the most powerful insecticide known and yet it is harmless to children and home pets. It exterminates flies, mosquitoes, moths, ants, roaches, their eggs and larvae immediately. A room that has been recently Venom-ized will keep insects away, therefore, it is imperative to Venom-ize every day. Start your campaign against flies and mosquitoes today. Two flies at the beginning of the season can have 5,598,720,000,000 descendants by September. The cost is only a penny a day but it may mean saving a life.

Go to your grocer, druggist or hardware store for a pint bottle or can of Venom and a handy spray. Use it every day. There is no disagreeable odor. It does not spot or stain.

A. A. LEWIS REALTY ASSOCIATION.

A $10,000,000 ORGANIZATION IN LESS THAN TWO YEARS.

WHY?

BECAUSE:

1. We have developed a large, thoroughly satisfied clientele.

2. All our properties are located in the immediate vicinity of rapid transportation.

3. All our properties are surrounded by vast improvements now going in on a large scale:

4. Sewer mains in the vicinity of our property are large enough for a man to walk through.

5. Our properties are best located—priced lowest—and easiest to sell.

6. We are the livest organization in Chicago.

7. We give our salespeople every possible co-operation.

THESE ARE THE REASONS WHY we are successful; these are the reasons why YOU, too, can be successful with us. We can still use a few more salesmen without experience. Apply at our main office.

A. A. LEWIS
REALTY ASSOCIATION,
77 W. Washington-st.,
Entrance Rm. 809,

This, an old established quality firm, which, having conducted a conservative, successful business for more than 20 years, realizes that the future progressive conduct of its business must be shared with and departmentized by a few younger men to make it a compact, quality organization of the future.

These quality men shall become a part of and enter on the ground floor of this our greatest enterprise.

THESE MEN WILL RECOGNIZE THAT:
"ANYTHING BOUGHT RIGHT IS HALF SOLD."

THREE YEARS AGO,

after rigid investigation, we bought extensive properties among the beautiful hills in the suburb of Itasca.

SINCE THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE ITASCA COUNTRY CLUB, which is right on our property and two blocks from the station, five other country clubs have chosen this district and surroundings; namely: the Brookwood and Elmhurst with the Medinah, Nordic, and Glendale two miles West.

AFTER TWO YEARS of building and developing this property and putting in all improvements, we are now ready to sell our parcels.

A BIG ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

will be started soon. We not only have the best located property in Itasca but, because it will be sold at prices based on of three years ago, we know the public will be glad to respond to our announcements. Hundreds of people have been watching our development work and will want to buy as soon as the property is offered for sale.

TRANSPORTATION IS

unusually good, as our property is located in the center of beautiful Itasca.

WITH EXPRESS SERVICE to the loop in 38 minutes. One can drive to the Loop over fine concrete highways in 45 minutes, one of which passes right through Itasca.

YOU MUST SEE ITASCA

to fully appreciate the beauty and charm of our property, all of which is among wonder hills and valleys.

FIVE MASTER SALESMEN.

Have an opportunity at this time with our organization which seldom presents itself.

These men will be the initial members of our sales force—and will work on direct leads only—calling on the most prominent men and women in the social, legal, financial, professional and business circles of Chicago.

Results from preliminary sales efforts by the executive members of this organization prove that our project should meet with a ready response in volume of sales.

An average of $1,000 monthly in earnings during the coming year is a conservative estimate of results for men who have already proved themselves to be high grade salesmen.

If you are ambitious, and are a consistent worker who has been accustomed to meeting big people, we would like to meet you. Our project merits the best salesmen possible to find. For interview, address C A 308, Tribune.

to work on commission basis who can prove their responsibility and whose records will withstand thorough investigation are wanted to sell as a side line or exclusively a complete line of ladies', men's and children's knit and athletic underwear, including a complete line of rayon lingerie and bloomers.

This merchandise is the product of seven large eastern mills, capitalized at $1,500,000, who have been heretofore selling to only the larger retail trade.

We are now going to expand to the smaller trade in the midwestern states and will conduct our business from a Chicago stock. We have an opening for several men whose records will show real sales ability.

Knowledge and experience is of course desirable, but not absolutely essential, providing ability to sell and willingness to work are two of your qualifications.

This merchandise is priced to show a distinct saving to the smaller trade and is backed up with a strong organization that can take care of the business so as to assure a permanent development.

This is a real opportunity for the right kind of men to make a connection that offers a future with us, the fastest growing organization in the knit goods industry.

Address B A 311, Tribune.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

WANTED—AMBITIOUS INEXPERIENCED MEN.

One hesitates to enter a new calling because he lacks a thorough knowledge of that business. Naturally where years of study and training are required such a step would be unwarranted and probably disastrous.

Our business, however, is different. YOU DON'T NEED ANY INITIAL EXPERIENCE. Practically all of our sales persons came to us without experience. THEY ARE MAKING MONEY; YOU CAN DO AS WELL. We don't say that you can make a fortune at once, but we can assure you that if you are ambitious, willing to work, and a hustler you can easily double or treble your regular income.

We are selling choicely located, low priced property in the newly built-up gold coast district of Hammond; a safe, sound, and profitable investment with a minimum of sales resistance.

Come in and talk it over with me. I can convince you that this is an extraordinary opportunity. Your success depends entirely upon yourself.

$35 WEEKLY
TO MEN WHO WANT TO LEARN TO SELL
REAL ESTATE.

Real estate selling is on a mighty firm basis. For the men willing to work, all the chance has been taken out of this business and real estate offers great opportunities for making good in a big way.

In other lines most men work on definite salaries with little opportunity of increase. Our men work on commission with a $35 weekly drawing account. Many of them earn over $100 per week.

Our business is good. We need more salesmen to work on new properties. We are willing to teach these men how to sell real estate and place them on a drawing account while learning. This is a real opportunity for earnest workers in any line. Sales experience is not necessary. Call between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., Monday.

$40 SUITS FOR $23.50!

Think of being able to offer a $40 suit made of the finest quality of pure virgin wool; fit, fabric and fashion guaranteed, at the powerfully attractive price of $23.50? Can you sell such values? You can if the experience of 2,000 other salesmen means anything. And you don't have to know anything about selling clothing. We'll take you, train and equip you to make a success of this work if you are honest, ambitious and willing to work. If you are, write us. You'll hear from us promptly with the full facts. Address Dept. 992, WILLIAM C. BARTLETT, INC., 850 W. Adams, Chicago.

WANTED—FEMALE HELP.

Saleswomen.

WANTED—AMBITIOUS INEXPERIENCED WOMEN.
One hesitates to enter a new calling because he lacks a thorough knowledge of that business. Naturally where years of study and training are required such a step would be unwarranted and probably disastrous.
Our business, however, is different. YOU DON'T NEED ANY INITIAL EXPERIENCE. Practically all of our sales persons came to us without experience. THEY ARE MAKING MONEY; YOU CAN DO AS WELL. We don't say that you can make a fortune at once, but we can assure you that if you are ambitious, willing to work, and a hustler you can easily double or treble your regular income.
We are selling choicely located, low priced property in the newly built-up gold coast district of Hammond; a safe, sound, and profitable investment with a minimum of sales resistance.
Come in and talk it over with me. I can convince you that this is an extraordinary opportunity. Your success depends entirely upon yourself.

ARE YOU GOING TO MOVE?
ARE YOU GOING TO BUY?

These are the burning questions confronting thousands of Chicagoans at this season of the year. The solution is:

Co-operative Ownership

WE ARE OFFERING FOR IMMEDIATE POSSESSION THE FOLLOWING APTS.:

6721-23 MERRILL-AV.—A twelve apartment building with nine apts. occupied—three for sale strictly on the co-operative plan. They consist of 6 rooms each with 2 tile baths, separate shower rooms, canvased walls, equipped with everything that money or taste will provide. These apts. are the greatest bargain in Chicago today offered on the co-operative plan. Price including garage, $17,600; equity $9,100; cash $4,100.

6743 MERRILL-AV.—A beautiful 6 room apt., with 3 baths, third floor. This is located in a nine apt. bldg., one year old and has a separate three apt. entrance. A splendid buy with eight established, high class owners; price, including garage, $18,750; equity, $10,250; cash required, $4,750.

2217 E. 68TH-ST.—A 6 room apt., all outside rooms, 3 baths, private shower; wonderful location in building two years old; as owner is leaving city, can be purchased at a bargain; price $18,500 including garage; equity, $8,000; cash required, $4,000.

6804 CRANDON-AV.—A five room apt. on the first floor, 2 tile baths, extra shower room, breakfast room and sleeping porch; party leaving city; price $15,500; equity, $6,250; cash required, $3,250. For further information see or address

Essex Co-operative Apts.

Others have stopped paying high rents for neighborhood and transportation.

WHY PAY HIGH RENT

When a less amount monthly will soon build up an equity in your own home.

In the Essex Co-Op. Apts. we have 4 and 5 room apts., with equities ranging from $3,900 to $5,500. Terms of equity monthly assessements as low as $47.85, including interest on mortgage.

This building is situated at the n. e. corner of 76th-st. and Essex-av., in a real apt. home district that carries an air of cheerfulness and brightness par excellence, where a uniformity of sky line and street line of buildings is maintained. Right at hand to the electrified I. C. and surface lines, the Lake, and just a few minutes' walk to Jackson Park.

The apts. are all that can be desired in an apt. home, having large, spacious rooms and closets, tile baths, canvased and paneled walls with brick trim finish and other ultra modern features.

Your inspection is invited. Representatives at building daily and Sunday.

Live in Streeterville

Elliot Stuart Lived the Hurried Life of a Financier

Elliot Stuart, in the speculative nineties, lived north of the river, just out of the tiresome clamor of commerce. He lingered over a tasty breakfast, then drove or, if he chose, walked leisurely to his office for a strenuous day of finance—and as leisurely returned.

Streeterville today is the home of those whose minutes mean dollars; its easily accessible location makes it most desirable.

180 East Delaware

Adds convenience of living to this convenience of location.

LOCATION—

In the heart of a most elite residential section, only one-half block east of Chicago's principal thoroughfare, 180 E. Delaware is within walking distance of the great metropolitan shopping, business and theater centers, select private schools, and renowned churches. In its immediate neighborhood are the Drake and Lake Shore Drive hotels, as well as the homes of Chicago's social leaders. The Casino Club is directly across the street.

BUILDING—

Its exclusive character, intrinsic beauty of design and execution, and convenience are the outstanding attributes of this new group of luxuriously conceived apartment homes. The building incorporates the ultimate in tested and approved appointments of unquestioned good taste. On the ground floor will be an exquisitely furnished lounge, an Old English tea room with excellent cuisine, and a commissary.

APARTMENTS—

They will be unfurnished — three, four and five rooms, convertible, if desired, into six and eight. The apartments are arranged to give infinite comfort and efficiency. The walls will be canvassed and paneled. Marble mantels and period design lighting fixtures will grace the living rooms. Crystal lighting fixtures, maids' call in the dining rooms. Chambers will have full length mirrors and large closets. In the bathrooms—colored tile wainscoting, showers, and shampoo sprays, Venetian mirrored medicine cabinet, linen closets. The kitchens will be equipped with mechanical refrigeration, all white cooking ranges, and enameled steel cabinets.

SERVICE—

Maid service will be optional. High speed elevators of micro precision, operated by efficient attendants, will whisk you in a few seconds to your floor. A vacuum heating system will regulate precisely the temperature and humidity throughout your apartment. Rental will include mechanical refrigeration, electric light, gas, laundries, and driers.

Prospective tenants, of course, are being chosen with discrimination.

180 East Delaware

offers the essentials of hotel service at a cost far lower than is possible in hotels. 3, 4 and 5 room apartments, convertible, if desired, into 6 or 8 rooms: $165 a month upwards.

The multiple advantages of location and facility afforded by these apartments have already given rise to a spirited demand for choice reservations. We counsel prompt action.

Personal representatives of the management are on the premises from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. to show you the features and a model apartment decorated and furnished by the French Shops, Incorporated, Chicago, under the personal supervision of Mr. Pierre J. Morel.

TWO-O-ONE EAST DELAWARE-PL.

3 TO 5 ROOMS

100% CO-OPERATIVE

Every city has an ideal residential neighborhood—exclusiveness of inhabitants, superior design, and convenience in buildings, seclusion and restfulness of character, proximity to the metropolitan life of the city determines this location.

STREETERVILLE

is the site of such criterions of taste as the Drake and Lake Shore Drive hotels, Casino club, and large apartment buildings. This section has never been available for home ownership except for those who could afford large initial outlay of money and continue high cost of maintenance. "201 East Delaware Place" now offers the opportunities and advantages of this community on an almost unbelievable basis of economical investment and low maintenance charges.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED DOLLAR

payment will secure for you an apartment with monthly charges of less than half of the normal rental. While not quite completed in every detail, this 17 story building of unusual design and decoration can be visited and a thorough appreciation of its home-like qualities understood by visiting

THE FURNISHED APARTMENT.

Each living room has a beamed ceiling, artistically decorated; textured walls and wrought iron fixtures, showing the influence of early Spanish and Italian styles, make these apartments individual. Each chamber has its own bath of varied colored tile with shower and finest of fixtures. Mechanical refrigeration, ventilation, gas, light are furnished to the tenants. Maid and valet services may be obtained and used at your convenience. Indeed, the ideal mode of living.

Today should give you the opportunity of visiting this neighborhood and inspecting "201 East Delaware Place." One block east of Michigan-blvd. and one block south of the Drake hotel. A representative at the building will be pleased to escort you and explain the details of our plan of purchase. Phone at the building, Superior 9183.

THE AQUITANIA
Unfurnished Apartments
ON THE LAKE SHORE
AT 5000 NORTH.

It is an undeniable fact that the apartment of your choice reflects your good judgment and taste.

A visit to this beautiful fifteen story building will convince you that the Aquitania Apartments offer you, not only a refined place to live, but a commodious apartment home that will contribute largely towards your physical comfort and mental contentment.

These remarkable apartments, ranging in size of from three to six rooms, have been planned and designed to give immeasurable pleasure, comfort and satisfaction to those refined people who make them their premanent homes.

Furthermore, the Aquitania is situated on the very shore of Lake Michigan at fifty Hundred North—an enviable and convenient location. But, more than that, it has the advantage of the cool and refreshing breezes which are constantly blowing off the lake.

WHY PAY RENT?
FOR LOVERS

of reasonably priced, beautiful co-operative apartment homes we have developed a building of four and five rooms, such as you would expect to find only along the Lake Shore-dr. at $5,000 to $6,000 more than our prices.

There are four and five rooms having large canvassed living rooms and big paneled dining rooms with Spanish bracket lights. One and two bedrooms, bright kitchens with built-in cupboards, large Universal gas ranges, and genuine porcelain enameled refrigerators.

A glistening white tile bathroom with showers, pedestal lavatory, built-in bathtubs. Excellent closet space; also cedar lined chest closets and other ultra-modern features.

The construction throughout the building, the halls, lobbies, etc., is the very best. Storage space and modern laundry facilities in the basement. The very latest Kewanee heating plant.

Can you imagine all this, in the best section of beautiful Rogers Park, two blocks from the lake, with cash payments as low as $1,000 and monthly assessments as low as $47.50?

We have representatives there all day to answer your questions, but they will not urge you to buy. The apartments are at 1522-26 Fargo-av., one block from the Jarvis-av. L station and the Sheridan-rd. busses.

We sell to discriminating people only and invite your thorough investigation.

New York.

FOR SALE—"GRANDVIEW," RECOGNIZED as "The World's Model Poultry Farm," an all year around gentleman's money making country estate, on beautiful Cayuga Lake, in the heart of the famous "Finger Lakes" region of New York. Possessed of every natural advantage, delightful climate, elevation, superb water view, abundant shade from majestic old forest trees, five acres in lawn within 100 feet of lake, 600 foot frontage on new concrete highway, good motor roads in every direction. Located within the village limits of Aurora, N. Y., home of Wells College, near Ithaca and Cornell University. Overnight rail service to New York, Philadelphia, and Washington. Convenient to Syracuse and Rochester; 30 minutes by motor to splendid country clubs and golf courses. Two good dwellings, substantial farm buildings, all wired and supplied with standard commercial current. Private water system. Fruits of all kinds, bearing English walnut grove. The Leghorn breeding stock, the most valuable collection in existence. Farm fully stocked and equipped and doing a highly profitable world-wide business, with no limit to its possibilities. To one having a hobby for fine poultry, or desiring a self-supporting country estate of real distinction, this offering presents a banner opportunity. The POULTRY PLANT is effectively screened from the residence section and highway by plantings of trees, vines and shrubs, and is neatness and order itself. All steel fences and gates, feed mixing machinery, equipped workshop, etc. The most famous example of its kind in America. No other spot in the country affords a more beautiful setting or outlook for a high class country estate. Ideal for hotel or inn. Will sell at a sacrifice to settle the estate and allow for concentration on property interests in the south. Send for illustrated booklets. [Brokers protected]. E. L. WYCKOFF, Aurora, N. Y.

LINCOLN

(Authorized Dealers.)

July Clearance Sale

Lincoln Sedan, current model. Driven very little and cannot be distinguished from a brand new car. Mechanically it is absolutely perfect and carries our regular Lincoln guarantee and service. The balloon tires are only slightly used and the equipment is very complete. Virtually a brand new car at a considerable saving in price. Price, $4,500.

1926 Cadillac Roadster, current model, 2 pass. with rumble seat in rear. Driven only a short time with the very best care and has the appearance of new. Original finish of ivory white, with light green wire wheels and khaki top boot. Mechanically perfect. Has 5 wire wheels, 5 balloon tires, bumpers, snubbers, 4 wheel brakes, etc. Price today, $2,850.

1926 Cadillac Phaeton, 5 pass. Current model Improved Cadillac. Driven so little that not the slightest wear is noticeable anywhere. Finished in Fawn gray with khaki top and trunk cover. It presents a very smart and attractive appearance. Balloon tires, 4 wheel brakes, trunk in rear, windshield wings, snubbers, spotlight, and other extras. Price today, $2,850.

PACKARD Straight 8 Sedan Limousine. This is the model 1-43. Very beautifully refinished in standard Packard deep blue and mechanically it is in the very finest condition. Has 5 practically new cord tires and disc wheels, 2 bumpers, 4 wheel brakes, spotlight, and all necessary equipment. $2,400.

Cadillac 63 DeLuxe Sedan, 7 pass. Refinished in Duco and not only has the appearance of new, but is 100% mechanically. Practically new tires, heater, bumpers, 4 wheel brakes, etc. Interior condition perfect. We have three of this model all in equally fine condition. Your choice, $2,250.

1926 Marmon Sedan. Driven only 1,850 miles and is so new and perfect in every detail that it cannot be distinguished from new. Finished in two-tone light blue. This model has the "one-shot" lubricating system, dual ignition, balloon tires, bumpers, etc. Over $1,000 can be saved at our price of $2,950.

Cadillac 61 Suburban Sedan, 7 pass. We have two of this model for you to select from, and both are in the very best condition. Excellent paint and mechanical shape. The tires are only slightly used and the equipment is very complete. The interior condition will pass the most critical inspection. Your choice, $1,250.

1925 Packard straight 8 coupe. All that can be said of this car is that you would have to buy a new one in order to duplicate it. To be sold for $2,975, 30 days' service and guarantee.

Cadillac 61 DeLuxe Sedan, 5 pass. One of the best values we have ever had to offer in a Cadillac. Duco finish and perfect mechanical shape. Tires show no wear. Interior condition is immaculate. Has all necessary extra equipment. A real value at $1,250.

STUTZ Sedan, 6 cyl., 1925. This smart, attractive appearing sport sedan has been driven but a short time and represents an unusual value in a low built, high powered, perfect running motor car. A1 mechanically. Has individual military style fenders, 6 slightly used balloon tires and wire wheels, trunk in rear, 2 bumpers, spotlight, motometer, snubbers, etc. Price only $1,400.

Cadillac 63 DeLuxe Coupe, 5 pass. To see this car is to realize and appreciate its unusually fine condition throughout. Mechanically it runs perfectly and the body and fenders are not bumped or marred. Has 4 wheel brakes, splendid cord tires, bumpers, snubbers, etc. This car should sell immediately at our price of $1,900.

Cadillac 63 Coupe. This is the 4 pass. Victoria model. This car performs like new and in appearance would be difficult to distinguish from a brand new car, just off the show floor. Has all standard equipment, including 4 wheel brakes, 5 good tires, bumpers, snubbers, and many additional extras. Price, $1,800.

1924 STEARNS-KNIGHT, 6 sport Sedan. For the lover of the Knight this is the car you've waited for. Painted a beautiful Robin's egg blue, paneled in beige. Has 5 balloon tires, bumper, fender irons, trunk, etc. Upholstery perfect. Motor absolutely silent. A real bargain at $1,475. 30 days free service.

Cadillac 61 Touring 7 pass. Original finish, good mechanically. A splendid vacation car. Has trunk rack in rear, 2 bumpers, spring covers, spotlight, etc. Price today $950.

1925 Reo Sport Sedan. 5 balloon tires, trunk in rear, front and rear bumpers, disc wheels, etc. Refinished like new. Runs like new. $1,100.

1925 Hudson Coach. Original finish excellent. Will please the most critical buyer mechanically. Has balloon tires, disc wheels, bumpers, and complete equipment. Price today $675.

STUDEBAKER

AGAIN SCORES IN GREATER VALUE GIVING

Each car sold under Studebaker's National Used Car Pledge, which allows the purchaser five days' free trial.

NASH 4 PASSENGER COUPE. Here is an ideal size car. It is a later series than one would expect for the low price of $585. It looks beautiful with its bluish green finish with red striping. The disc wheels add much to its appearance. The engine has gone through our shops and runs perfectly. There is not a worn place in the upholstery. The silky shades are perfect. There are many people who will be glad to pay $585 for this late Nash.

STUDEBAKER SPECIAL SIX 4 PASSENGER COUPE. Without a doubt one of the biggest bargains in our entire stock. The finish is deep green, ivory striping. The motor is 100%. The upholstery and general coachwork look brand new. A deposit of $200 was placed on this car one month ago. The buyer could not make the down payment, therefore we are advertising this late Special Six Coupe at $685. See it before you buy a car of any size.

OVERLAND 1926 MODEL SEDAN. Used only 4,401 miles and cannot be told from brand new in any respect. Here is a cozy little car in wonderful mechanical condition. The upholstery and carpets look brand new. There is not a scratch on the body or fenders. Ordinarily the price of this sedan would be over $600. Our price with its extra equipment is only $475. An unusual buy.

HUDSON COACH, driven only 8,515 miles and looks new in every respect. The finish is a light green. The upholstery and general coach work look brand new. The engine has been carefully corrected and runs splendidly. Equipment includes front and rear bumpers, motometer, automatic windshield wiper, rear vision mirror, extra tire, etc. The tires are only slightly used. This late Hudson has been reduced to $685.

JEWETT FIVE PASSENGER, TWO DOOR BROUGHAM. As far as actual usage is concerned, this car looks and runs like brand new. However, it has been used a few months and must be sold at the ridiculously low price of $685. There is not a mar or scratch on the body or fenders; not a worn place in the upholstery. The entire car looks bright and shiny and will be sold immediately at the low price of $685.

REO 1925 SEDAN. Any one desiring a new car will buy this sedan immediately. It is one of the latest series and cannot be told from a brand new automobile. The upholstery is clean, the engine is in perfect condition, and there is not a mar or blemish on the body or fenders. The balloon tires are only slightly used. Special at $1,045.

FRANKLIN

FRANKLIN SERIES 10 5 PASS. TOURING. Has new style motor, new top, new paint, new tires and many extras. Will give you 18 to 20 miles per gallon on gas; 20,000 miles and better on tires, with practically no mechanical expense. Easier riding than anything built. $1,050.

ESSEX 4 CYL. COACH. One of the last 4 cyl. production. Repainted; first class mechanically; bumpers, seat covers, auto. w. s. cleaner, motometer, all extras. Cars of this model in this condition sell rapidly, for this reason see it at once. $325.

BUICK "6" 1924 TOURING. Received by us with only a fraction of mileage cars of this age generally have had. Has winter sides. Paint, top and upholstery very fine; tires almost new. Mechanically could not be better. $650.

ESSEX 6 CYL. COACH. A late Essex in most excellent mechanical and coach condition. We doubt even if an expert could distinguish it from new. Has wood wheels, balloon tires, bumpers, etc. Impossible to duplicate at $525.

PIERCE-ARROW 7 PASS. TOURING CAR. Ideal for cross country touring or other heavy duty. Commercially it would pay for itself in a short time; would make an elegant company or official car. Newly painted, top and upholstery like brand new; 5 excellent tires. Modern in every respect, including 4 wheel brakes. Would cost you several hundreds of dollars more elsewhere. $550.

WILLYS-KNIGHT 1925 BROUGHAM 4 DOOR. After receiving low mileage, traded to us in new car condition. Mechanically it operates smoothly and quietly and should please the most exacting buyer. 2 tone finish, nickel trimmings, 5 excellent balloon tires, bumpers, motometer, other equipment. This particular car was delivered at a cost of better than $1,900. Our price $1,050.

Rolls-Royce OFFERINGS

MINERVA 5 PASS. SEDAN, 1924. This beautiful car, which was owned by a prominent resident of this city, was recently turned in on a new ROLLS-ROYCE. The distinctive custom-built body, a special Brooks-Ostruck, is finished in Ditzler Cream with black striping and has every appearance of brand new. The mechanical condition is perfect, and the interior and all other details show very little signs of use. It is equipped with every immaginable accessory. Your opportunity to own one of Belgium's foremost automobiles which cost new $14,000, for only $4,250.

ROLLS-ROYCE 5 PASS SEDAN, Tilbury Model. This sedan has had practically no mileage and cannot be distinguished from brand new in any way. It has not been reconditioned, but carries our regular three year guarantee. It is finished in Beige Brown with black trimming, and is completely equipped. Here is a practically new sedan, which will give you the same service and appearance as a new car, at a remarkable saving. Only $9,500.

CADILLAC 61-Z SEDAN, 1923. Mechanically this car is in perfect condition, and it has just returned from our trim shops where it was refinished in a very attractive color scheme. Interior and exterior details are like new, and it has exceptionally good tires. Fully equipped. We have priced this car exceptionally low for quick clearance. Only $1,200.

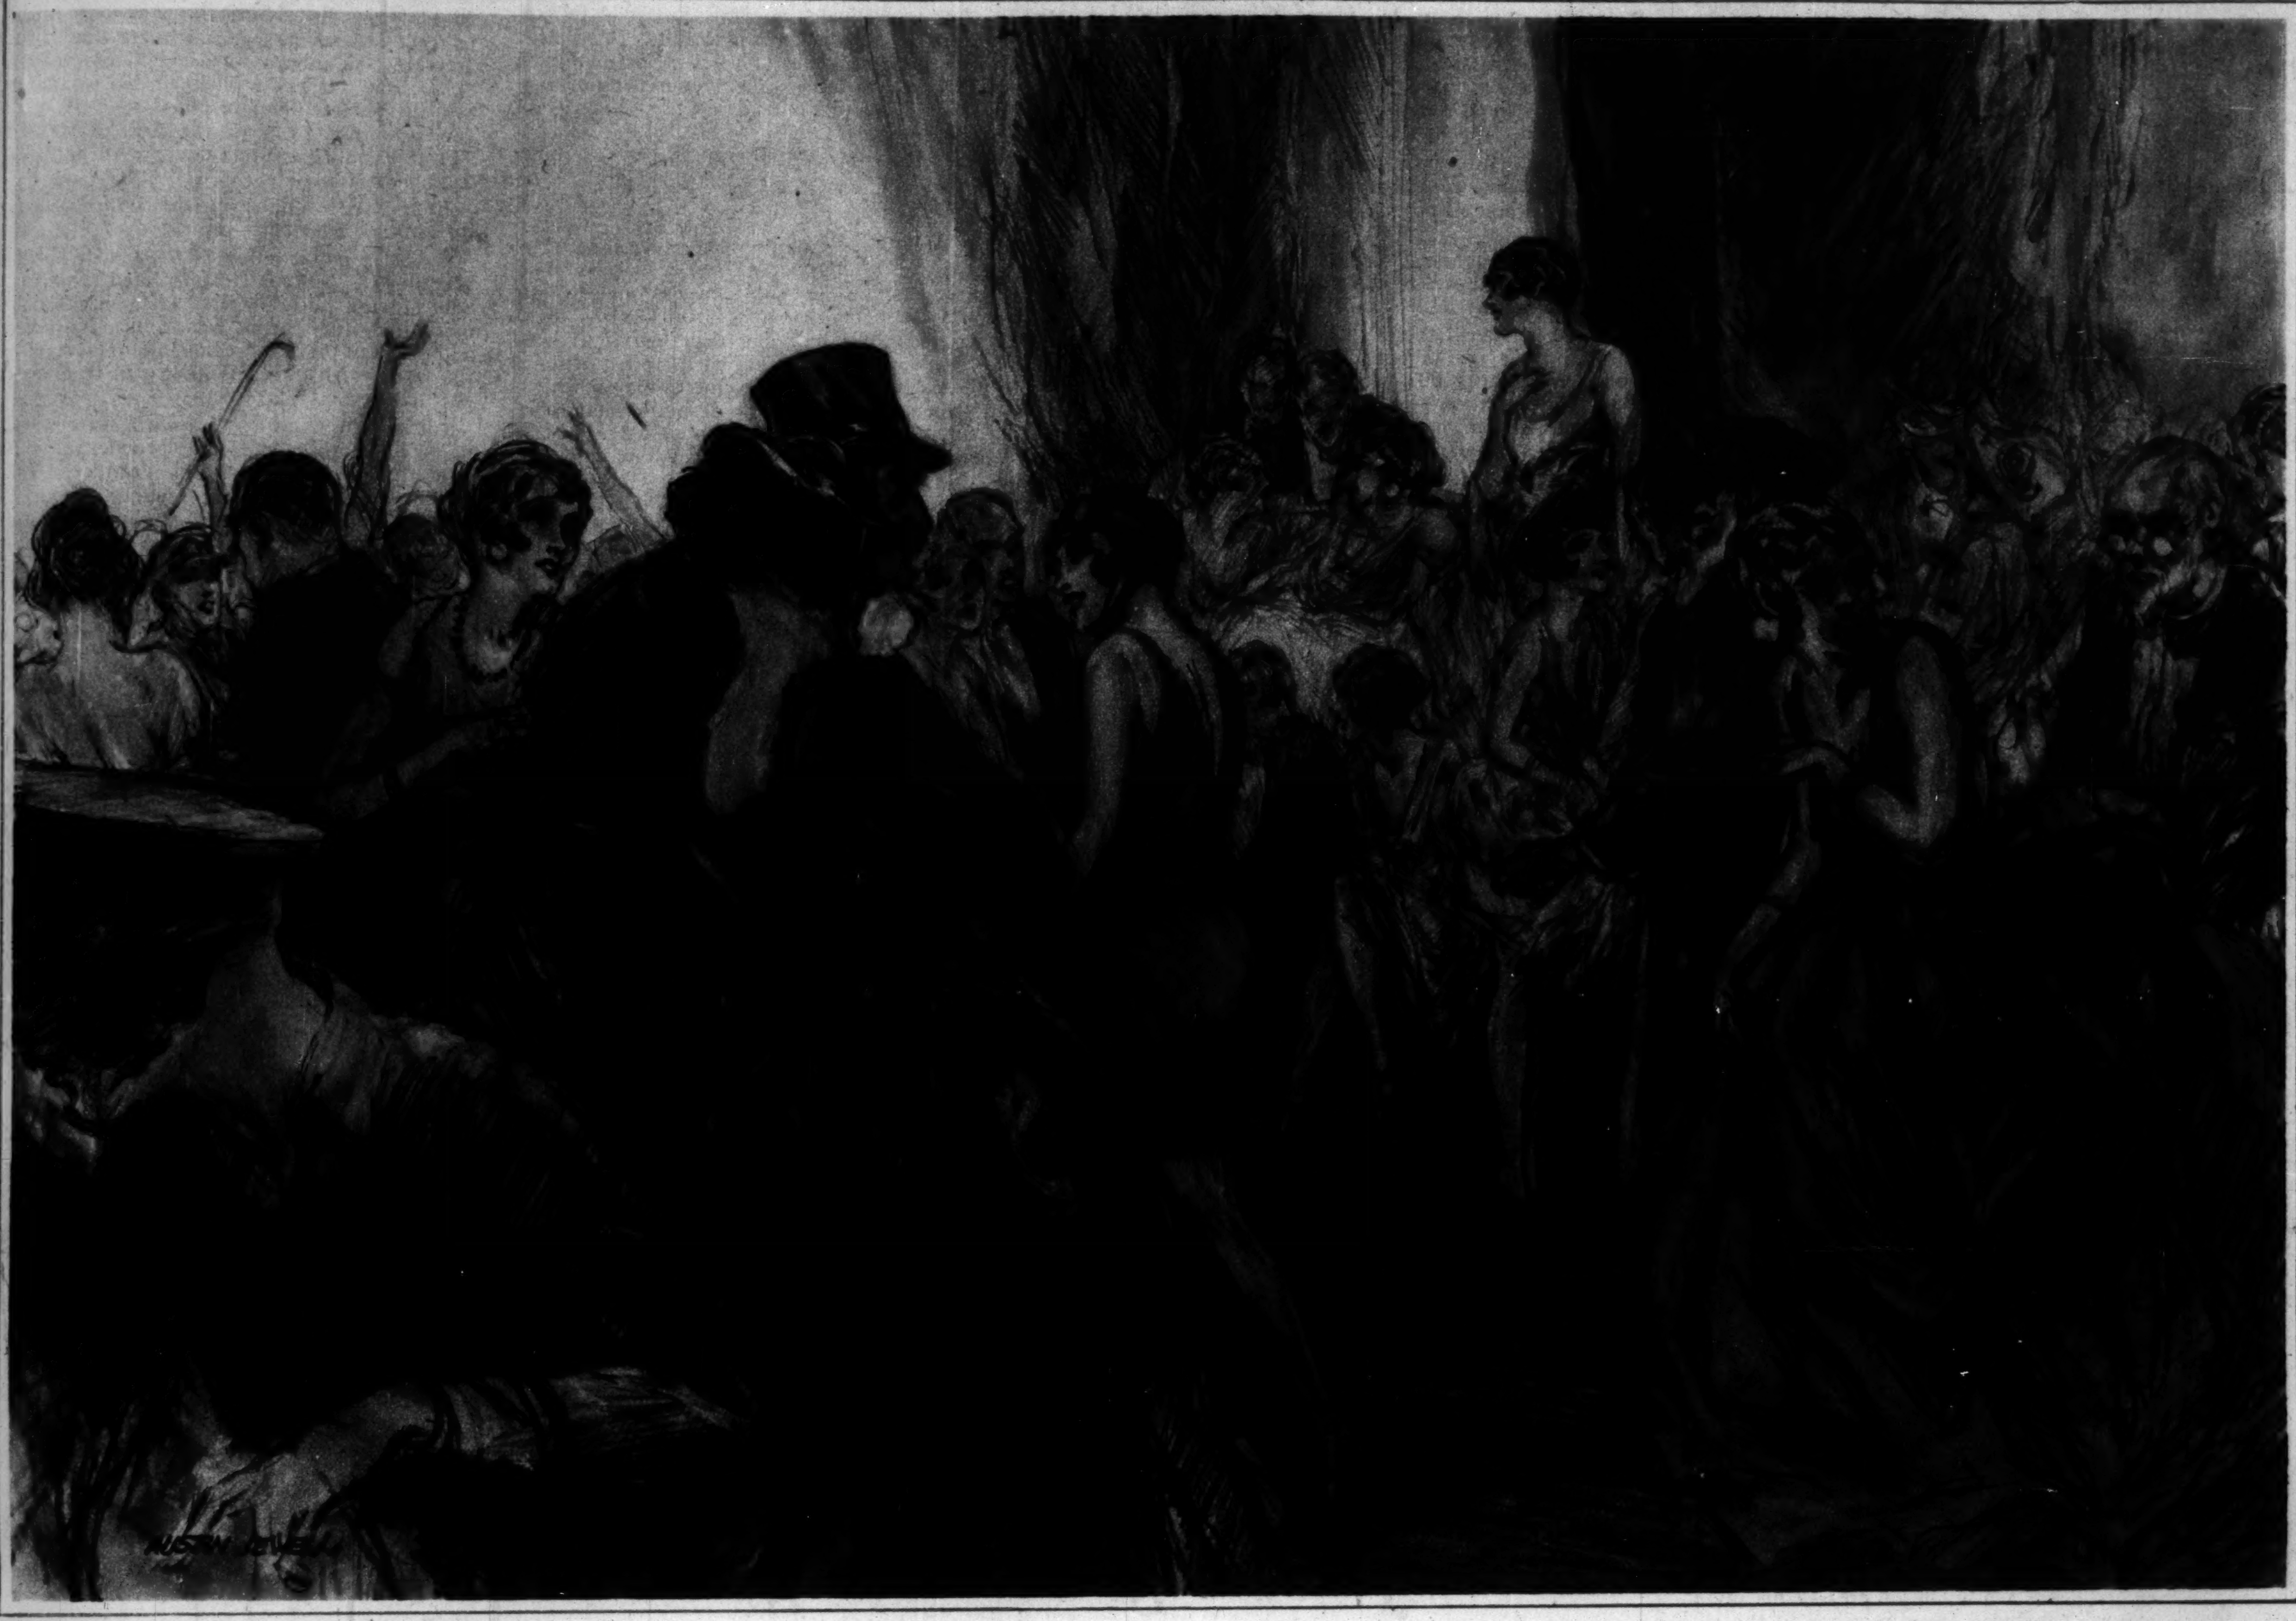
THEIR FAMOUS FATHER

BY IDA M. EVANS



The air cleared—like magic, like something unseen.

Marcus Destinn, the Famous Actor, May Have Been a Beau Brummell to the World at Large, but to His Children He Was Just a Problem.

ON the Billock breakfast table stood a jade bowl of pink roses. It was June. The strawberries were red. The telegram was yellow.

After Olive Billock saw the telegram she was no longer aware of the roses, although she had a strong beauty sense. And she didn't care for the berries, although a moment previously her appetite had been high.

Without opening the telegram she knew whom it was from and what it said. Nearly all telegrams are from relatives or on business.

Olive had no business in life except being the handsome and affectionate, even devoted, wife of Milton Billock, rising young lawyer and estate handler in Estaville, a progressive midwestern town of about fifty thousand inhabitants. She had no near relatives except her husband Milton, her brother Cary, and her father.

Her husband was at that moment singing loudly "I Wonder What's Become of Sally" in the bathroom above the June-sunny breakfast room.

Cary had arrived from Boston three days before for his annual summer visit, and right now was sound asleep in an upper bedroom, having the night before danced too late with Jane Baybank at the West Estaville Country club.

Therefore the telegram was from her and Cary's father, Marcus Destinn. With mingled feelings she read: "Coming for a flying visit to my kiddies stop wild to see you stop bushels of hugs stop love stop regards to Milton."

Let there be no misunderstanding at the start. Olive Destinn Billock loved her father—every handsome gray hair of his distinguished head. Even while a faint frown came, she was mentally getting out her best French monogrammed Irish linen sheets for his bed, wondering if an Estaville market could yield a decent basket of artichokes, listing dinner guests, and ordering from the florist a bowl of forget-me-nots, his favorite flower.

America and Europe liked Marcus Destinn. Two continents knew him—his fine, forceful features, his musical voice, and striking gray hair. Wherever parquet or gallery seats were known, or flappers flapped, or older generations demanded discriminating recreation, he was welcome and could sign his own contract. Broadway was his best hunting ground. But an occasional flyer in the film studios netted him cash and unneeded éclat.

Nevertheless, his daughter's feelings were mixed. Oddly enough, her first reaction was a wish that this spring she and Milton hadn't joined the new country club.

Not that she had at this early time any definite premonition. But she was so deeply in love with Milton that anything which might affect his hopes or desires presented itself readily to her wifely mind. And she and Milton had spent the last six evenings discussing what it would mean if he got the handling of old Mrs. Sturgeon's big estate. That meant future honor and money. It meant, indeed, one of the frightfully large and happy foundation stones on which young fathers of families build fortunes for themselves and children needing education and Shetland ponies.

Still, Marcus Destinn's daughter now reflected with a frown, what difference did it make? Before he got clear of the lower Pullman step he would probably be handed by some one the keys to every club, lodge, association, society, locker, sewing circle, Dorcas meeting, new thought group, Epworth league, uplift movement, Rupert Brooke society, writers' club, poets' corner, little theater following, dramatic guild, servant girls' guild, or mechanics' gymnasium in town.

At the station, doubtless, grinning caddies would be on hand to proffer their services, tipless if Marcus wished. Taxicab drivers would jump forward to handle his bags with the care of a homely daughter for her mother. The Pullman porter would follow him through the station in a last whiskbroom effusion. The very brick and asphalt of any town, let alone its inhabitants, rose up to welcome genial, handsome, talented Marcus Destinn, the American actor who in evening clothes looked more like a duke than any English owner of a ducal estate.

Even Olive herself, the daughter who was overfamiliar with him and his talent, his habits and his hats, his preference for opal studs as against pearl, his handsome lounging robes and cravats, felt a thrill of affectionate anticipation. She'd love to see Dad. She made a mental note that he'd like that jade bowl filled with roses, and she must order little pig sausages for breakfast.

Milton, too. Entering the room, he saw the telegram. Reading, he beamed and forgot that he'd just nicked his well cleft chin with the razor.

"Great, Olive! Day after tomorrow! Say, I was just thinking last night I'd enjoy seeing the old boy again soon. I didn't have half a chance to get well acquainted with him in New York before we were married."

True. Olive well enough recalled why. Marcus was leaving for a London engagement. Between the last curtain call at the Empire and his steamer's embarking there had been just enough time to meet and shake hands with the clever young midwesterner whom Olive had met at a Deane tea.

Olive and Grace Deane had gone to school together. Since school Olive visited the Deanes when in New York. At other times she stayed with a maternal aunt in Trenton.

The Deanes were banking easterners of fortune so solid that Wall street held the family on its platter of money like a baked and buttered potato, taking great care not to spill.

Olive still remembered those uncomfortable last days of that last visit of hers to the Deanes. How she had counted the minutes, feverish pulsed, until her father embarked and was gone! Olive's queasy ears would long hold the row between Grace Deane and her older sister Alma. The row over Marcus Destinn! It was dreadful.

Alma was mannish and in her thirties and given to social settlement work. Grace was the spoiled baby of the family. Both girls' pearls were known in the horseshoe of the Metropolitan opera house. They had come almost to hair-pulling over the box of lilies of the valley which held Marcus Destinn's card.

The card read, "Miss Deane." Scribbled below, faintly, "The dearest girl in New York City."

Olive had often pensively wished that either her mother had lived or her father had been a remarrying man. It was true that he had sat beside Alma the previous evening at the Deane dinner table. It was true, too, that often he had included flowers for Gracie when he sent a box to Olive at school.

Alma had taken unkindly Olive's efforts to tell her that Marcus was not a marrying father. "O, you needn't worry about my stepmothering you! I'd travel with him."

That season Cary had run over to London for a few days with his father and a friend. From London Cary had written his sister in horror about the affair of the mother of his friend Otto. "And she's forty-eight and she simply sat in the hotel corridor and messed her emotional disposition in front of two chambermaids and a bellboy, who all three went into a conspiracy to rescue father and let him escape her by stepping from one balcony to another. The chambermaids said she was a fat old beast and ought to be thrown into the Thames, the poor, dear man; and the bellboy said women were hell and originally had been used for paving stones. Dad said—you know his bored, annoyed voice!—that all he did was tell how he missed mother, who had Irish gray eyes, too. Her eyes aren't Irish gray. Otto's mother, I mean. They are pasty slate. Otto won't speak to me at all. Mortified, and mad, too."

Besides Grace Deane, there had been most of the other girls at school. And the little English teacher with her tortoise shell rims, who was discharged when she took to slipping into the city every week-end for matinée and three evening performances.

THEN that year in Hollywood when Olive had been along! The woman of the bungalow who gave him some geraniums. Well, he had stopped in passing to stoop his handsome nose to sniff the pinkish hedge. But the woman's husband had been most unpleasant. She was not a young woman. But right the next day she had enrolled in a local dramatic school.

"Great," beamed Milton now, again reading the telegram. "Often wondered if he thought I was pretty cheeky to marry the daughter of the best paid actor in America on nothing but my expectations."

"Nonsense," scoffed Olive. She didn't explain that, although he was a generous father, actors' salaries often are not so large as press agents report.

"Well, if I get the handling of the Sturgeon estate, I'll take good care even of a Destinn." He smiled.

Olive wondered if she ought to warn him. Ought she to tell him that one reason she hadn't minded leaving the familiar east to come to his home town, Estaville, was because her father would not find time for many or long visits to the Babbittian spot?

No. She couldn't. He might not understand. He might think she was implying that her father was a different sort of man. She sighed and reflected that it was fortunate Milton had neither mother nor sisters.

It was for once a relief when Milton had gone to his office, which was in a very smart limestone block on Main street's best corner.

Cary was coming down. Cary would understand.

"And what I'm afraid of," she was half whimpering, "is that somehow something will happen to spoil Milton's chance at the Sturgeon estate. You know everything is left to the old lady, but that one widowed daughter, Mrs. Linncott."

Cary was not heeding her.

"O, darn!" he said bitterly at the telegram. "Sure—he had to drop along this summer! O, I like Dad. I'm crazy about him. He's loaded me with money all my life. Best schools, etc. But Jane Baybank hasn't been easy pickings, and I thought this summer—Damn! Course"—lamely—"I'll be glad to see him."

"Tell him," advised Olive, half absently, and a hint resentfully. Cary cared little about Milton's affairs after all!

"Ask him to lay off, you mean?" said Cary with sarcasm. "O, sure! And then he'd do the glad paternal welcome act and call her the little daughter he'd always wanted; and she'd—— Say, my feeling for Cissy Kolb in Trenton was nothing like what it is for Jane. But I'll never forget when Cissy told me it wasn't decent for her to let me kiss her when all she did was close her eyes and try to think I had Dad's fine brown eyes."

It was true that, although the two young people were good looking in their clean brunette style, they had not inherited the illusive charm and sparkle that distinguished their father. Now they looked at each other, and Olive sighed and Cary ate his egg coldly.

Later Olive gave orders to Minnie, the maid. Minnie came from a family in town which believed that any Scandinavian was as good as her mistress and perhaps better. Her attitude toward company was congealed suet. Cary was already at hand to be waited on. But Olive had a firm tongue. She itemized the guest chamber, flowers, better bacon, waffles, and the new silver cocktail shakers. No—not blankets—the rose satin down quilts that had never been used. And the silver vegetable dishes must be polished, and finger bowls used. Yes—her father lived mostly at hotels or clubs and was used to the little niceties.

Olive smiled grimly at Minnie's cold attitude. Wait, Miss Minnie! A change of heart would come, like putty. Marcus would pause at his bedroom door and say, "Thank you, my girl, thank you." No more. But over stolid Minnie would come a change rich and strange. She would trip over her own feet and blush and hurry down for towels, or ice, or anything—anything that was an excuse for coming back.

That genial, musical "Thank you, my dear." Old women and young, menials and English duchesses, fell at its sound.

"Wait, Minnie," grimly reflected her mistress.

EVEN as Olive foresaw, it happened. Except that she need have wasted no regret over the country club angle. For old Mrs. Sturgeon's big black car passed the coupé on the way home and stopped and tremoloed an instant invitation for dinner that night or any night.

Judge Skelly and President Baybank of the bank were at the station. Milton introduced them to his father-in-law, who was unusually handsome in a new gray suit and smiling and at his ease, with a porter with whiskbroom in hand following him down the Pullman steps and a waiter from the dining car beaming behind the porter and trying to edge ahead.

From coach windows twelve women craned their heads. There might have been more, but on that side of the train all other seats were held by men and children. Three children were waving sticky hands and two men were calling after Marcus: "See you next week in New York, Destinn!" And the other: "That Adirondack invitation holds good this year or next! But do try to make it this year, old man! Do try!"

Milton Billock beamed with pride and affection. Olive put up her mouth to be kissed and felt the usual thrill. Wasn't Dad handsome! And he'd probably brought her a silver fitted traveling bag, or pearls. Cary laughed excitedly like a girl when he flung an arm over the handsome gray shoulders.

Almost before the train shrieked on its transcontinental track a luncheon was arranged at the Kiwanis club; the Commercial association spoke of a stag supper; Judge Skelly recommended a links; Frederic Baybank made his dinner the following night, and Miss O'Hagan of the Drama League branch dated a talk on "Realism" by the distinguished fellow worker in the arts.

Olive noted that Milton was pleased enough. Baybank had his hand on the younger man's arm while he pressed his invitation. The judge naturally included the son-in-law in the stag supper.

It happened that Estaville was one of those well fixed, bustling towns where the older men have firm hands on the rule of affairs. There were scores of younger men who were working, hoping and itching for a foothold. Too many younger men, it chanced in Estaville, in proportion to the firm and healthy older ones who were unwilling to step aside from their earned places. Milton's law earnings in the last three years had been good for his age and experience, but they had been budgeted most cannily to keep Minnie, Rotarian dues, and occasional pink candled dinners to the golf crowd as apparent straws on a placid financial surface instead of wild waves of distress. Olive's coupé had been her father's wedding gift. So had most of her clothes.

Mrs. Sturgeon was a powerful old person in Estaville society and business; the widow of the owner of real estate, water works stock, interurban stock, and a lumber company. She had been left more millions than is good for a woman living a long way from Fifth avenue. She was hustling manager of clubs, particularly country; bridge luncheons, the Drama league, and two church societies. Her fortune had been left by her husband in the care of a local trust company whose cashier had recently proved untrustworthy. There was a local scandal, but no money was lost. However, she had recently taken a fancy to Milton Billock and had hinted that she needed a young and aggressive honest man to help her take care of what heaven and a dead husband had burdened her with. Three or four young, aggressive Estavillians, all announcing themselves as honest as a July sky, were eyeing Milton and the hint with rival glances.

She had one daughter, a divorcee in her mid-forties, who had been left no fortune but had to depend on her mother's generosity. But the town felt that this was as it should be. Laura Linncott, nee Sturgeon, was lank, faddy, and foolish. She dabbled in the occult, clay beauty treatments, and food fads.

The mother was sixty-five, weighed over two hundred, and had a large, good humored smile. She was not a beautiful old woman. She had moles on her chin and wore too high corsets, which, as in a former generation, emphasized her bust, and she dressed too ornately. But it was the daughter on whom Olive expected future trouble to hinge. It was the mother's pride which, touched, might advert to the discomfiture of Milton. Olive knew her father. He was not a malicious man. But he did not like lank, faddy women; and he would make no allowances for any false hopes which his invariable courtesy and musical voice raised in such a person's poor heart.

Laura was not in her mother's car when it overtook the Billock coupé at a corner and Mrs. Sturgeon's good natured fat old face pressed out a window and she fairly flung the dinner invitation. Olive gave thanks for slight mercies. She hoped Laura was out of town.

The Sturgeon home was one of Estaville's show places. Its dinner table was perfect with French china, gold coffee spoons, and Italian lace spread. The food and wines were in accord. Marcus Destinn, used to the best of America and Europe, was pleasantly surprised. He had said rather whimsically to his daughter in advance that he loved her, but he hoped her friend, Mrs. Sturgeon, was not an economical hostess.

At his hostess' right, he responded therefore with zest to her bright hopes that he would like the town and her lobster patties. Olive, watching, became heartsick. Amelia Sturgeon was sixty-five. But there is no age to the light that suddenly leaps into a woman's eyes, to the palpitating parting of her lips as she waits for a chosen man's next words.

Since there was no man in the Sturgeon ménage, Milton had been asked to hold the foot of the table. It was a crumb from his father-in-law's place of honor. He was not unwilling. At the side sat Judge Skelly, who had been a director on the unworthy trust company's board. Olive saw very well that her naive husband was seeing himself hoisted at least a little on the ladder of achievement.

Laura Sturgeon sat on the other side and watched her mother with eyes that at first were wondering and later became disapproving.

"Mrs. Billock," called Mrs. Sturgeon at last, stifled almost with laughter, "your father is a flatterer. He says he can beat me at bridge, but he won't because he likes my tablecloth."

Olive read her father's little amused smile. He was a master wit in one of New York's wittiest clubs. Mrs. Sturgeon's convulsed red full face, the corsage of imitation violets that rose and fell on her great bare bosom, her appreciative laugh that soon became almost hysterical and girlish...

After dinner Mrs. Sturgeon towed her guests to the country club which she managed and enjoyed much as a little girl enjoys a doll house. Jane Baybank was not at the dinner table. Jane was too little. But she was met later at the club, a pale imp in blue chiffon. By that time Olive was not intent at all on her brother's fears. Marcus had been invited into his hostess' car for the three mile ride. Olive and Milton were alone in their coupé.

It got on Olive's nerves at once—Milton's complacent smile. Poor Milton! Dumb Milton!

He squeezed his wife's hand. It was the tender squeeze of a husband; not of a lover. It meant that he was aching to give her, not candy and flowers but coupés and country club dues and also college educations for her and his children.

"Dear," he said elatedly, "I don't want you to think I'm a money grabber. And, apart from any possible profit to myself, I certainly like your father. He's a peach, and one man who can tell the same story three times and not bore hearers. But—say, isn't it a stroke of luck that Mrs. Sturgeon fell so hard for him? And she's a fast worker. She whispered to me between coffee and getting on our hats that she'd run down to my office tomorrow morning for a long confab and some advice."

"Did she?" sighed Olive.

"Isn't it good that he happened to visit us right now?"

"Um-m—perhaps."

MILTON paid no attention to her dry tone. He rummaged in his pocket for a match for a cigaret, found it, and subsided into one of these silent moods in which a woman is not needed by man.

It infuriated Olive with her experience. It was not fair to take out her vexation on poor Milton, whose good, after all, was the chief bone on which her apprehension gnawed, to dip deep into metaphor. But she acted on impulse, and was impelled by worry to say naggingly, "Better not count your chickens before they're hatched, Milton."

Milton sat up straight in his seat. What a tone from Olive! And what words! The red of pride ran up his high, attractive cheeks.

"Are you implying, Olive, that I'm capitalizing your father's popularity?" He grew more flushed. "Perhaps it sounded like that. I'm sorry."

"O, you poor——" Olive was scarlet and ashamed and, at the same time, amused. Poor dear Milton! Obtuse, like most men! "Dear, I only meant that it's bad luck, you know, to count on good luck. And Dad might offend her some way—you know he—" she stammered, not knowing what to say that would not belittle her father or her husband.

Milton accepted her explanation, but he was sober when at last they emerged from the semi-light of the coupé into the brilliancy of the clubrooms. Whatever consolation was to be afforded Olive from a male relative she got from her brother, Cary.

Mrs. Sturgeon had arrived already and was towing Marcus Destinn importantly across a waxed floor. Beside Cary little Jane Baybank was mechanically using a lipstick and gaping after the distinguished arrival. She turned to Cary. Olive read her lips. "Say, your father's a darling! No wonder they call him the perfect lover in films——" And then little Jane was towing Cary in the wake of Mrs. Sturgeon. "O, if I could have one dance with him, just so I'd be able to say——"

Poor Cary! Olive read his wilted bearing, with its fatuous, courteous smile.

It was a gay evening at the club. The orchestra played well. Marcus Destinn liked to dance. Amusedly enough he told Olive later that Estaville was much like other towns, wasn't it? Its ladies, young and old, had private dreams, old or new, of going on the stage. Ah, me! Women run true to form—or is it nature?

Little Jane danced twice with Marcus and was a naiad of laughter and complacency. Mrs. Sturgeon danced four times with him. And the fat elderly woman in her low cut green charmeuse, heavily beaded, with red, beaming, smiling face and a gray transformation that threatened to slide to her eyebrows after the fourth dance, was not a naiad and would never, never be taken for one.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED?

They can't help thinking her glum, dull—and she was so anxious to win their liking. Yet, how could she smile, chatter, laugh with them—knowing her teeth were dingy, unattractive? Knowing, too, how they would interpret that!

Teeth sparkling, that dingy stain ended . . .
GUARANTEED!

[Starches now made harmless in 15 seconds]

YOU'VE seen this stubborn fact—and have wished it otherwise:

Despite careful brushing, teeth remain brownish-grey. Despite daily care tooth-ache comes, tooth decay, too soon.

Now learn other facts. How teeth can be brighter than ever before—a result here guaranteed to you. Two ways to test this are offered below.

* * * * * * *

These truths come to you from the highest sources of dental knowledge. A surprising statement about what starch does to teeth is given.

The dangerous stain

Modern foods have too much starch. Not even normal, healthy saliva can change it [by digestion] into harmless form. Because there is too much. You get it in breads, pastries, potatoes, desserts, sugar, cereals—many other foods.

It is but partly digested [changed] by the saliva. In this state it is a glue and a stain [of dirty, brownish hue] combined. Chemically like gum arabic! Nothing can remove it from your teeth while in that form—not brushing, scrubbing, rinsing.

In crevices it lodges, sticks like any other glue. In the tiny grooves of all tooth-surfaces [500 to an inch] it clings. First it makes teeth grimy, unpleasant. Then—quickly—it produces the acids that eat through sturdiest tooth-enamel!

This is the real truth about why well-brushed teeth can still be dull, unattractive and about the sensible way now guaranteed to make them brighter than ever before.

Naturally, then, teeth remain unpleasantly stained, dingy. Naturally they decay too soon. Despite all your care!

Now made harmless in 15 seconds

There is today a remarkable, natural toothpaste. The name is Senreco.

Truth about starch

Here's the finding of one of the greatest dental research-scientists; in his noted book: "The Prevention of Dental Caries and Oral Sepsis":

"It is perfectly clear that the material having the greatest potentiality for tooth destruction is starch in a cooked and finely-divided [masticated] state."

In 15 seconds Senreco ends this danger!

Used on your teeth it transforms all starch [by aiding saliva to digest it, right there and then]. This is accomplished in 15 short seconds—actually while your toothbrush is still in your mouth. Nature's own ingredients do this.

Then—away goes the staining, glue-like starch instantly brushed away or rinsed away! Safety from decay is greatly increased—as you can see.

* * * * * * *

Other delightful results follow. In a natural way gums are made firmer, healthier. Dentists recommend Senreco, often for this one benefit. It is neutral—neither acid or alkaline; contains no sharp, harsh abrasives; is highly beneficial—and only beneficial!

Use it and your mouth feels as cool, clean and sweet as it is.

An extraordinary guarantee

Try Senreco, prove these results, in either of two ways.

Mail coupon for generous, 12-day test—free.

Or buy a large tube, 50c, from your druggist. Use this for 12 days. Then, unless your teeth are brighter than they've ever been before—with any toothpaste—return the tube.

Your money will be instantly, unquestioningly refunded.

Be as fair to yourself as this offer is to you. See what a difference this makes in your smile, your conversation, your attractiveness!

CROSSED WIRES

BY John T. McCutcheon

THE STORY SO FAR:

A WEALTHY American family, the Craytons, meet a worthless Frenchman, Pierre de Barsac, in Paris. He tries to win Virginia, the daughter. The mother favors him because he calls himself a count, but Mr. Crayton is suspicious. He arranges to have a young American, Rasher, accompany them back to America. Virginia becomes interested in Rasher, but is shocked to learn he has been a truck driver. Her father hires him as a chauffeur. In New York Virginia invites de Barsac to accompany them on the motor trip home. Rasher's real name is Bacon, and he is extremely rich. The trip begins with Rasher driving. They are held up and Rasher is wounded trying to protect Virginia. She visits him at a hospital and finds she loves him. Rasher tells her de Barsac and Celeste, her maid, are old friends. Mrs. Crayton wants to move on and leave Rasher in the hospital, but de Barsac argues against her desire when he finds Virginia will not leave the "chauffeur." In despair, Mrs. Crayton summons Mr. Crayton. Richard Wellborne, called by Rasher to take his place, arrives by airplane. At Rasher's request Wellborne, alias Dick Wells, feigns car trouble to delay the Craytons. Virginia intimates that she is willing to stay with Rasher, but he tells her he wishes her to go. Mr. Crayton is threatened with financial disaster. His wife offers to save him with her own fortune, but only if he will consent to Virginia's marriage to de Barsac. A telegram informs Mr. Crayton that an unexpected credit of $600,000 has been arranged. Keeping it to himself, he departs for New York.

INSTALLMENT XXV.

The New Chauffeur Makes an Impression.

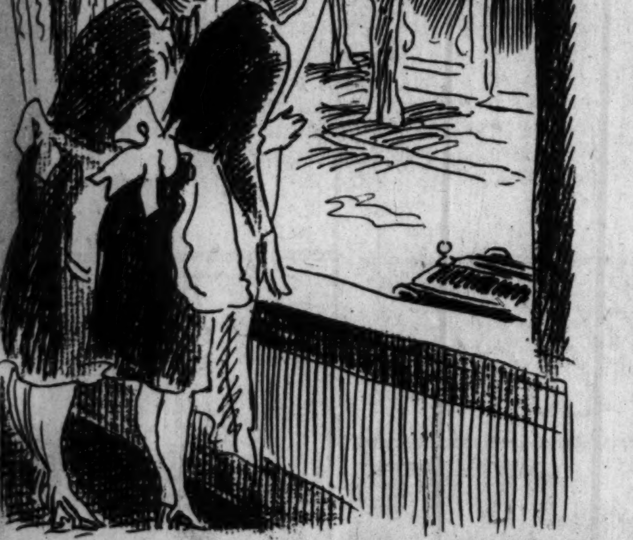
WHEN the Craytons' new chauffeur awoke at eight he was just on the point of ringing for his valet when he recalled that he was now acting a part.

So he shaved and briskly rubbed himself down in the cold water at his wash stand, and then scribbled a note to Mrs. Crayton, informing her that her husband had gone in by train the night before.

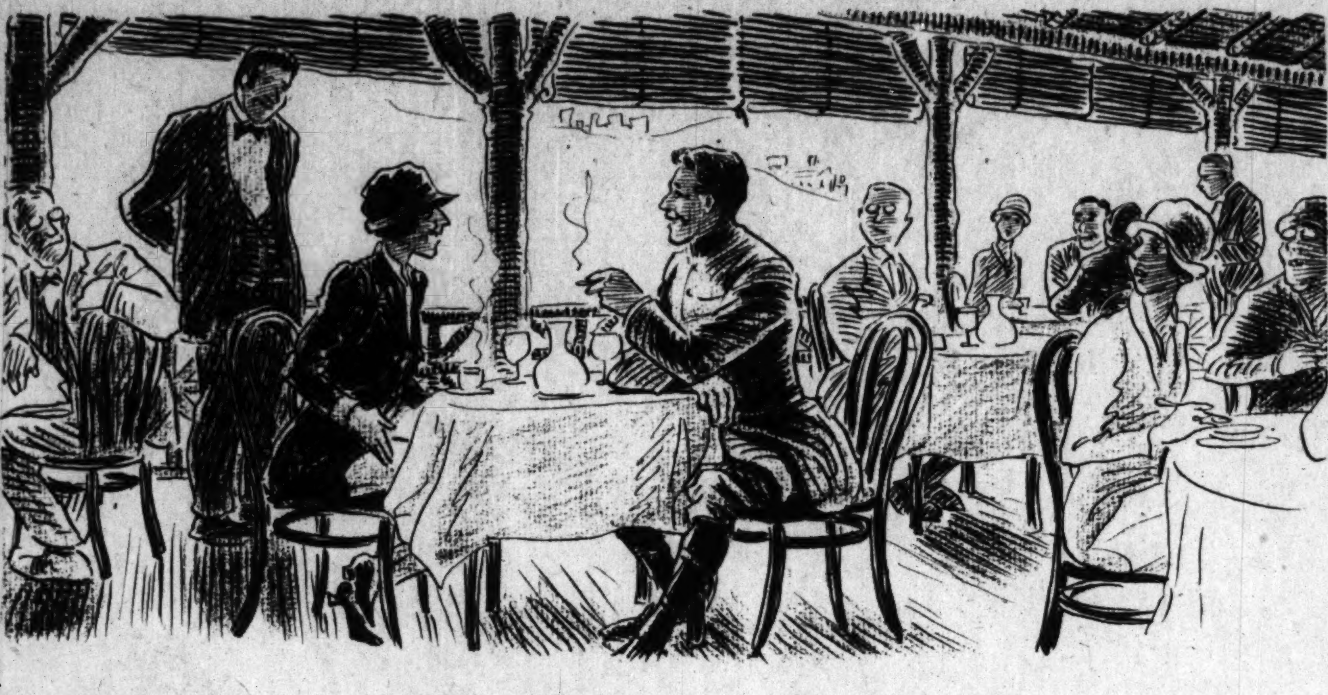
Presently the bellboy returned with instructions that the car be ready to start at ten o'clock. Promptly at that hour the heavy luggage had been firmly stowed and secured and he sat at the wheel awaiting the Crayton party's appearance. It might be observed that he had dressed with immaculate care. His linen was spotless, his uniform looked crisp and soldierly, and a glance at the healthy bronze of his face and the humorous tawny eyes, surmounted by wavy flaxen hair, would have brought a second and a third glance from any observer.

Several maids in the hotel were covertly watching him from the windows. The telephone girl in the office had left her post and was regarding him with wistful admiration.

The reputation of being the handsomest and most fascinating member of his class was not undeserved. He now awaited with a pleasant thrill the part that he was to play the next few days.



Several maids were watching him from the window.



The chauffeur sat with the French maid.

"Remember, my good fellow," he said to himself, "you are here with a great mission to perform. You are to save the heroine from the villain. Cupid, not cupidity, must be triumphant. If your friend, Rasher, loves this girl, as I suspect he does, you must baffle and foil this dollar chasing count."

To his mind came fragments of an old poem:

"In the odorous church where the organ swells
They are ringing not wedding, but market bells;
For today they are selling a maiden
To the doubtful heir of an ancient line,
A tumbled down chateau, and a title fine,
And a name that is scandal laden."

Mrs. and Miss Crayton, breakfasting leisurely with Count de Barsac, were vaguely aware that the waitresses were hurrying to the windows at every opportunity. Later they were to discover the reason. In the meantime, each was engrossed in earnest thoughts thinly veiled by conversational commonplaces.

Virginia had decided to be a martyr and marry the count, if by so doing she could save her father from financial ruin. Mrs. Crayton, informed of this decision, warmly approved.

"You are doing the sensible thing, my dear; your father's opposition to Count de Barsac has been absurd and unreasonable. I have made him understand that my private fortune is at his disposal only if he ceases opposing your marriage. With that help, and because of your wise decision, Virginia, your father need have no further financial worries."

Virginia felt something of the exaltation of a martyr who sells his body but not his soul for a noble cause. Her mother would be happy, her father relieved of his anxieties, and she alone would suffer. Her thoughts leaped to Rasher. Would he care? Probably not. She swallowed hard. It was going to be hard to forget this man who was lying on a hospital bed suffering from a bullet wound received in her defense. If she was to do this hateful thing of marrying the count, it must be done quickly, or she never could go through with it.

At the breakfast table she greeted the count with a reckless amiability that surprised him. Yesterday he would have been gratified by this friendliness—today he wondered, warily, at the change. He must not involve himself in a marriage until he was certain Mr. Crayton's fortune was unimpaired. "Go slow," Celeste had cautioned; "perhaps this financial collapse is just a trick of his to throw you off the track. We'll go to their home and learn how he stands before we do anything."

Mrs. Crayton was elated at the change in affairs. At last, she thought, Virginia has regained her senses. A marriage with Count Pierre de Barsac seemed assured.

Soon after breakfast the Crayton party made its way to the sidewalk where the car waited. At the door of the car, in chauffeur's uniform, stood the handsomest man Virginia Crayton had ever seen. With slight modifications in his uniform, he could have passed for the military aide of an ambassador or a daring flight commander of a crack air corps. She was conscious of a distinct quickening of her pulse. In contrast to this splendid youth, Count de Barsac seemed suddenly to be an old and broken man. He was biting his moustache in irritation. Mrs. Crayton made no attempt to conceal her annoyance. She knew too well the danger of having well bred, good looking chauffeurs around. She repulsed an offer of assistance from this one, and, breathing hard, subsided into her seat. Virginia accepted the proffered assistance, and smiled charmingly at the young man.

"What is your name?" called out Mrs. Crayton testily.

"Wells, madam, Dick Wells."

"Are you married?"

"I have not that felicity, madame," he answered deferentially, but Virginia noted a faint twinkle in his eye.

"I'm sorry. Married men are more careful drivers," exclaimed Mrs. Crayton, disagreeably.

"I hope I may prove the exception," answered Wells politely, and then added, "I cannot believe that carefulness is exclusively the virtue of married men."

Mrs. Crayton glared and Virginia smiled broadly. The remark was made with such apparent humility that it escaped sounding impertinent.

A MOMENT later the car was under way, and it soon was evident that the driver was a careful and very skillful one. At a cross-road, heavily screened by dense shrubbery, a car driven by a woman suddenly shot out on the main highway, and it was only by incredibly quick thinking and quick acting that a crash was averted.

"He's a good driver," commented the count, when he had recovered his breath. "I should like to take him back to France with me as my chauffeur."

Virginia flushed angrily. She could imagine Americans employing French maids, French chefs, French governesses, but she couldn't imagine Frenchmen with American servitors. The count sensed her resentment.

"But no," he sighed, "this young man would not fit. I fear he would be too spoiled. I distrust men who are too good looking." He regarded the shapely head and ears of the chauffeur. "Why does he drive a car when he might be in the cinema, or posing for magazine illustrations, or clothing advertisements?" The count paused. "He would be an impressive doorman at a fashionable tearoom."

"But I supposed you Parisians worshiped beauty," she said sweetly.

"In ladies, yes; in men, no. Deliver me from beautiful men!" He raised his eyes piously and then with a gesture of his gloved hand from which emanated a delicate perfume, he indicated the unconscious chauffeur. "Very few of them amount to anything. There he is, beautiful—and driving our car. Here am I, homely, sitting inside with two charming ladies. What more need I say?" He shrugged his shoulders eloquently.

Mrs. Crayton interposed. "Goodness knows, no one would have suspected that he was good looking. William said he was the oiliest, greasiest, untidiest person he had ever laid eyes on."

"One would not suspect it now," commented Virginia, regarding the chauffeur, now deep in conversation with Celeste, the French maid, who laughed frequently, and from her gestures it was correctly assumed that their conversation was in French.

At one o'clock, after three hours on the road, the car drew up at a roadside restaurant, set back among the trees. Farther on, the buildings of a sizable city were visible.

"I thought you might be interested in stopping here for luncheon," said the chauffeur, opening the door. "The place has some historic interest. It was here that George Washington capitulated to De Villiers, who was in command of the French and Indians. From the veranda on the east side you may see the eminence from which the French and Indians poured an incessant shower of balls upon the heroic defenders."

De Barsac was glowering. It seemed a needless repetition of "French and Indians," and he regarded it as a personal affront. He said nothing, however, being unfamiliar with the historical incident. "After luncheon, which I have ordered served on the east veranda, where the view is excellent," continued the chauffeur, "I shall be glad to act as your guide if you don't mind a short climb."

Mrs. Crayton stiffly declined, but Virginia expressed her delight.

"The count and I will be glad to go with you," she exclaimed, with a glance at that gentleman, who nodded, but without noticeable enthusiasm. If there was one thing he detested, it was climbing.

The chauffeur sat with the French maid at a table somewhat removed from the Crayton party. They were heard to laugh a great deal and then become involved in a vociferous controversy. Celeste's "Non, non, non, monsieur," became more and more emphatic.

"What was the argument, Celeste?" asked Virginia after the conclusion of the luncheon.

"O, mademoiselle, it is too absurd—too droll, but I shall tell you. He is most amusing!"

A crash was averted.

THEIR FAMOUS FATHER

By Ida M. Evans

Olive watched with a sickish feeling. Some women need alcohol to grow riotous and some need only an unwonted emotion. Toward the end of the evening Mrs. Sturgeon began to laugh too loudly and tap Marcus too often with her green feather fan.

It was true that others laughed at his immitable stories. The evening was hugely successful. And Judge Skelly said good naturedly enough, "Mrs. Sturgeon, don't monopolize him! Possibly others of us wish to further our acquaintance with a genial personage."

"I'm old enough," countered Mrs. Sturgeon in rising voice, with a giggle, "to do all the monopolizing that I've a chance at." Then she waddled over to Olive sitting quietly beside a green tub. "Your father's going to have luncheon with me Saturday. Come along if you like. Delighted to have you. And your husband."

"I'll have to see," said Olive.

"O, well," generously promised the other, in a stage whisper, with a hand over large mouth and a grin over all her face, "don't you worry. I won't harm the dear man. I won't even ask him to recite from his plays."

Marcus Destinn went to the luncheon. Half the Rotarian club had been invited also. It was an agreeable affair. Marcus Destinn's remarkable charm was owing to a very natural fact. He liked his fellow men and fellow women, for the most part. Most of the time, at least. Something magnetic in his nature rose and invited something in theirs and, having invited, was most responsive.

Olive, however, spent part of the week in digesting the fact that Milton, whom she loved with all her heart and soul and intellect, had been, since her awkward warning about her delightful father, a standoffish husband.

He had said briefly, in reply to her direct question, that Mrs. Sturgeon had telephoned the next morning to postpone the conference that she had herself suggested. Her voice had been, it is true, rollicking and friendly. She said she was busy and plain business could wait till a duller fortnight, couldn't it?

Olive understood better than Milton. Her excuse was genuine. Most women prefer not to let pleasure wait on dull business. Olive hoped soberly that Marcus wouldn't—wouldn't presently allow those fine brown eyes of his to betray too much ennui. Sometimes he did that, when the magnetic good humor and invitation of his nature had temporarily dried up! Yes—it had that absurd trick.

SHE had tried to get back to old, comfortable footing with Milton. But he had been too much hurt, it seemed. He went off with her father to play golf. Cary came home in high dudgeon two afternoons. Jane, it seemed, had developed a mania for caddying. O, yes—she had prettily begged Marcus and he had smiled and pinched her cheek and told her to run along like a good baby. She had run along—at his heels; she said she would watch his strokes and perhaps learn how to play golf. Jane—who had won the junior championship of the state three years in succession!

And then came Mrs. Sturgeon's prize idea, a novel masquerade at the country club on Saturday night. "A Motor March! Everybody to come as some sort of car!" said Mrs. Sturgeon.

Olive understood well enough that her father would be begged to lead the grand march with the lady who had planned the affair. As it would be public, all Estaville, besides the members of the somewhat exclusive country club, would be pressed to come. Olive closed her handsome eyes and saw Mrs. Sturgeon, fat, flushed of full face, and too gorgeous—doubtless she would go as an imported limousine!—prancing across the big ballroom with Marcus beside her while some folks gaped and more laughed.

Only it was most unlikely that the astute and urbane Marcus, who had never in all his pleasant life been trapped into making himself a figure to be ridiculed, would be at the large lady's side.

Whereat it was most likely that Mrs. Sturgeon would be offended. And as usual the innocent bystanders, not the principals, would suffer.

She reflected unhappily. Other incidents in her life had been unkind memories. She had deeply regretted the broken friendship with Gracie Deane. She had been hurt by the little thin English teacher's post-malice. And she had been ashamed at the time of that mess in Hollywood.

But all other incidents were trivial beside this trouble with Milton. This was tragic. Life and happiness were involved. In forty-eight hours Milton had addressed just eighteen words to her; except, of course, the meaningless remarks in front of Marcus and Cary. The eighteen were a dry intimation that if she had feared all along that he would accidentally be unable to feed, clothe, house her, she should have given thought to not marrying him in the first place. It was bitter irony of a kind of which she had not believed Milton capable.

And when Marcus was informed of the coming social event in his honor she saw that nothing would happen to improve her state of mind or the state of affairs between herself and Milton.

"Saturday night? Well, my dear, I've hugely enjoyed this little visit in your little town. Your friends have been awfully good to me. But really, Olive, haven't I made enough polite return? O, don't misunderstand me, dear. I've enjoyed nearly every minute and made some worth while friends. But—nuff's enuff."

"You mean you're leaving?" said Olive lightly. His departure would both quell and raise a storm. No solution.

"Sunday morning. You know I'd planned two weeks with the Surreys—that English couple, you remember—in northern Maine before rehearsals start on my new play." His fine, cordial eyes twinkled. "I believe I'll sprain an ankle around 8 p. m. Saturday."

"A deputation will come here to massage the ankle." It slipped tartly from her.

"I fancy," he said blandly, "that if I hand your Minnie a dollar she will effectively guard me from callers."

Quite true, reflected Olive. And later Minnie's tongue, mother, sisters, uncles, and in-laws would let Estaville in on the bribe and possibly on the false sprain.

But, knowing Marcus, she realized that she was helpless. No use to explain the situation to him. He would lift his fine eyebrows in regret at his doings and promptly feel, if he did not show, displeasure at Olive's implied criticism. Well, many things had conspired to spoil him.

SHE found the remainder of that week almost intolerable. The affair took on extravagance and promised to be riotous. Mrs. Sturgeon, indeed, was going as a limousine. Three women came with lifted and amused eyebrows to describe to Mrs. Billock the immense hips and panniers of yellow satin which would be Mrs. Sturgeon's idea of a sartorial chassis. For headlights she was getting immense brilliant earrings.

Partly because people are what they are, and partly because she was more moneyed than tactful, Amelia Sturgeon had her share of enemies. Laura, too, must have been talking. Olive guessed what would happen. Every one would suspect that Marcus, in slang parlance, "slipped from under." Every one—or nearly—would be amused. In the end a well meaning, if not very wise, old woman would learn and feel resentful.

She suggested to Marcus that he strain his affability and play the part assigned him.

NEXT SUNDAY

The Story of Jess Tiverton

(Midnight, and a cool fog upon the fishing banks. . . . The weird scream of a liner's siren. A hundred lights leaping from out the murk. And a "mad" captain on the schooner, transmitting the orders of his long-dead son! . . . Thrills, and a heart throb, in this tale of sea and storm and heroism.

"Circus a stucco country club veranda as a taxicab?" he mocked gently. "My dear Olive, you have no heart. But I have a brain."

She was sure that during dinner Saturday evening Minnie was choking back giggles.

Little Jane Baybank was going as a flivver. Cary, with a sulky face, had been willing to dress himself up in the same fashion. Jane, in more slang parlance, had Cary where she wanted him.

After dinner Marcus slipped on the floor of the living room. Blandly he was regretful. He called Minnie to bring arnica. "And, my dear Milton, much as it grieves me to miss the evening's festivities, I'm going to do that. However, dear fellow, perhaps you could run me out to the club around eleven for good-byes to a few people here I've learned to like pretty well. I think the ankle could stand a few minutes' strain. My train leaves early, you know, in the morning."

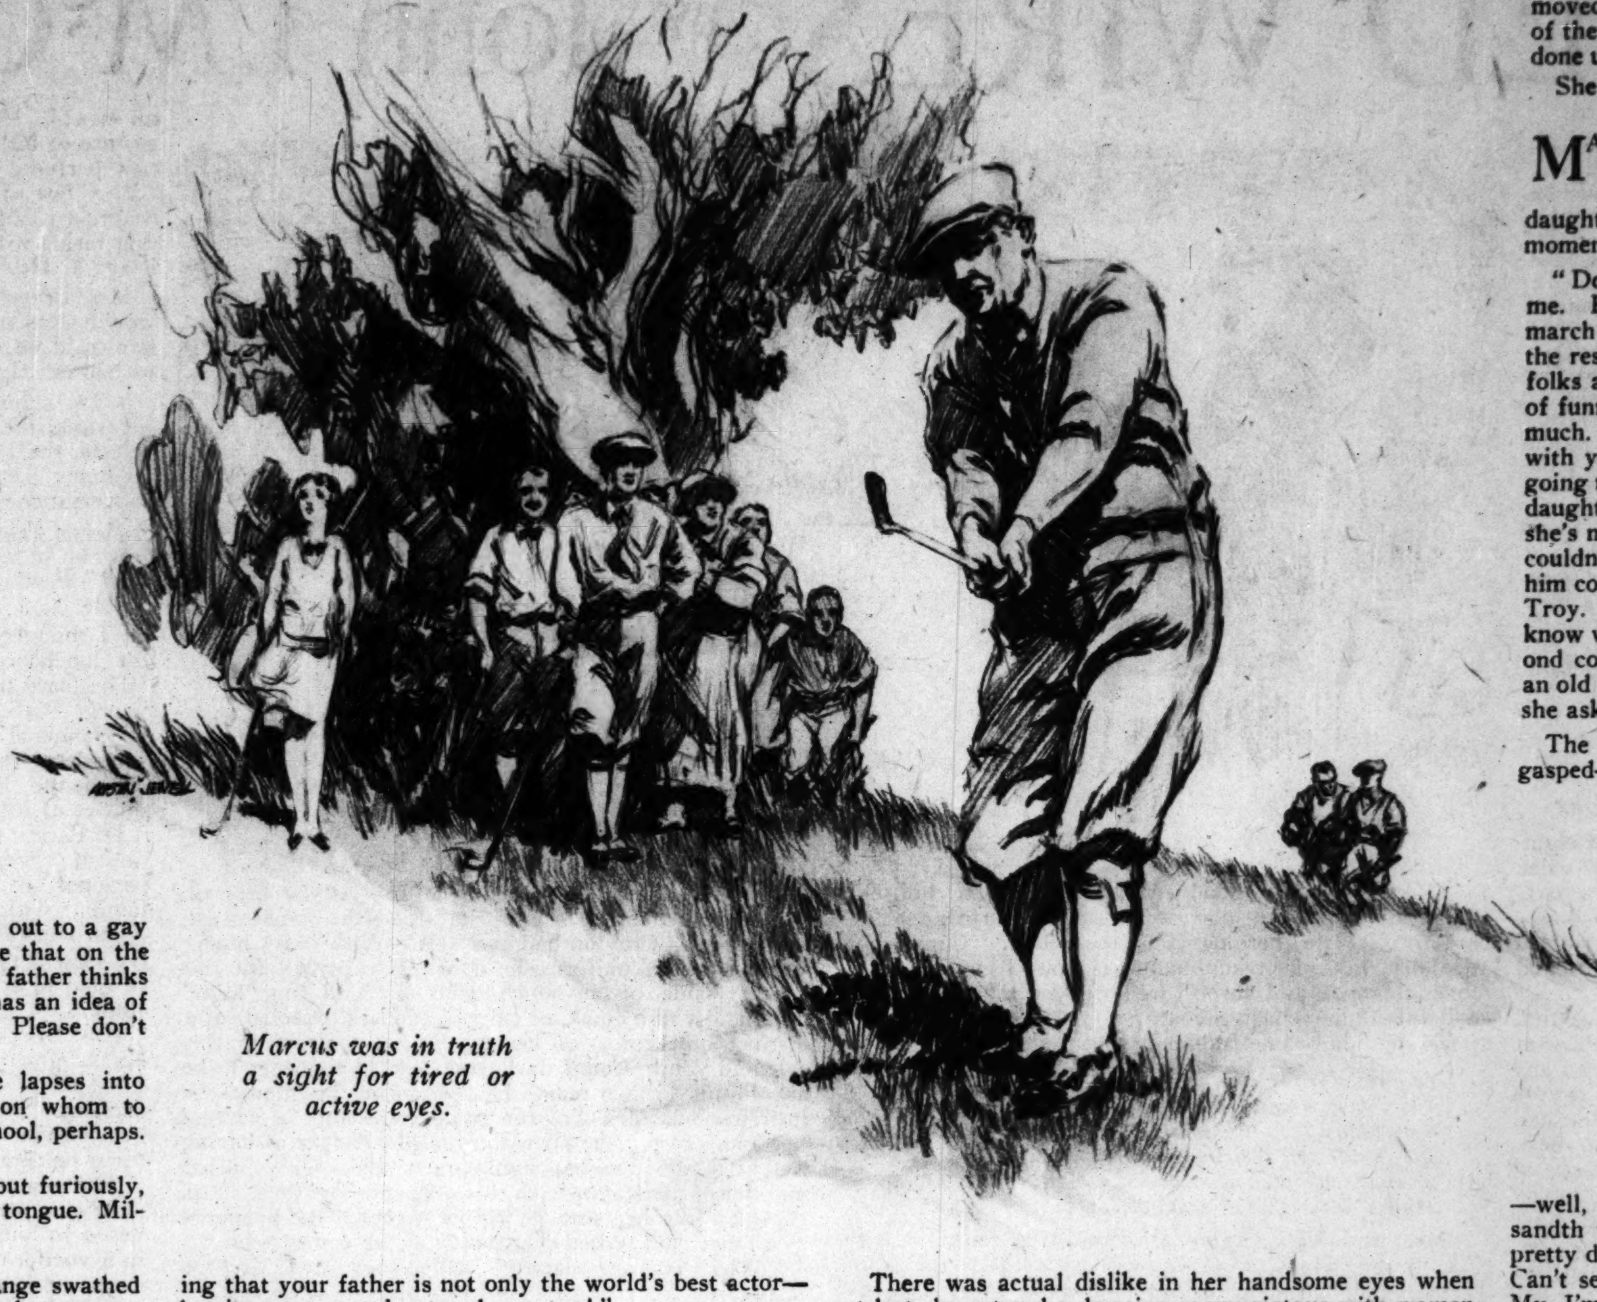
Olive said to herself that she might have known Marcus would play the small act gracefully, and so that no blame could be attached to his bland self.

It was odd how Cary lost part of his sulkiness when he saw his father incapacitated. Olive was annoyed. What a self-centered person Cary was!

But she knew that the annoyance was merely scraped up by her sore heart as a homeopathic hope. She and Milton rode out to a gay club in a most ungay silence. It was true that on the way Milton said with a short laugh, "Your father thinks we have quarreled. It struck me that he has an idea of offering me a loan, in case such is needed. Please don't let him do that, will you?

She made one of her usual impulsive lapses into uncultured repartee. Olive never knew on whom to blame that trick of hers. Two girls at school, perhaps. Or Cary.

"You're a dumbbell, Milton," she flung out furiously, and then wished she had first bitten off her tongue. Milton's stare in the dimly lighted coupe!



Marcus was in truth a sight for tired or active eyes.

ON THE club veranda, bright with orange swathed light bulbs, she braced herself for what was to come. Mrs. Sturgeon would be aghast, and the first little titter would be a catastrophic bell. Olive wished that she had followed her earlier impulse and sent a note ahead with the bad news.

The clubrooms were crowded. Plenty of individuals like to mask and make merry on the least excuse. The affair had assumed magnitude in inverse proportion to its time for preparation. Chiffon rosettes, old tires, oilcloth bumbershoots, and iridescent horns were some of the items assumed to represent horseless carriages.

Olive looked for Mrs. Sturgeon. With a set smile and an apprehension filled heart, she looked from group to group. That voluble and voluminous elderly lady was not in immediate view. Olive was compelled to endure a veritable parade of persiflage from friends and acquaintances.

Judge Skelly, in jovial humor, hailed her for the nonappearance of Marcus. The two Hazel girls trailed in her wake. Mrs. Putnap, however, had a barb.

"Mrs. Sturgeon? O my yes, she's here! Somewhere. Billowing like a—a truck. Or the Pacific ocean. Really, I didn't know there was so much yellow charmeuse in stores. Really, Mrs. Billock, everybody's saying that your father is not only the world's best actor—but its most—good natured one, too!"

Even the Hazel girls, who did not like Mrs. Putnap, giggled. Olive was furious, but she kept on her set smile. "Dad's a dear," she murmured noncommittally.

Across the great lounging room she met Milton's set smile. How dare he look at her in that fashion as if she were a designing and money mad woman who had made everything subservient to her ambition, including ordinary friendships and the social amenities?

Milton was most unfair. It gave her no pleasure to bear in mind that soon enough he would be punished. Every one in town knew that the management of the Sturgeon fortune, like a ripe plum, was ready to drop into his capable hand. Every one would soon know that, like a too ripe plum, it had decomposed before it could be clutched. How every one would smile! It is not natural for humans to refrain nobly from smiling at a frustrated clutch at a plum.

Olive had much to do to keep the hot tears from overwelling as she crossed the floor to the dressing rooms. She felt small, and mean, and mercenary, and contemptible. But she had been maneuvered into the false position. Nerves and a sore soul are a quivering combination.

There was actual dislike in her handsome eyes when at last she entered a dressing room, riotous with women and girls, and found the object of her quest. She was ashamed of her own smallness of soul that she could harbor this dislike. After all, rollicking old Mrs. Sturgeon had intentionally done her no harm.

But the future was a black cloud of promise. With her set smile and holding back the annoying tears by pure will power, she approaching the great billowing satin figure which quite filled a corner of the small room. She noticed that the figure was seated. It was not for a full minute, however, that she noticed anything else. Then Olive gasped.

Mrs. Sturgeon, with a rueful smile, held out a great bandaged foot. "Sprained it five minutes back! Isn't it tough? Where's that good looking parent of yours?"

"At home. O, I must telephone him! He'll feel——"

"Heartbroken? Well, if he's got any human feeling in him he'll sit beside me an hour or so and try to help me bear up under disappointment!" The speaker grimaced and seemed to be bearing her misfortune with good nature.

"O, I'm sure he will!" declared Olive, and made her way to a phone.

"Wait," commanded Mrs. Sturgeon. The full old face moved so that its gaze could cover the small room. Most of the women present were intent on the mirror. It was done unperceived.

She winked at Olive.

MARCUS came, his suave, kindly self, both feet capable in patent pumps. No, he didn't mind looking on, so he blandly told his daughter. But his daughter had listened lightly. She had had a private moment with a chuckling old woman.

"Don't you ever tell a soul. Laura'd throw it up to me. But it came to me that at the head of that grand march I'd look like a truck and your father might see the resemblance. So I decided to desert without giving folks a chance to laugh at me. O, yes, I know I'm sort of funny in some respects. Laura says so. I don't care much. Anyway, I've certainly enjoyed getting acquainted with your father. Never expected my sixtieth year was going to hold such a tidbit of friendship. You know my daughter Laura is afraid I'm going to marry him. If she's my own daughter, she's a fool, I have to say. She couldn't understand in a thousand years that men like him couldn't be dragged to the altar; hardly by Helen of Troy. I told Laura I was no Helen—she didn't even know what I meant; thought I was speaking about a second cousin of ours who studied domestic science. No; an old woman has had a little fling and enjoyed it, and all she asks is to keep it in pleasant memory."

The rollicking laugh was low but thorough. Olive gasped—also low, under cover of the orchestral march. Marcus was agreeing to act as one judge for the awarding of a prize to the best costume. He had smiled cordially at Judge Skelly's choice. Cary and little Jane were in line. The latter had been trying for ten minutes to catch the eye of Marcus; but that individual, though cordially assenting to the judge's list, was already thinking of his next day's journey and had forgotten little Jane; so presently in self-defense she turned her attention to the son.

Mrs. Sturgeon, banked on a divan, with her bandaged foot occasionally wriggling in absentmindedness, chuckled at Olive's gasp. "I bet you thought——well, I guess you didn't think I might be the thousandth woman. Yes, nine hundred and ninety-nine are pretty dumb things. Haven't got foresight or hindsight. Can't see the difference between a fillip and a full dish. My, I'm going to enjoy you and your husband. If you take care of my affairs and cash you'll always have to ask me for one or two dinners while your father visits you! Won't you?"

"O, yes," agreed Olive with laughter. Across the room her laughing eyes met Milton's grave gaze. The air cleared—like magic, like something unseen. Olive was all right, and he saw that Olive was all right, and therefore he became all right.

All right—but it was a state of affairs that had nothing to do with income or the lack of income. For the two words, one small and the other not large, are the passwords between a husband and a wife. Their meaning is harmonious love.

To herself said Olive Destinn Billock, "Believe me, nothing like this will ever happen again! I won't let it. Dear Milton, what a darling dumbbell he is!"

And she sighed a little and realized that she was only one of the nine hundred and ninety-nine, and half envied Amelia Sturgeon, who had neither beauty nor youth nor love, but a large understanding which in a measure made her akin to such rare and careless souls as Marcus Destinn.

BRASS BUTTONED LOVE A Story from Real Life

MIKE HASTINGS, private in the United States army, after the war could never in his wildest dreams have hoped to approach beautiful Alice Allison. For Alice, daughter of the famous old millionaire family, was the most eligible debutante in New York. She moved in another world.

But Mike Hastings, West Point cadet, in his gold bell-buttoned, trim gray uniform—ah! that was another matter entirely. That century old uniform gave him social prestige, opened the doors to the feudal castles of Park avenue, and gave Alice Allison the severest shock of her spoiled young life. Because, you see, the difference in uniforms didn't change Mike.

He was still the big, handsome, willing youth, with his queer western viewpoint which had won the heart of old Col. Parker. That blunt Texan straightforwardness was what sent Mike to West Point in the first place. It convinced the colonel that the boy would make an excellent army officer, and he secured the appointment from a friendly congressman.

Therefore Mike went to the Point, survived the rigors of his plebe year, and blossomed out as a socially eligible "yearling." He was really far more familiar with the technique of roping and branding a long horned Texas steer than he was with handling a teacup, and he knew very little of social tricks. But, nevertheless, he was extraordinarily handsome in his cadet gray, and that aroused Alice Allison's interest.

She met him one December afternoon when he was in New York on his Christmas leave. It took too long to go back home in the brief time at his disposal, and Cadet Hastings went down to the city to see the sights. His classmate Willis ran across him.

Now, Willis came from a family as old and rich and socially right as even the Allisons, and there was nothing unusual in his having tea with Alice. But Mike was his pal—for family means little at West Point—and Willis decided to take him out to the Allison mansion with him.

Therefore the pair rode out in the Willis car—and Alice awoke to a new interest in life. Mike was an absolutely new experience for her.

But she meant absolutely nothing to him. Girls were all alike, in Mike's opinion, and the aristocracy of wealth didn't register on his plain Texas mind. She was a nice girl, he told Willis afterward, but her head was swelled.

Therefore he quietly walked away from the queenly Alice and interested himself in little Eleanor Harris.

Now, Eleanor was a beautiful little thing, but she was only a hanger-on at the extreme edge of the social fringe. She didn't belong at all, and only occasionally got a peep into the real thing by virtue of her relationship to a cousin who had made the grade by marriage.

Never before in her life had any young man passed up a chance to talk to Alice for a little outsider. Therefore the princess, slighted in her own castle, suddenly determined to teach the rash young man a lesson. Her plan was simplicity itself.

She would capture Mike's heart—and then drop him.

She had no doubt concerning her ability to do this, because she had been surrounded by kneeling masculine worshipers ever since she came home from finishing school. Her acknowledged beauty, her almost inestimable wealth, and the height of her social position combined to make her irresistible. She knew it.

Next day she phoned Mike at his hotel, and then began one of the strangest things that Society with a capital S had ever witnessed.

Alice literally threw herself at the young Texan. She gave him all her time, and Mike seized it eagerly, because he knew no one else in the city, and he needed a playmate with whom to spend the few remaining days of his leave.

It was a whirlwind affair, and before she realized it Alice had lost her heart.

Swiftly matters flew to a conclusion, hastened by the desperate, pampered beauty, who was now inspired by a real infatuation which had replaced her injured pride.

Alice was ready to make any sacrifice, and she pursued him like any other eager woman desperate for the love of a man. For the first time in her life she became the pursuer and not the pursued.

And Mike found her annoying.

To him she was merely a rather pretty girl who was beginning to take up too much of his swiftly flying furlough. Then, besides, he liked little Eleanor Harris better.

He had been permitted to call on Eleanor, and he wanted to see her more often; but whenever he made up his mind to ask her for an evening Alice was certain to call up and tell him she had tickets for the evening. Therefore he began dodging her.

Finally came the dénouement.

Alice called Mike and he told her that he was engaged for the evening. Next day a few casual queries told her that he had been out with Eleanor Harris. Alice saw red.

A telephone call to his hotel, pleading an emergency, summoned Mike to the palatial Allison home next day. There Alice reproached him bitterly, hurling charges of neglect and deceit which dumfounded the amazed boy.

Finally, hurt and angry, she plunged into a denunciation of little Eleanor Harris.

"It's not so much your ignoring me," she raved, "but to be going about with that ordinary person. She doesn't belong. She's only a parasite. She's common. . . ."

Mike flushed with resentment and lifted a hand to stay the tirade, but Alice plunged on.

"You might at least preserve your self-respect. You can't if you're seen with her."

But Mike turned on his heel and walked out—out on eighty millions of dollars—out on the heiress of New York's aristocracy.

He was just plain disgusted.

And that night he went out with Eleanor again.

IT was a red eyed and penitent Alice who called his hotel next morning, but Mike had departed. He had returned to his gray walls and plunged again into the endless drills and recitations which fit Uncle Sam's officers to lead their men on bloody battlefields.

But a photograph adorned the top shelf of the tall locker which constitutes the chief article of furniture in the monastically plain rooms of the cadets. And it was not the portrait of Alice Allison. Neither was it the vision of her radiant beauty which danced before his eyes as he swung along among his gray clad comrades at drill.

Alice tried once more, and a dainty missive went speeding up the river which bore a message of reconciliation.

That night Mike sat at his little table and carefully composed his answer.

"If this correspondence is to continue," one sentence ran, "you should know that the young lady to whom you referred so slightingly means a great deal to me. And my opinion of any one who snubs her just about coincides with that which you expressed concerning her."

That ended the affair. Mike had given the gate to the Allison millions and a social position which might have meant much to him.

Alice plunged at once into the whirl of society and soon after wedded one of the social eligibles who danced attendance upon her. And her doings are chronicled almost daily in the journals of the city.

But the doings of Mike Hastings are chronicled only in army orders. Yet when he comes to New York now, making his yearly pilgrimage to the Army-Navy game, as all good West Pointers do, he signs the hotel register:

"Lieutenant and Mrs. M. Hastings."

And Eleanor seems to like the army life.

Make Amazing Gray Hair Test

In 10 minutes natural shade begins to return. This test is free. New, colorless, water-like liquid makes this way safe and simple.

GRAY hair is proved unnecessary. A new safe way, called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer, has been found to bring back natural shade—to remove the faded streaks and restore graying parts.

Over 10,000,000 women have used it as the sure way to avoid detection. They urge it because it's safe. Those who know will warn you not to use the crude, messy old-time dyes. This is clean and colorless. Will not wash or rub off. You simply comb it through the hair.

Gray hair lacks color pigment. This way takes its place, and gives the natural effect. If hair is auburn, it will revert to auburn; if black, to black.

Test it free if you wish. Simply write for special outfit. Or go to nearest druggist. A few cents' worth restores color perfectly. Money returned if not amazed and delighted.

ADY ESTHER
Four-Purpose Face Cream

THE BLACK ABBOT by Edgar Wallace

THE STORY THUS FAR:

HARRY, LORD CHELFORD, occupies Fossaway Manor with his half brother, Dick. Lord Chelford is engaged to Leslie Gwyn, whose brother, Arthur, is his solicitor. Dick engages a detective, Puttler, to investigate the rumored appearance of the Black Abbot, supposed to haunt the ruins of an old abbey. Some one fires several shots at Leslie as she walks the grounds. The hidden Chelford treasure is sought by Gwyn and by his clerk, Fabrian Gilder. Gilder and Gwyn engage in a fist fight when they meet at night in their search. Gwyn discharges Gilder. The latter, writing with vanishing ink, promises to marry Mary Wenner, Chelford's former secretary, if she will lead him to the treasure. The girl restores the letter to legibility after it fades. A hooded figure frightens Gilder and Mary from the treasure room in the abbey. Later Gilder finds the cylinders supposedly filled with gold have been removed, except one, which contains an art treasure, a priceless missal. Leslie, in love with Dick, breaks off her engagement to Chelford. Thomas, a footman and an ex-convict, is discharged when detected in theft. Gwyn has gambled away Leslie's fortune of 250,000 pounds and 50,000 pounds in securities from the estate of Chelford's mother. Thomas learns by eavesdropping of Arthur's predicament and reveals it to Gilder, who has enlisted the ex-convict's aid. Gilder proposes to Leslie, offering to square Arthur's accounts. Dick, for love of Leslie, attempts vainly to raise money to cover the defalcations. Leslie posts a letter of acceptance to Gilder, but it remains in the letter box because Thomas damages the lock trying to rob it. Dick persuades her to delay action.. Thomas is found slain in the manor grounds and Chelford disappears.

INSTALLMENT XIV.

Dick Is Mysterious.

GILDER walked carelessly into the little library and found Arthur Gwyn sitting in one of the easiest chairs, a book in his hand, a half smoked cigar between his teeth.

"Good morning, Gilder."

His voice was cheerful and almost amiable, and for a moment Mr. Gilder's heart leaped. This was a friendly ambassador sent by the girl to make the necessary arrangements.

"I think we'd better forget all that's passed," said Arthur. "We both lost our temper, and there's no sense in keeping the old trouble alive. You don't mind my smoking?"

He replaced the book he had taken from one of the shelves, dusted his knees carefully, and then laughed.

"You're thinking of marrying Leslie, I understand?"

Gilder nodded, watching his visitor closely.

"Expecting a letter from her? Well, I'm afraid you won't get it."

"Why not?" asked the other, with a sudden tightening at his heart.

"Because friend Thomas, who spent the evening in wholesale robbery—incidentally, he stole a very ancient dagger from my hall, a silver teapot, and a few other etceteras—added to his infamy by attempting to rob a letter box. He didn't succeed in opening the box, but he put the lock out of order."

Gilder breathed again.

"So there was no collection, eh?" he said huskily. "Well, that is rather a relief."

There was a quizzical smile in Arthur Gwyn's eyes; the discoloration on the left cheek had faded to a pale green.

"I understand you're going to help me?"

"I am going to get you out of your trouble, yes."

"It occurred to me"—Arthur leaned sideways and very carefully dusted the ash of his cigar into a silver tray on the library table—"it occurred to me that you might care to give me proof and evidence of your good feeling."

"I don't understand you," said Gilder.

Arthur hesitated.

"I wondered whether you would write me a letter to the effect that you are lending me this very large sum. You see, Gilder, although you plan to marry my sister, I am vain enough to wish that it should not be regarded as a gift or the price—the price of her marriage—but as a loan to me." He laughed. "Don't look at me like that, my dear fellow. I am not asking you for money; I am seeking a salve to my conscience. I don't want people to say 'Leslie Gwyn was sold for fifty thousand pounds.' I want to produce evidence that you did no more than lend me the money."

A slow smile dawned on Gilder's face.

"There's no objection to that," he said. "I'll give it to you now, if you like. Do you mind if I address you as 'Dear—Arthur'?"

"Charmed," murmured Arthur.

"One has to keep up the pretense of friendliness," said Gilder as he wrote rapidly; "and, really, I've no strong feeling against you, Gwyn. You've been a useful man to me."

"Damned useful," said Arthur, without heat.

The man blotted the letter, brought it across, and Arthur Gwyn read it carefully.

"Thank you," he said, folded, and put it into his pocket. "You may think I'm rather weak—which, of course, I am—and vain: I'm afraid there's no doubt about that! You will hear from Leslie when the mail box is cleared—that is, if the letters are intact. There is some suspicion that our friend Thomas, baffled in his attempt to open the box, and inspired with that instinct for destruction which is one of the characteristics of the unbalanced criminal, threw in a couple of lighted matches. I had the curiosity to smell at the letter slot, and I think it is very likely that the police theory is correct."

He rose, took up his silk hat, and stifled a yawn.

"We've had rather an exciting night in my part of the world. You've probably read all about it in the newspapers?"

"Has Chelford been found?"

Arthur shook his head.

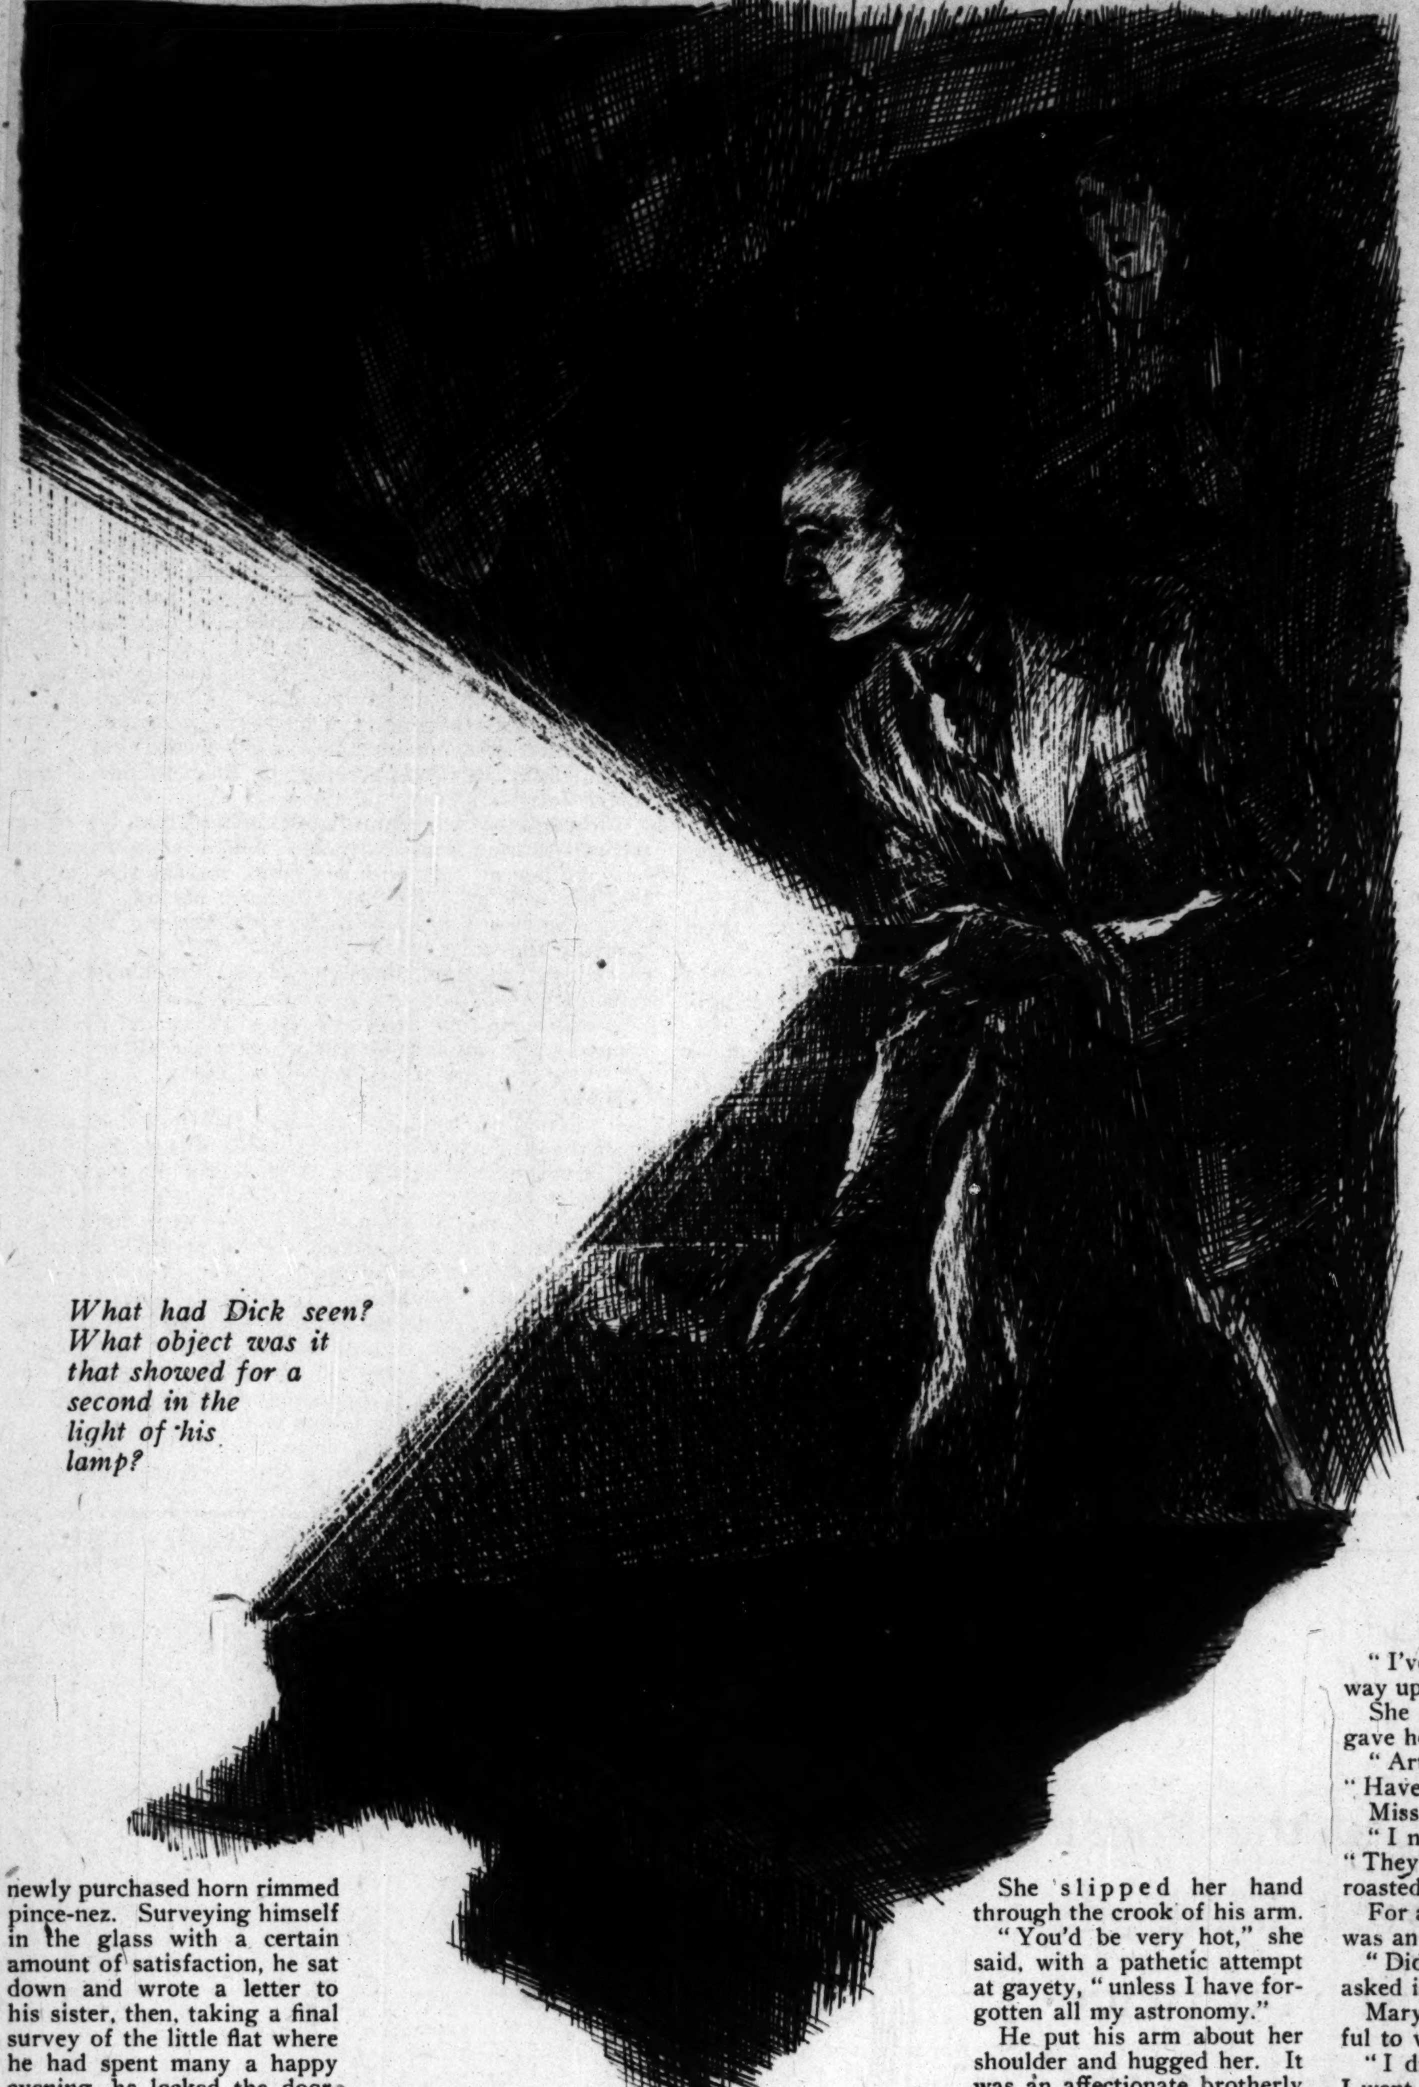
"Not at the time I left," he said. "Unfortunately Leslie was a witness, if not to the murder, to the finding of the first body. The poor little girl was knocked all to pieces. Don't bother her for a day or two—do you mind?"

He held out his hand and Gilder took the soft, cool palm in his.

"I think we shall get on together, Gwyn."

"I'm sure we shall," said Arthur. "Do you mind showing me the way out? Your flat is rather like a box of tricks, and I'm never sure which is a door and which is a cupboard."

Arthur dispensed with his car. A taxicab took him into the city, and another cab to a small flat in Gray's Inn, where he slept when he was in town. He changed into a plain blue suit, carefully and reluctantly shaved off his mustache, and took from his pocket a pair of newly purchased horn rimmed pince-nez. Surveying himself in the glass with a certain amount of satisfaction, he sat down and wrote a letter to his sister, then, taking a final survey of the little flat where he had spent many a happy evening, he locked the door, went out, and posted the letter in the Holborn post-office.



What had Dick seen? What object was it that showed for a second in the light of his lamp?

Another taxicab took him to Croydon aerodrome, where he arrived in the early afternoon. He showed the officer his brand new passport.

"That's in order, Mr. Steele," said the official. "Your taxi is waiting."

His "taxi" was a sturdy two seater airplane. Five minutes after his arrival he was zooming up to the blue and was soon a speck in the hazy sky, heading for France, possibly for Genoa, as likely as not, by an Italian liner, for Rio de Janeiro. Everything depended on how Mr. Fabrian Gilder swallowed the pill which Arthur had administered.

"BURNT," said Dick, with considerable satisfaction. "The poor brute did some good in his life—heaven forgive me for speaking ill of him. Where is your Arthur?"

"My Arthur went to town very early," said Leslie. "There is no news of Harry?"

He shook his head.

"None," he said.

He looked dreadfully tired and broken, she thought.

"I'm so sorry!" He took her hand and patted it.

"I wish you would go away somewhere, Leslie," he said. "Couldn't you take a long voyage?"

"Why?" she asked.

"I want you out of the way. I don't exactly know why, but I'm rather worried about you. Get Arthur——"

He stopped. It was quite possible that Arthur would not be a free agent at the end of the week; and, reading his thoughts, she smiled, sadly.

"What am I to do about Mr. Gilder?"

"Let him write. He is hardly likely to leave you in peace. But you understand, of course, that until Harry is found there is no danger to your brother. Until he appears no action can be taken."

She looked at him pityingly.

"Do you think he is alive?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied, shortly. "Puttler doesn't think so, but I do. We are dragging the Ravensrill today, but it is not deep enough to hide—a body."

He covered his face with his hands.

"I wish I were a million miles away, perched on some solitary star," he said, wearily.

She slipped her hand through the crook of his arm.

"You'd be very hot," she said, with a pathetic attempt at gayety, "unless I have forgotten all my astronomy."

He put his arm about her shoulder and hugged her. It was an affectionate brotherly hug, and no more.

"You've got to go away, my dear. What about the prosaic Bournemouth? Or the vulgar but wholesome Margate?"

Again she shook her head.

"Or London, which I am told is a health resort?"

"You're very anxious for me to go, really?"

"Very," he said, with an emphasis that betrayed his concern.

She drew back from him and faced him.

"Dick, will you tell me something without any evasion?"

He nodded.

"Do you think that I am in any personal danger?"

"I am sure of it," he said. "It would be cruel not to tell you the truth. The shot that was fired the other day was intended for you. It was fired by a man who is as brilliant a shot as any in England, and the height of the bullet mark told us that it was aimed directly at your heart."

She listened, stupefied, unbelieving.

"But why?" she asked, bewildered. "I have no enemies, Dick; I have wronged nobody. Who could do such a wicked thing?"

"If I told you, you would perhaps be no wiser," he said. "There is a man in this world who hates you and hates me, and has good reason, from his point of view. Now that I've told you the truth, will you go?"

She thought a while.

"I'll wait until Arthur comes back," she said, "and ask him to take me to London."

And with that he was satisfied.

He was leaving the house when Puttler's cycle swung into the drive.

"Anything wrong?" asked Dick, quickly.

"I don't know. Look at this."

He took from his pocket a large sheet of foolscap paper; roughly printed in pencil were the words: "Lord Chelford is safe. Don't search for him, or he will be killed. The Black Abot."

The word "Abbot" was printed with one "b." The placard had been found hanging to the twig of a tree, the jagged hole at the top showing where the mystery man had threaded the paper.

"We found it half way between the ruins and the house," said Puttler. "Curiously enough, we had only been searching that part of the grounds a quarter of an hour before."

Dick handed the warning back to him.

"Is that a bad joke or do you believe this paper?" asked Leslie, anxiously. "And, Dick, couldn't I be some help? I know Fossaway Manor so well, and I am sure there must be places where the police haven't looked. Do you know there are tiny caves in the banks of the Ravensrill?"

"They've all been searched, and they're not big enough to hold a large sized dog," said Dick. "If you want to be helpful, you can come up to the manor and put my correspondence in order. I am afraid it has been neglected in these days, and there are a whole lot of bills and things to be entered up."

He had no real need for her, he thought, but while she was in the neighborhood he was anxious that she should be under his eye. She may have suspected something of this, but she gratefully accepted the offer.

"Drive up," he warned her; "keep to the main road and the main drive. Don't stop for anybody, however well you know them, and take no notice if you hear somebody shout at you."

In spite of her anxiety, she laughed.

"How very alarming that sounds!"

AFTER he had gone she busied herself with the affairs of the house, arranged the dinner for that night, and was on the point of leaving when somebody rang the front door bell. She was putting on her hat before the mirror in her bedroom when the maid came up.

"Miss Wenner?" cried Leslie, aghast, and only then did she remember that at Arthur's request she had written inviting the girl to spend the week-end with them.

Here was a complication she had not foreseen. And yet, in the space between her room and the hall, she had made up her mind that if there was one thing she welcomed at this moment it was the society of a woman.

Mary Wenner was in the hall and greeted her as effusively as if they had been bosom friends, though in truth Leslie scarcely knew the girl.

"My dear, I'm so glad to be back in this lovely old country!" she said. "I couldn't help thinking, as I was driving past dear old Fossaway Manor, how perfectly peaceful everything is!"

Leslie could have screamed! Peaceful!

"Perhaps it isn't quite as peaceful as it looks, Miss Wenner," she said, dryly.

"Call me Mary," begged the girl. "I do so dislike formalism and standoffness! It will be so awkward if Arthur calls me by my name and you call me 'Miss,' I mean."

"Well, I'll call you Mary with pleasure," said Leslie. "I think you know my name."

"A beautiful name," said the ecstatic Miss Wenner. "The only thing against it is you can't tell whether it's a boy's or a girl's, can you? Don't you sometimes find that very embarrassing."

"I've never found it so yet," said the girl, leading the way up to her room.

She waited till Mary had taken off her hat before she gave her news.

"Arthur is in town, but he'll be back tonight," she said. "Have you seen the newspapers?"

Miss Wenner shook her head vigorously.

"I never read the newspapers," she said, reprovingly. "They're always full of lies, and after the way they roasted me over my breach——" She coughed.

For a moment Leslie had a wild idea that the reference was an indelicate one, and then the truth came to her.

"Did you ever have a breach of promise action?" she asked in astonishment.

Mary was very red, and her embarrassment was painful to witness.

"I did have a little trouble with a young gentleman I went to business with," she admitted. "I was a mere girl at the time, young and silly, as it were, and I must say that I felt that I had to stand up for my rights. A lot of people think it was unladylike, but I say that a girl who is an orphan without parents must look after herself. I got fifty pounds, and it wasn't worth the trouble and the nuisance."

There was something about the girl that Leslie liked. Unconsciously she was amusing, but there was a sterling value in her, she thought, and Leslie had an uncanny knowledge of women.

"No, I never read the papers, Miss Gwyn. After being told by the Daily Megaphone that I had a curious mentality—I shall never forget those words—I've given up the papers."

"Then you haven't heard what has happened at Fossaway Manor?" asked Leslie.

The startled girl listened, her mouth an O of amazement and horror.

"Thomas? Why, I was only talking with him the other day! You don't think Harry is killed?"

Leslie shook her head.

"I don't know what to think. Mr. Alford is very confident that he is still alive, and they have just received a strange message which seems to bear that out."

The girl was shocked, and Leslie could not help feeling that she was hurt, too.

"Harry Chelford was the best fellow in the world," said Mary, quietly. "He was a little irritable and difficult to get on with—you don't mind me talking about him?"

"No," said Leslie. "You probably do not know that our engagement was broken off?"

This seemed to be a greater shock still.

"Broken off? I'll bet that was Dick Alford's doing——"

"Mr. Alford had nothing to do with it," said Leslie, and Mary made a rapid re-estimation of Dick Alford's character; and she was eminently adjustable.

"Dick Alford is not a bad fellow really," she said diplomatically. "There is a great deal about him that I like. And he is so good looking!"

She was a shrewd, discerning gamin who had won through by her ability to adjust her views at a moment's notice. And in a fraction of a second she had realized that perfect harmony with Arthur Gwyn's sister could only be insured, if her views on Richard Alford underwent a very thorough reorganization.

"I didn't get on very well with him; I used to think he was a bit overbearing. But it must have been rather a trial for him, poor fellow!" A pause, and then: "I seem to have come at a pretty bad time, Miss—Leslie. Would you like me to go back to London?"

"Wait," said her hostess, and, running downstairs, called Dick on the phone. He had just returned to the house as she rang.

"Surely," he said. "Bring her up. I think that would be rather a good idea. And, Leslie, perhaps you would like to stay here the night. Arthur can come along, too—you might leave him a note or wire him."

The idea was so appealing that she put no obstacles in the way, and returned to carry Dick's invitation to her guest. Miss Wenner accepted with an alacrity that was almost indelicate.

"I may be able to be of some help," she said. "I know the ins and outs of that place, and all the nooks and crannies. It is the treasure that's done it all, Leslie! He was always after that silly Life Water, and I shouldn't be surprised if he has got into bad company."

"But Harry never went out."

"O, yes, he did," was the surprising reply. "He often slipped off to London when Mr. Alford was away. And there was something queer about it, because Harry made me promise never to tell Mr. Richard, as he called him."

"How often did that happen?" asked Leslie.

"Sometimes once a month, sometimes twice or three times a month. He never went to the front drive; he followed the field path through the cutting, and I used to arrange for a Horsham motor cab to meet him. He used to go from Horsham and come back the same way, and I've known him to ring me up before he came back, to ask me if Mr. Richard had returned."

Leslie wondered if Dick knew this.

"I've known him to go as many as three times a week when Mr. Richard was up in Yorkshire, looking after the Doncaster estate," added Mary, and, virtuously, "I hope I have not let any cats out of the bag: all young men are a bit wild."

THE adaptability of Miss Wenner was never more strikingly illustrated than in her greeting of Dick Alford. There was a coyness, a shy friendliness, in her glance which might have deceived an uninitiated spectator into believing that they were old lovers, parted by cruel circumstances and meeting after an absence of years. Dick, weary and heartbroken as he was, found in her the first cause for amusement he had had in twenty-four hours.

He had had rooms prepared for them in the east wing, which was opposite to that in which his own room and Harry's were situated. There were two small apartments with a connecting door, which he had assigned to Leslie and her guest. The next room had been prepared for Arthur, and was adjoining.

"I've moved Puttler to this wing, too," he explained, "though I don't suppose the poor fellow will get very much sleep for a night or two."

After he had shown them the rooms he took his departure, and Leslie followed him along the corridor and overtook him at the head of the stairs.

"There is really nothing I can do, I suppose, Dick?" For she had accepted the story of the disordered accounts as being a plausible excuse on his part to get her to Fossaway Manor.

To her surprise he said "Yes," and took her below to the study.

"Here are the estate accounts. I haven't touched them for three or four days. Do you know anything about figures?"

She nodded wisely.

"Will you start in by checking these wage sheets? You'll find the books on the shelf, and you will be able to get the hang of my rather simple system."

He gave her instructions how to deal with the bills that had accumulated, and left her very contented. It was half an hour before she remembered that she had left Mary Wenner in her room, and hurried upstairs to apologize. She was to find Mary a very capable assistant, for not only was the girl efficient in her work but she knew all the domestic mysteries of Fossaway.

The two girls lunched alone, for Dick had sent a message to say that he would not be back in time.

"The place gives me the creeps," said Mary, with a shudder, and her nervousness was not affectation. "The whole thing is frightful! Poor Thomas killed, and Harry taken away, heaven knows where—O!" She sprang to her feet, and her face had gone pale. "I know where Harry is," she said, quivering with excitement. "I know, I know!"

"Where?" asked the wondering Leslie.

The girl ran out of the room into the hall.

"Where is Mr. Alford?" she asked quickly. "I must see him at once."

"He telephoned from Red Farm," said Leslie. "Perhaps we can get him."

She turned the handle of the old fashioned instrument and gave the Red Farm number.

"Is that you, Dick? How lucky!"

"I expected it was you. Is anything wrong?" he asked, anxiously.

"No; Mary Wenner has something she wants to tell you." She lowered her voice. "She thinks she knows where Harry is hidden."

There was a silence at the other end.

"She's not——"

"No, no, no." With Mary within earshot, it was impossible to assure Dick that the girl was not trying to make a sensation.

"I'll come over right away," he said.

They went out to the head of the drive to meet him, and Mary offered her theory.

"I must have been mad not to have told you about this before. I don't know where my wits have gone," she said. "After all my treasure hunting and the horrible experience I had that night with Gilder, and not to think of it now, when I practically came down to show Mr. Gwyn the place . . . well, I'm surprised at myself!"

Dick listened with growing impatience to this preliminary.

"Where do you think my brother is?"

"Where?" said Miss Wenner, triumphantly. "Why, under the Abbey—that's where. I'll show you."

They walked side by side across the meadow, and as they went Miss Wenner related the startling story of her adventures after treasure.

"Of course, I always knew that it didn't belong to me, even if I found it," she said, virtuously; "but Mr. Gilder was so very pressing that I couldn't very well refuse him, especially after what he'd written in vanishing ink, though I've got the ink back again, as he'll find out one of these days."

Leslie listened, scarcely crediting her ears. Yet, unless Mary Wenner had an imagination of a particularly inventive nature, it was hardly likely that she could have made the story up.

DICK examined the great cornerstone of the tower. He stood by, watching curiously, whilst, with a pair of scissors which she took from her bag, the girl pressed back the catch and sent the cornerstone turning noisily on its invisible hinges.

The opening was between twelve and fifteen inches wide. A stout man could never have entered by that way, as Dick pointed out.

"You had better stay here; I'll go down," he said.

"You'll want a light," warned Mary.

There was a lamp in his pocket. He had spent the morning peering into impossible dark places. In a second he had disappeared down the moss grown stairs, and Leslie waited with palpitating heart for his reappearance. Presently they heard his voice.

"Come down."

"Not me," said Mary, hastily. "I've been there once, thank you!"

And Leslie went alone, guided by the light he showed from step to step.

Now she was standing with him in the vaulted room. He tried first one and then the other of the two doors leading from the antechamber, but neither yielded to his touch. It was pitch dark save for the fan shaped ray of the lamp. He swept the light along wall and floor, and presently she saw the focus halt upon a broken flagstone.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Nothing," he said, quickly. He had moved the light to the narrow entrance of the room. "Up you go; there is nothing here but mice and memories. I have always known there were underground vaults in the abbey. In fact, I think there was a report on them by one of my recent forebears."

Although he was immediately behind her, his voice seemed to come from a distance. She was walking, and he gave her no help with his lamp, so that she had to feel her way up. Turning her head, she saw that he was ascending the stairs backwards, keeping the light covering the stairs below.

"Hurry," he said, tersely, and she stumbled up the remaining steps and emerged into the blessed daylight.

It was some time before he joined them, and when he came out she saw that he was white to the lips.

"What did you see, Dick?" she asked.

He shook his head.

"Nothing," he said, and slammed the stone door tight.

Of the little party only Miss Wenner was unaffected by the atmosphere which Dick Alford brought from that vaulted room.

". . . so far as Mr. Gilder said—and I don't trust the man entirely, as you can well understand, Leslie—there were only pieces of music in lead cylinders—that was the word, 'cylinders.' To me they looked rather more like rolls. And this Black Abbot must have cleared them out while we had gone. Mr. Gilder was disappointed. In fact, he was quite rude to me over the telephone. I do think a gentleman should keep his temper in all circumstances, don't you, dear?"

Leslie agreed mechanically.

What had Dick seen? What object was it that showed for a second in the light of his lamp?

Near to the house he made an excuse to them. He had to go back to Red Farm to finish his interview with the obstinate Mr. Leonard; but he did not take his car. He said he would take the short cut, and Leslie thought it was not the moment to question him. She watched him until he disappeared in the fold of the ground. He was heading for the abbey. The other girl had gone in to finish her lunch, and Leslie hesitated. The thought of his going back to that dark room again filled her with blind panic. She wanted to call out to him and bring him back, but he was out of hearing now, and she obeyed an impulse and went after him.

He was not in sight until she climbed the second of the gentle slopes. Here she stopped; he might resent being overlooked, and she lay down on the grass, watching. She saw him come to the square tower, pause at the corner, and disappear, apparently into space. From such a distance the effect of his entry was eerie. The entrance was so small that he seemed to melt into the solid stonework. Ten minutes passed, a quarter of an hour, and then a long, interminable wait; she heard the village clock strike two. A lark in the blue was singing his passionate song; over by Red Farm a donkey was braying—a ludicrous accompaniment to what might be stark tragedy.

She was on the point of rising and running across to the ruins, to follow him into the depths, when he appeared again. He came slowly forth, turned, and closed the stone door and leaned against it, his head on his arm, a picture of tragic despair.

She stopped, and sank down on her knees, the better to escape observation, and presently he walked slowly away, and it was the gait of a broken man.

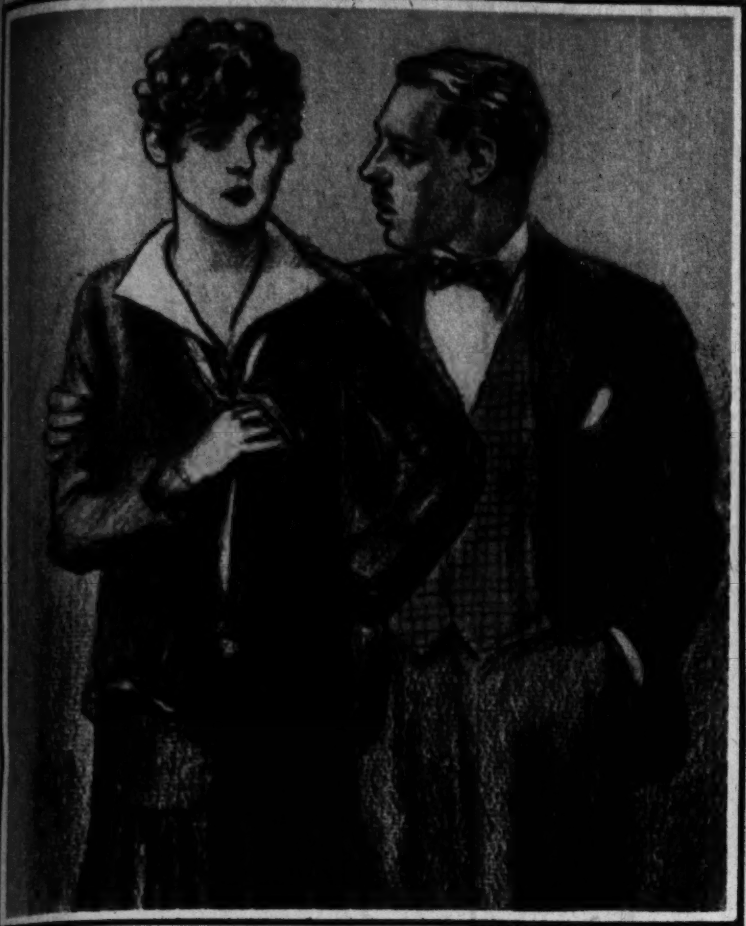
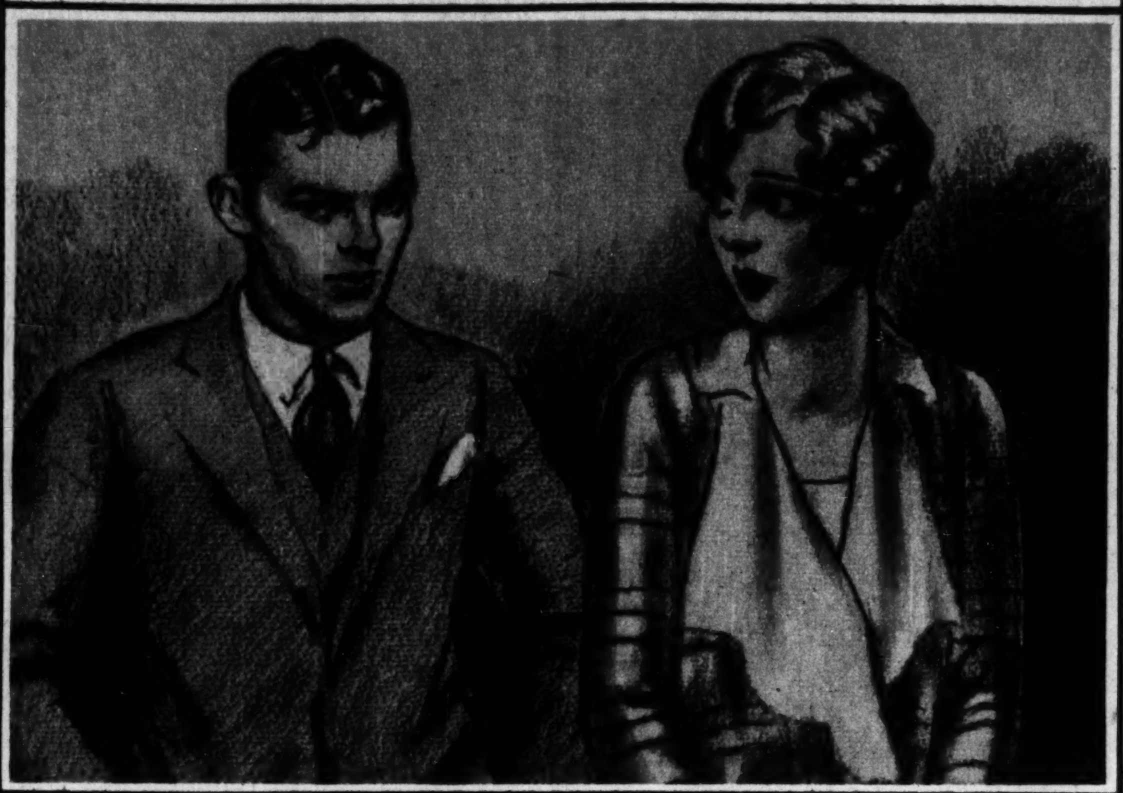
The Perfect Lover

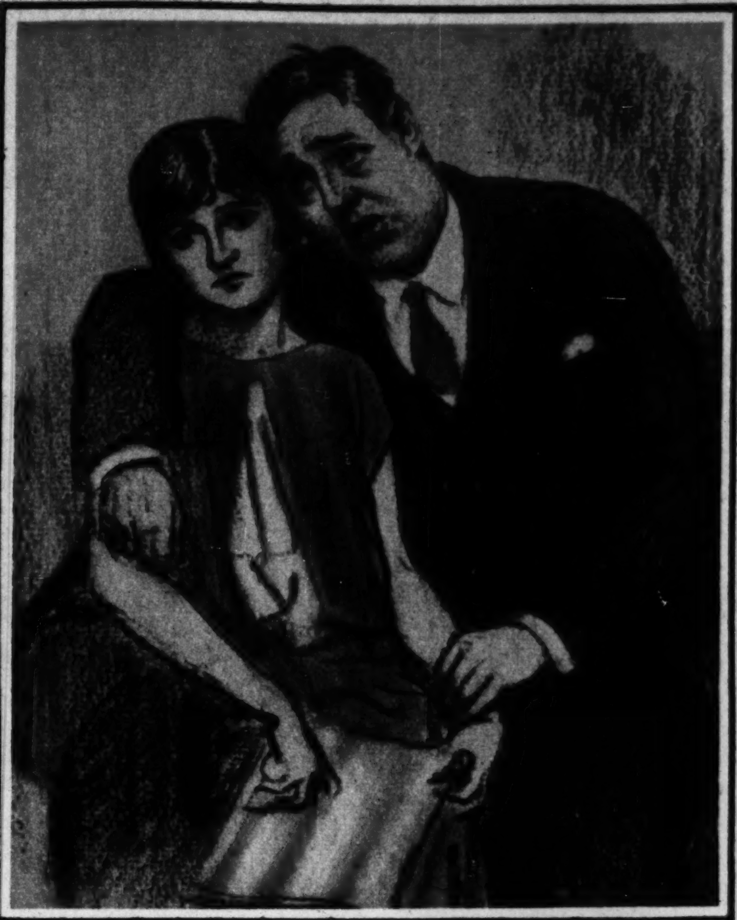
By W. E. Hill



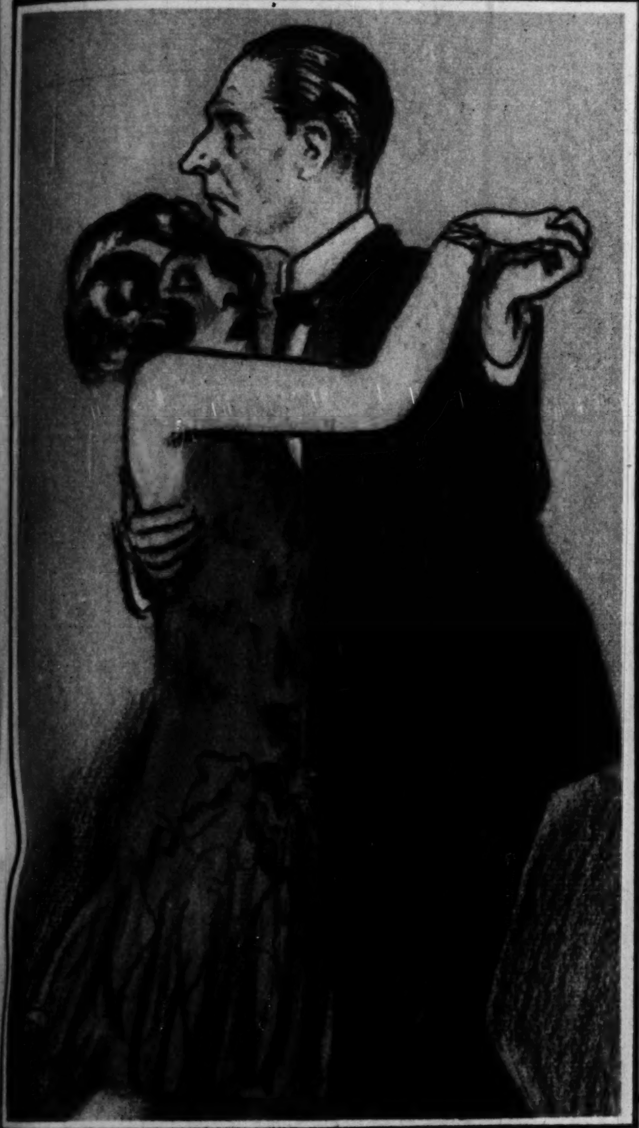
The jealous lover. The boy with the green eyes is forever demanding explanations. "Don't think you're putting anything over, Louise," he is telling his one and only. "You gave him an encouraging look. I saw you!" A jealous boy is no bargain.



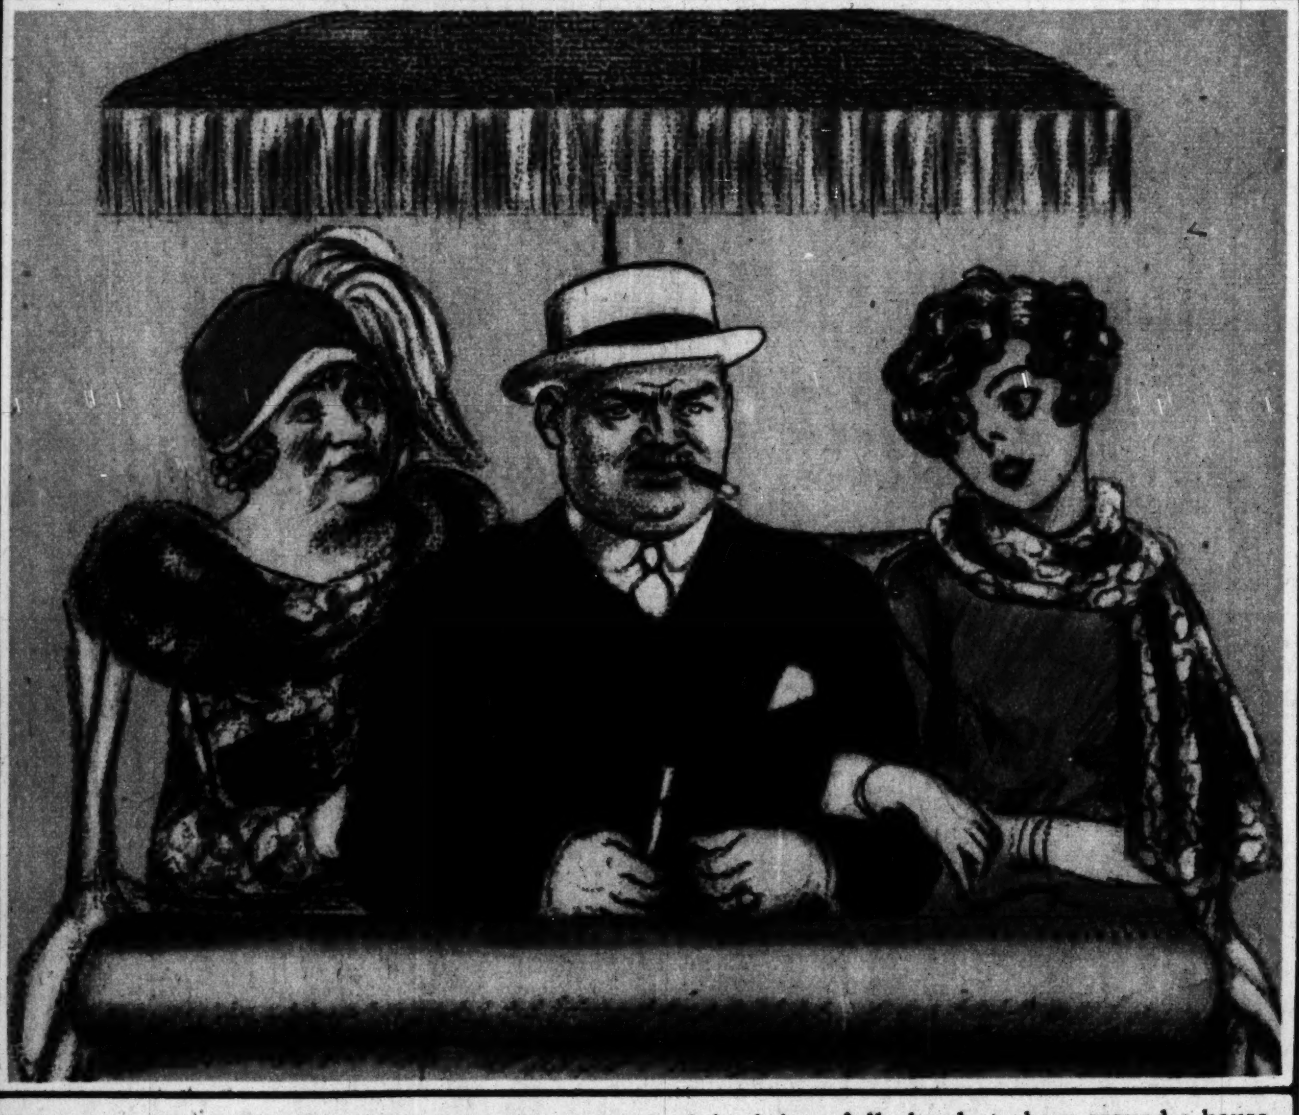
The still waters. The suitor with the far away look in his eye and not much to say is very intriguing. "O, Joe, what are you thinking about?" Mary asks. "Is it some other girl?" And she will never believe him when he owns up to thinking of nothing in particular.



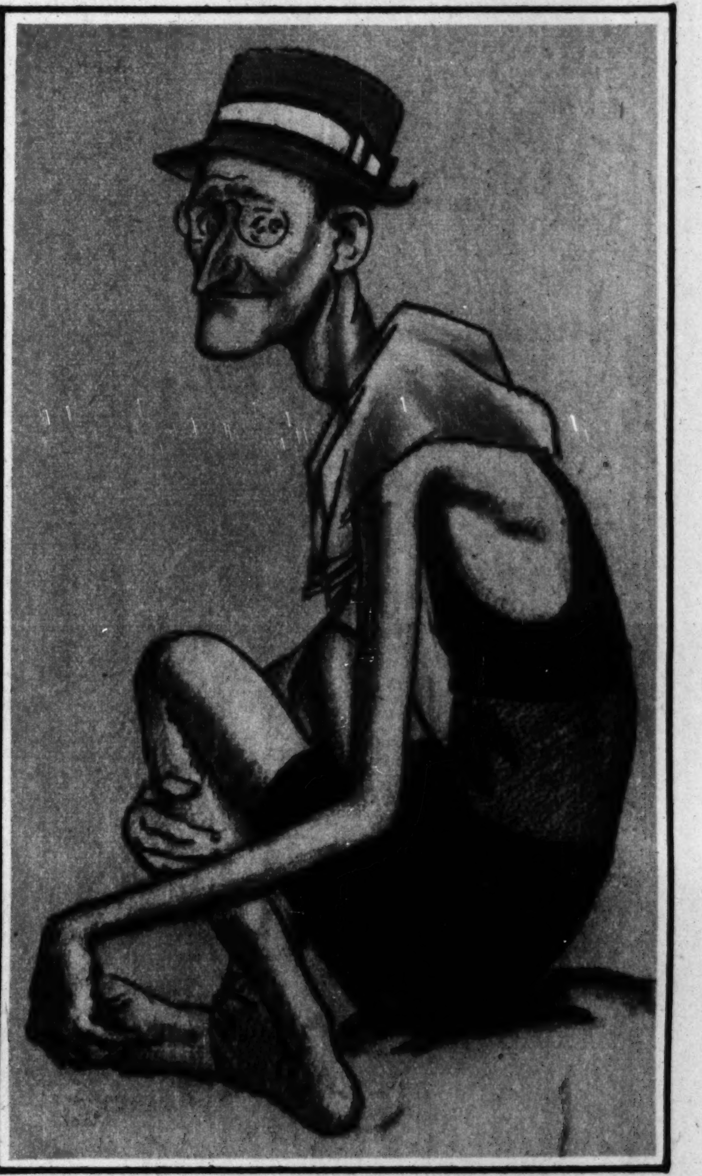
The clinging vine. Girls who are thinking of matrimony should be careful in picking a tower of strength to lean on all the rest of their lives. The bigger they are the heavier they lean when they come home after a day at "the works," all tired and let down.



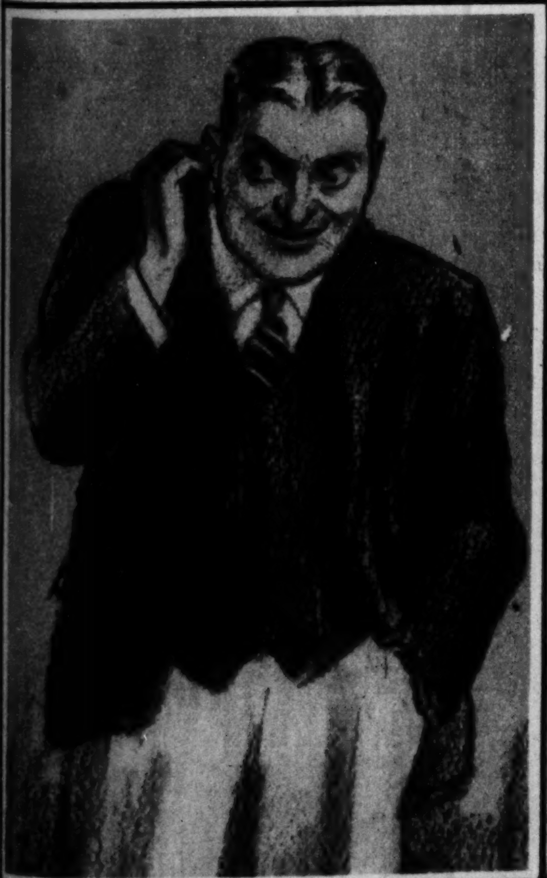
The delicate lover. A girl who likes to step out with the crowd now and then should beware of the suitor whose arches will stand just so much and no more. Twice around a dance floor and he will say, "Gee, Gertrude, let's sit down somewhere, my feet hurt me, and besides this room is stuffy as blazes!"



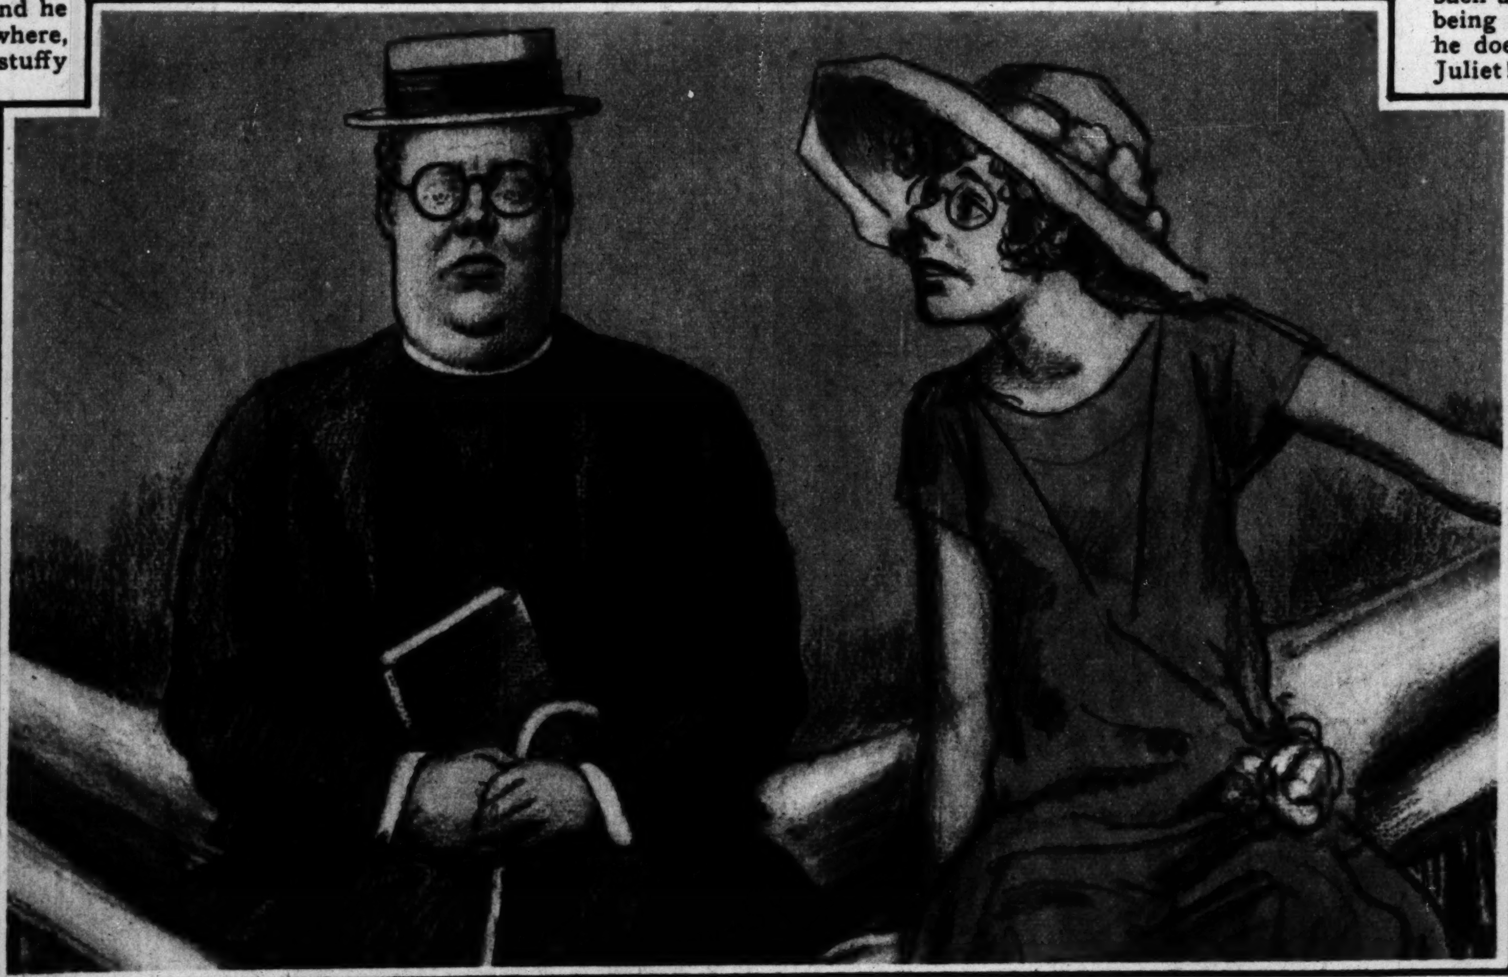
The wary lover. The elderly boy with the ready check book is awfully handy to have around a house, but extremely wary and hard to pin down. Even with mamma and daughter both on the watch, he will slip right through their fingers. Once caught he's grand.



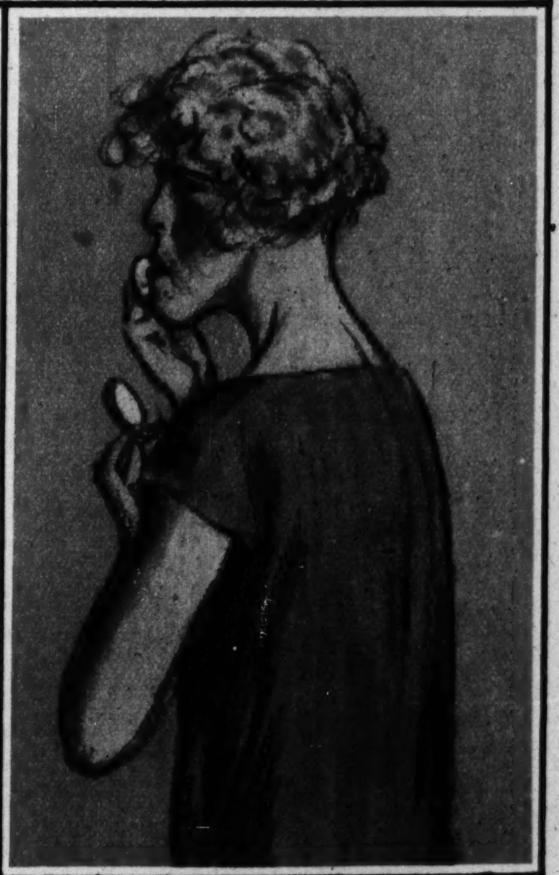
One cylinder love. Boy, page Mr. Cupid! Here's such a nice young man with no sex appeal at all being consciously alluring on the beach. O, how he does want to play Romeo to some nice girl's Juliet! No magnetism, but awfully affectionate.



The little tease. He likes to keep the only girl on the anxious seat. "Shall I tell your mother the one about the married couple and the plumber?" he asks roguishly, "or shall I give her the one about the cross-eyed man on the sleeper?"



The spiritual lure. Some like 'em hot and some like 'em cold. In other words, what's one girl's meat is another girl's poison. Jessie's suitor, the handsome young curate, is very spiritual and pleases Jessie to distraction, whereas another and jazzier girl might find Mr. Spool a flat tire. They have been discussing Mr. Spool's favorite book, "Walks and Talks with Ruth and Naomi." In the fall Jessie and Mr. Spool are going to be joined in holy wedlock. Jessie has never seen "Rain," so she has nothing to worry over.



Francie, the preferred blonde, is forever on the watch for Prince Charming, the perfection among lovers. And she is always writing to the daily papers for advice to the lovelorn.

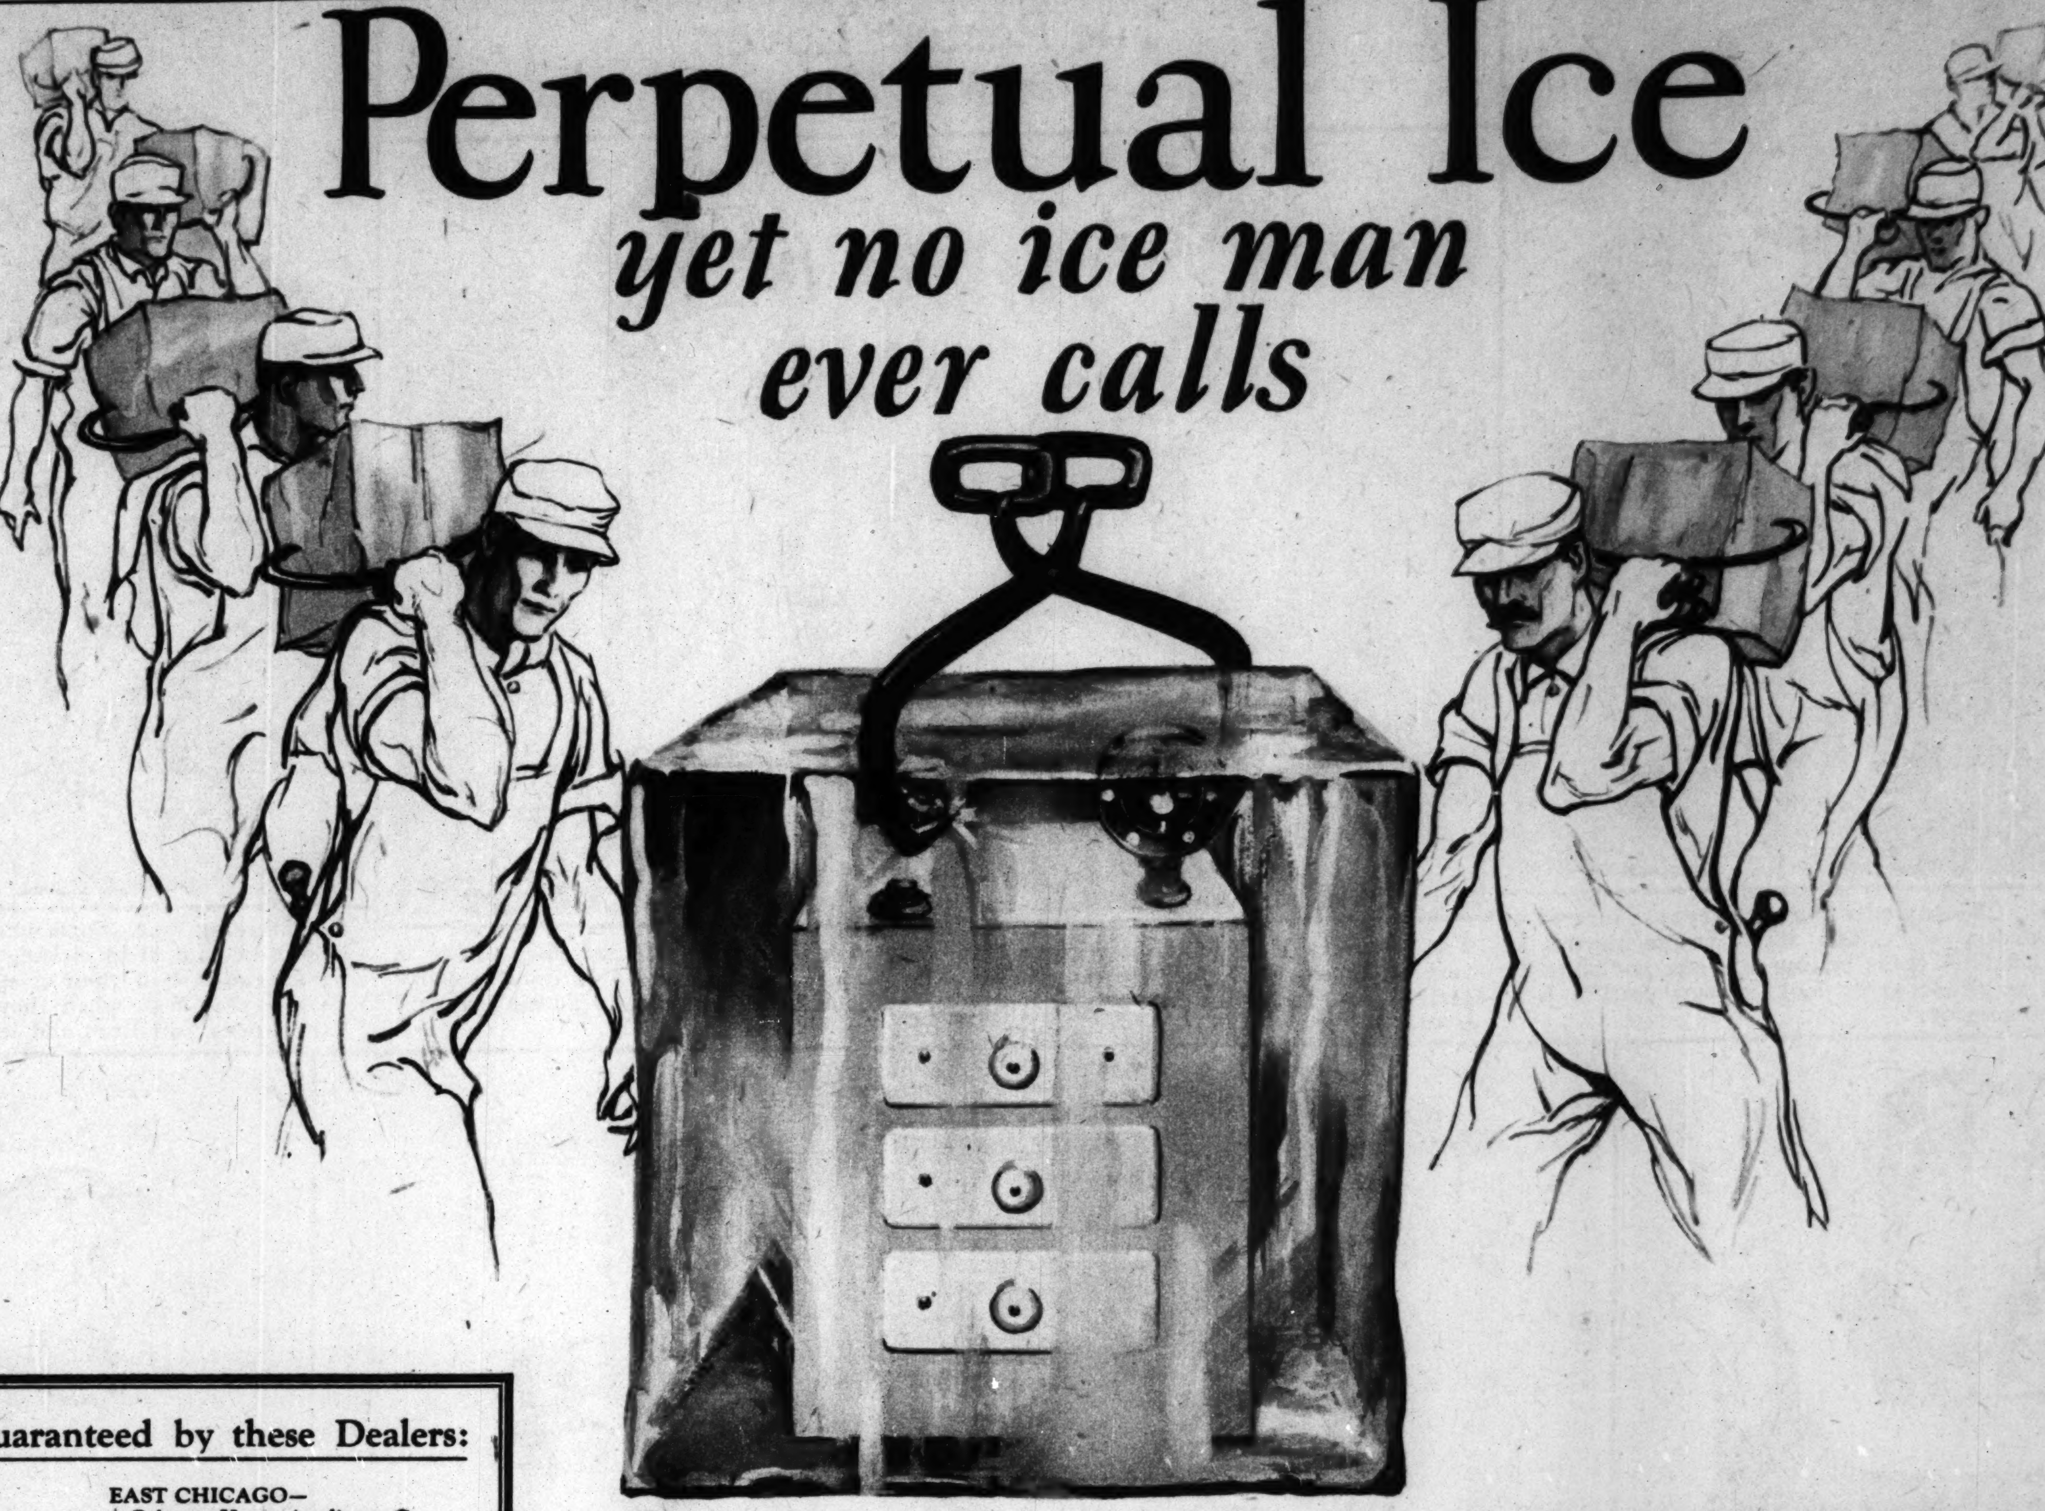
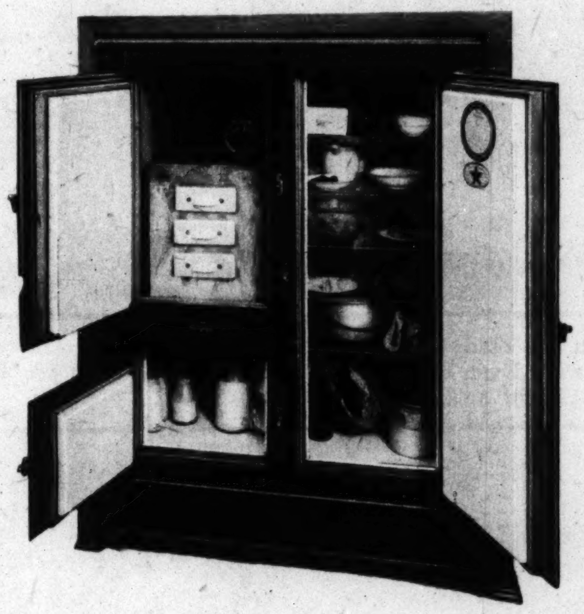
Perpetual Ice

yet no ice man ever calls



FORGET the bother and muss of old-fashioned ice. Like a cake of ice that never melts, Zerozone goes right into your present icebox, and electric refrigeration, automatic and dependable, will keep food properly chilled, at usually less than the cost of ice.

Day and night, week after week, you can depend upon Zerozone to give you constant dry, germ-proof cold, as crisp as polar air, preserving food for the family table in perfect condition at all times, without thought or care on your part.



Safeguards Health

Frequently, as every housewife knows, ice delivery fails, or the ice card is forgotten. Also, in hot weather with ordinary refrigeration, it is practically impossible to keep the ice chamber sufficiently iced, and food tends to become unfit for use, causing worry and expense. Zerozone eliminates all thought of weather, and of ice delivery. Forget the icebox entirely. Leave home when you wish; the family food is safely guarded until your return. Meats keep their full sweetness and flavor. Lettuce and vegetables remain crisp. Butter and cheese and similar products may be placed in contact with any other food, as odors are never transmitted in Zerozone dry air refrigeration.

$25 in Your Home

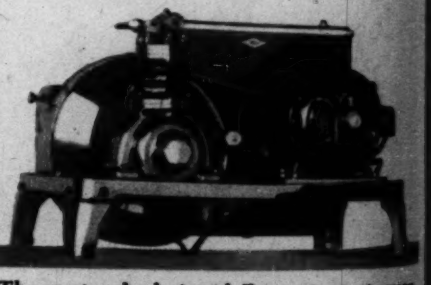
Twenty-five dollars will place Zerozone in your home, balance in convenient payments. The Zerozone dealer will inspect your present icebox and recommend the size to give you perfect refrigeration, without obligation. Easily and quickly installed, and operated from any convenient light socket. The Zerozone compressor may be placed wherever most convenient. If you prefer you may have Zerozone and icebox complete, with the compressor in the lower compartment, ideal for small apartments.

Ice Cubes for Table Use

Keep Zerozone trays full of table water, and use the dainty frozen cubes for the refreshing drink, or for sickness. More sanitary than chopped ice; no waste; no bother. Zerozone makes these dainty cubes automatically, as many trays full as you like. They are withdrawn from the freezing unit by means of a convenient handle.

Free to You

"The New Art in Iced Foods" gives you a choice of frozen delicacies, only possible with colder-than-ice refrigeration, from new and delightful recipes you will not find in your own cook-book. Mail the coupon for this book today and remember there is a Zerozone that will fit any icebox.



The compactly designed Zerozone compressor may be placed where most convenient

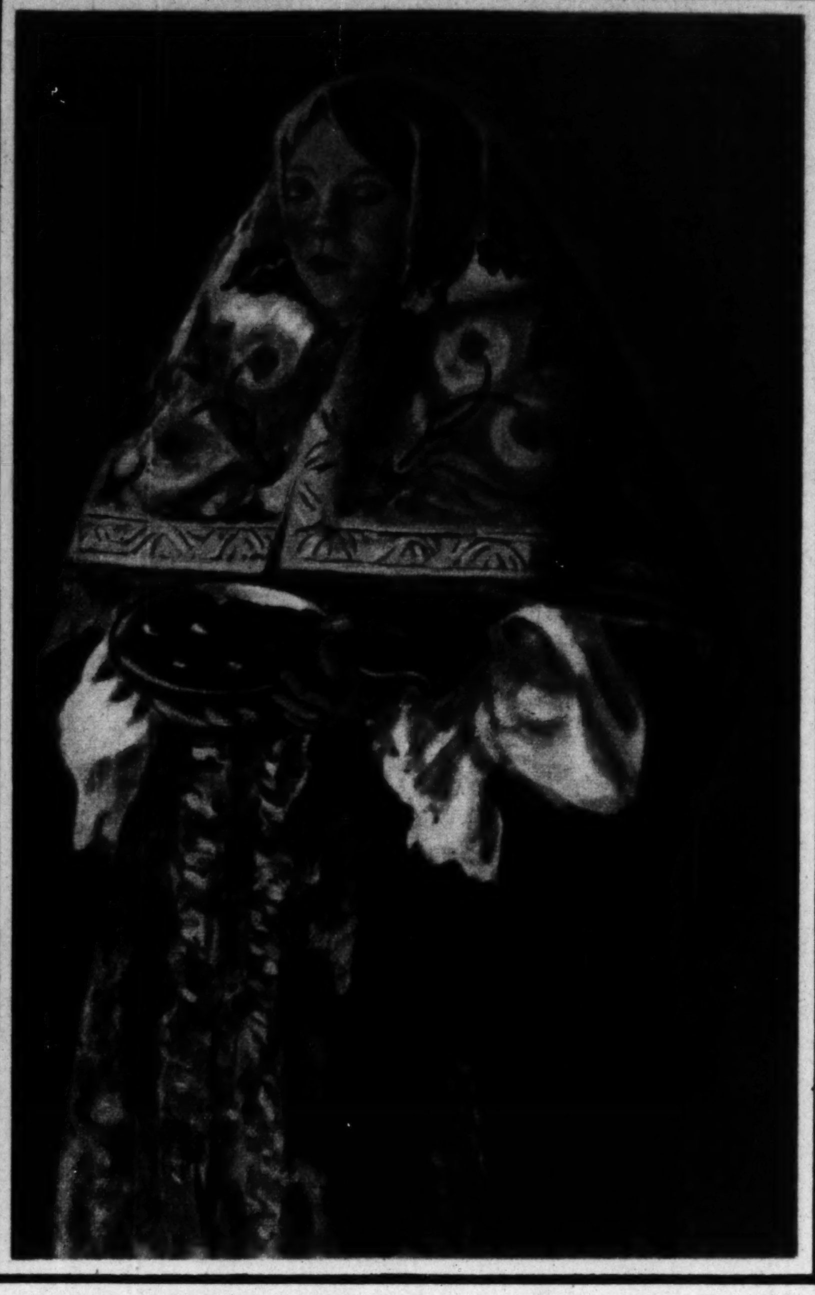
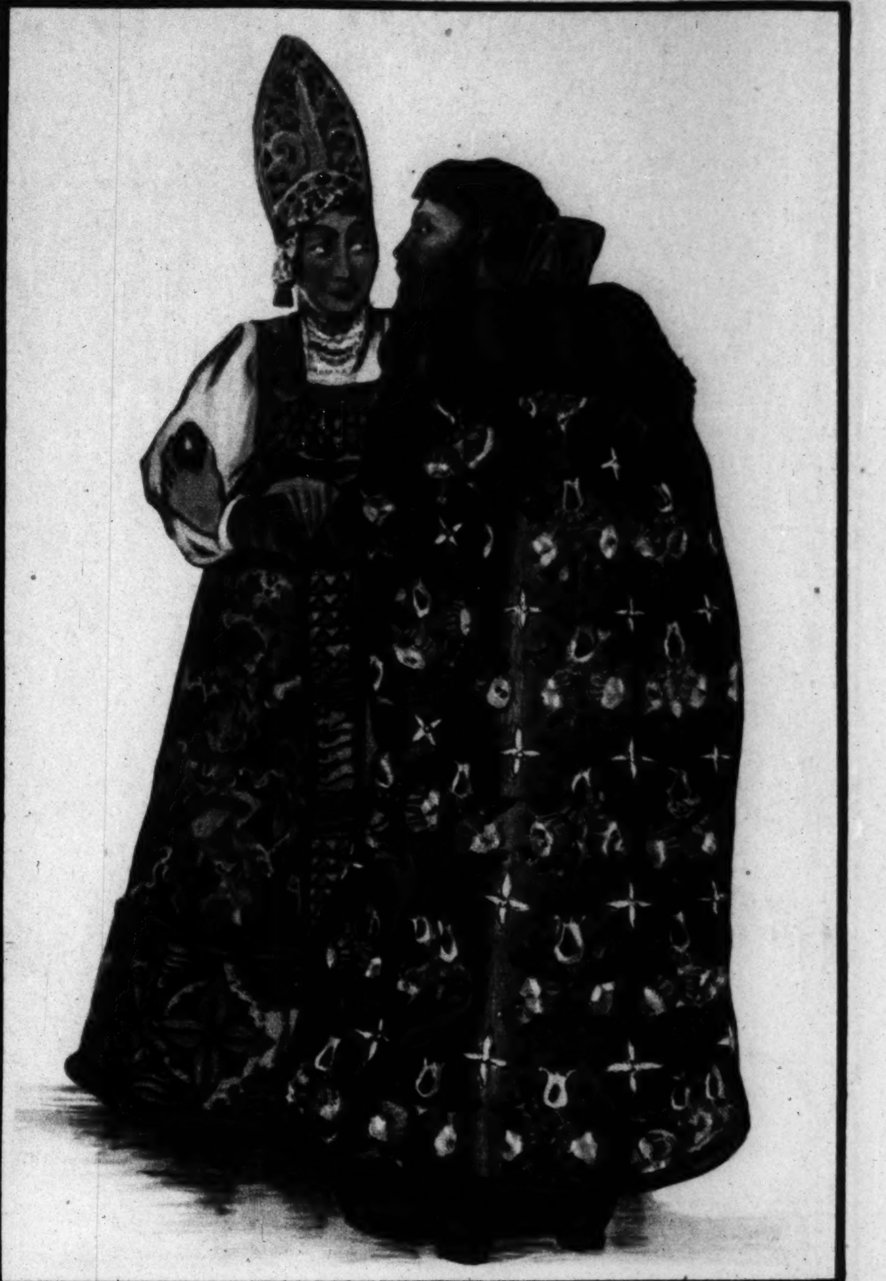
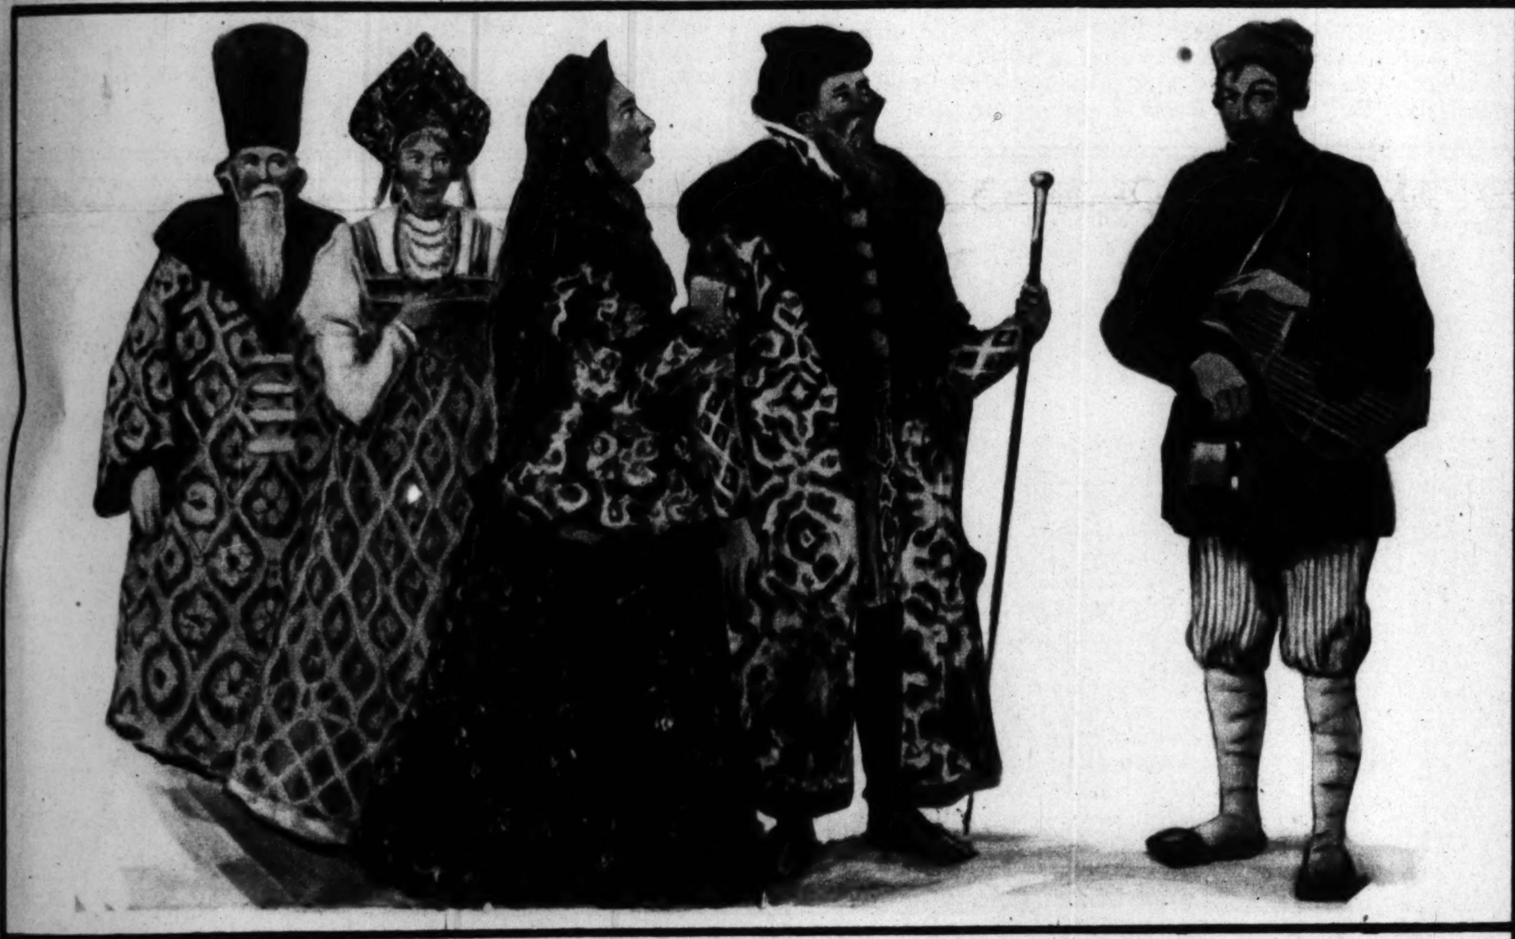
OLD LATVIAN COSTUME—A warrior bold with spear and sword and jeweled girdle, gorgeous in the glory of his brilliant cloak of blue and gold.



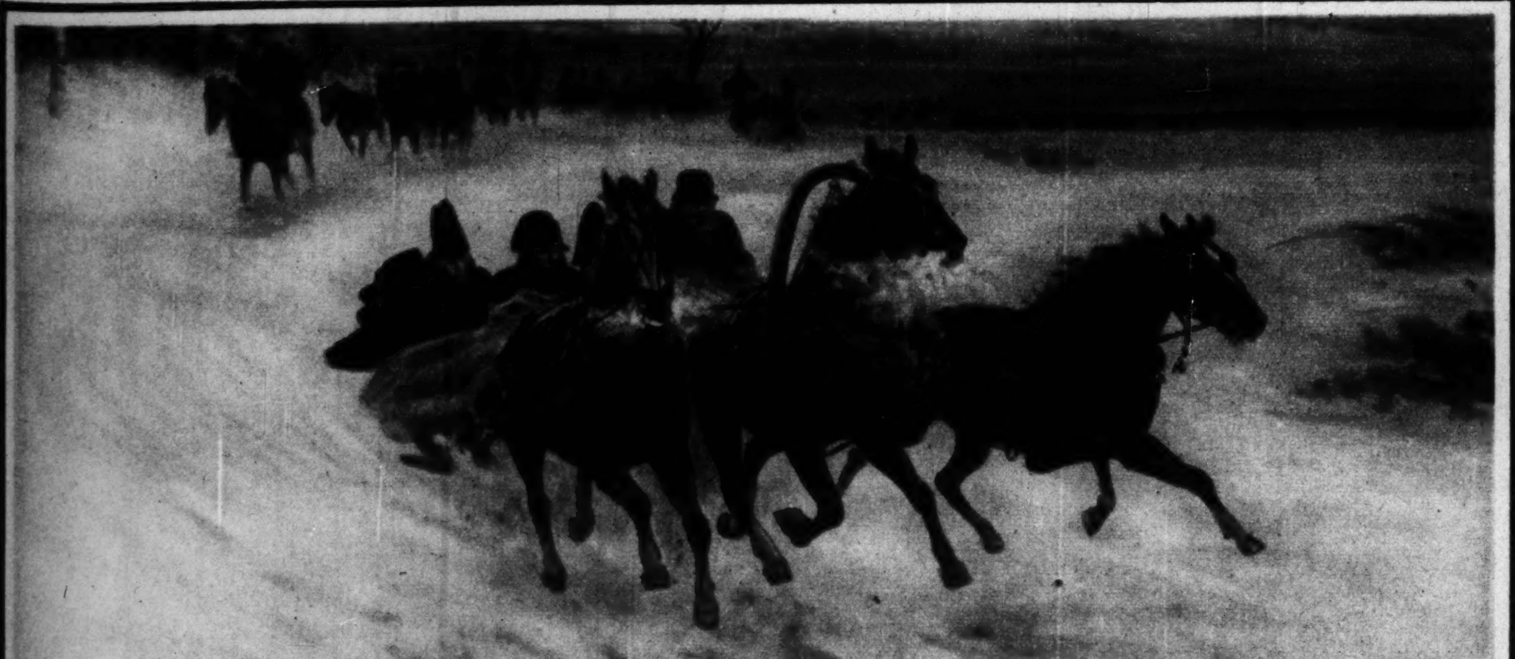
RUSSIAN GIRL WITH EASTER EGGS—A picturesque ensemble of striking oriental decorations in brilliant hues.



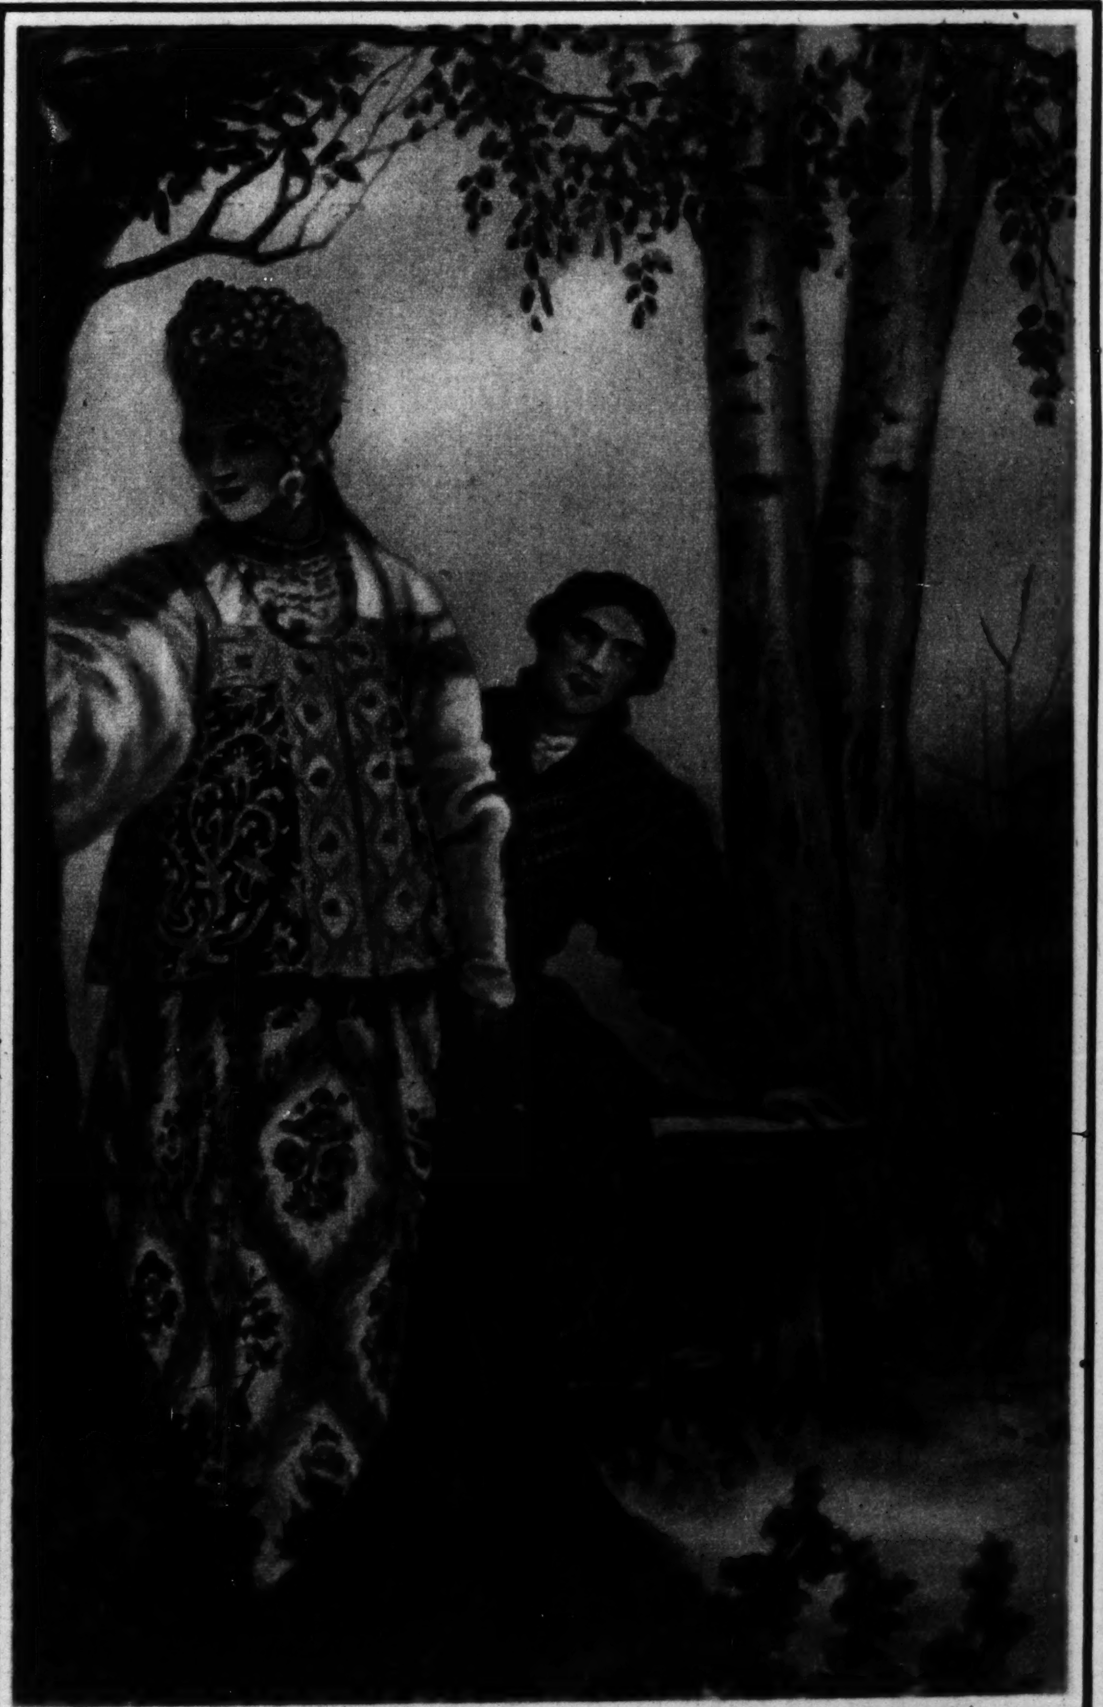
BOYAR COSTUMES OF 1600—Joseph's coat of many colors might have served as model for the magnificent cloaks of the aristocrats of old Russia. And the woman was equally splendid in her gay Easter dress.



MORE BOYAR COSTUMES—Picturesque indeed were the sparkling color combinations achieved by the favored classes of ancient Russia. The Boyars ranked second only to the ruling princes, and possessed many exclusive privileges. Their high ranking was abolished finally by Peter the Great.



A RUSSIAN TROIKA glides merrily over the snows to the cheerful clicking of the hoofs of its three spirited horses. An ideal picture to divert the reader from the heat of our western summers—ideal especially if this particular July day happens to be a bit warm.



A DIFFICULT ANSWER—That is the artist's title for this creation. Romance has come to the fair maiden of the East. Demure and shy, she turns away her pretty head as her pleading wooer tells her his love.

FROM OUR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT AT RIGA, LATVIA, came these glimpses of oriental splendors of today and of the olden days in Russia and the East. Donald Day, a former Chicago boy, sent the collection from The Tribune's Baltic bureau, of which he is in charge.

BILLIE DOVE, who has many, many friends among the fans, has been signed by Columbia Pictures to appear with Bert Lytell in "The Lone Wolf Returns," from the novel of the same name by Louis Joseph Vance.

MILTON SILLS and DAUGHTER DOROTHY appear friendly enough here, despite the fact considerable warfare's been waging between them lately. Dorothy, you see, wants to become a screen star, immediately! And father has said with great finality, "Not until you finish school, young lady!"

ALMA RUBENS sat recently for this interesting photograph. This luscious lady, of whom Fox is justly proud, will be seen next season in "The Pelican" and "One Increasing Purpose"—and, no doubt, in many other films.

Who isn't lazy—about some things?

SIT back and watch yourself pass by some evening when you're in a reflective mood.

Check over some of your habits.

If you're a member in good standing of the human race, and honest with yourself, you'll have to admit that you're careless—lazy—about many of the little things of life.

And these often include the small important things.

Take tooth brushing for example—this most important job is often neglected by many of us.

Realizing the truth of this, we set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In short, a tooth paste for lazy people—and in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to practically all of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a remarkable new cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing. Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.

This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.*

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts pyorrhea and tooth decay.

Permanence Without Penalty

Permanent waves graceful as nature's—and more.

Permanent, under the Eugène Method, without demands upon the life or texture of the hair.

For, in the Eugène Method, clean, white steam is the only agent that comes in contact with the hair.

That is a sure safeguard against breaking or splitting of the hair, since no pressure is created within the hair to strain its delicate structure.

The perfect preservation of the hair's natural beauty is an even greater achievement than the faultless grace of the Eugène Wave itself.

May we give you a little booklet which tells you more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire firsthand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

CHICAGO WILL HAVE THE WORLD'S LARGEST FOUNTAIN of its type when the Clarence Buckingham Memorial fountain, pictured above, is completed in Grant park. It is a gift to the city by Miss Kate Buckingham in memory of her brother, who was a trustee and benefactor of the Art institute. At night colored lights will play upon the sparkling waters as they leap seventy to ninety feet into the air. The picture at the left shows the progress of work on the memorial. Bennett, Parsons & Frost, construction architects and city planners, are building the memorial.

ITALY RESTORES A MASTERPIECE wrecked in the great fire at Pisa in 1600 or thereabouts. Here is the famous pulpit built by Niccolo Pisano around the year 1270 for the baptistery at Pisa, standing now just as it was more than 600 years back. The pulpit was shattered to fragments in the fire, but patient search through 300 years finally brought all the pieces together again.

Health Triumphant!

They conquered Constipation, Skin and Stomach Disorders —Found Fresh Vitality, New Joy in Living through One Natural Method

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

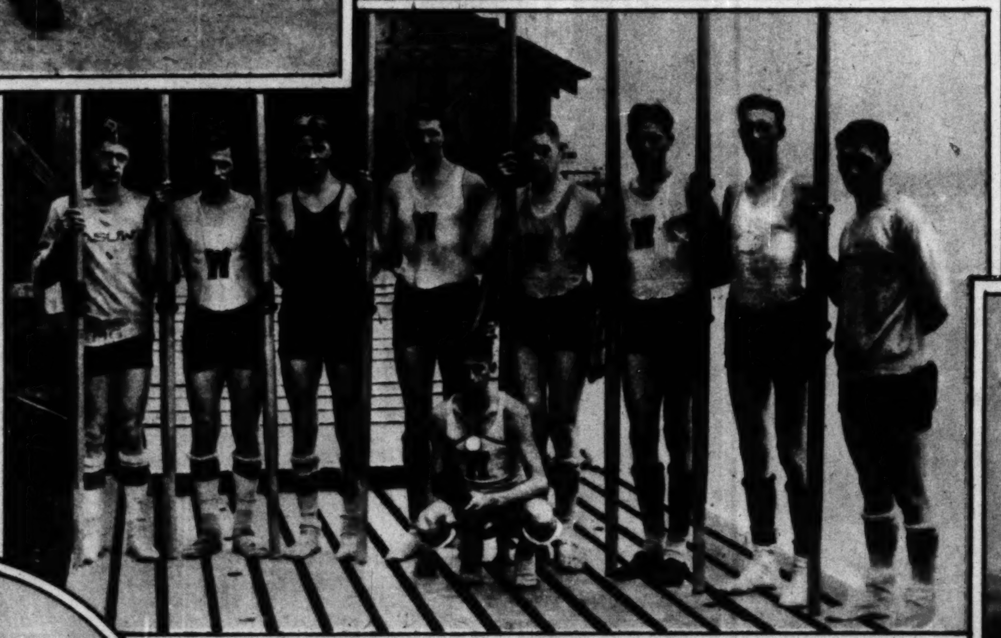
Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-764, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

Son of Mrs. Jary

"WITH FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST my two boys aged fifteen and twelve go to school and get through the winters without even a headache. Also Yeast has made a new woman of me. I was run down and suffered with that terrible gnawing which comes from undigested food. Now I eat and feel fine."

Mrs. Lucy A. Jary, Detroit, Mich.



"FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS members of the University of Washington crew squads have taken Fleischmann's Yeast during the training period. Throughout the time that Yeast has been used, we have not been troubled with constipation, which often is prevalent during training periods, nor skin disorders, with the exception of one boil which was shortly cleared up. I do not intend to go through any future season without Yeast."

Russell S. Callow, Coach, Seattle, Wash.

BELOW

"ABOUT A YEAR AGO I was run down. A friend suggested that I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I am convinced that it has been of much benefit to me. I know that my physical condition is improved and I expect to continue the use of the Yeast regularly for some time to come."

Chas. W. Holtcamp, St. Louis, Mo.

"I AM A DANCER. Three years ago I had so much indigestion and constipation that I got terribly run down. I was too tired and nervous to take my lessons. A lady recommended Yeast. The constipation was relieved and I had much less trouble with gas. Now I am strong in every way."

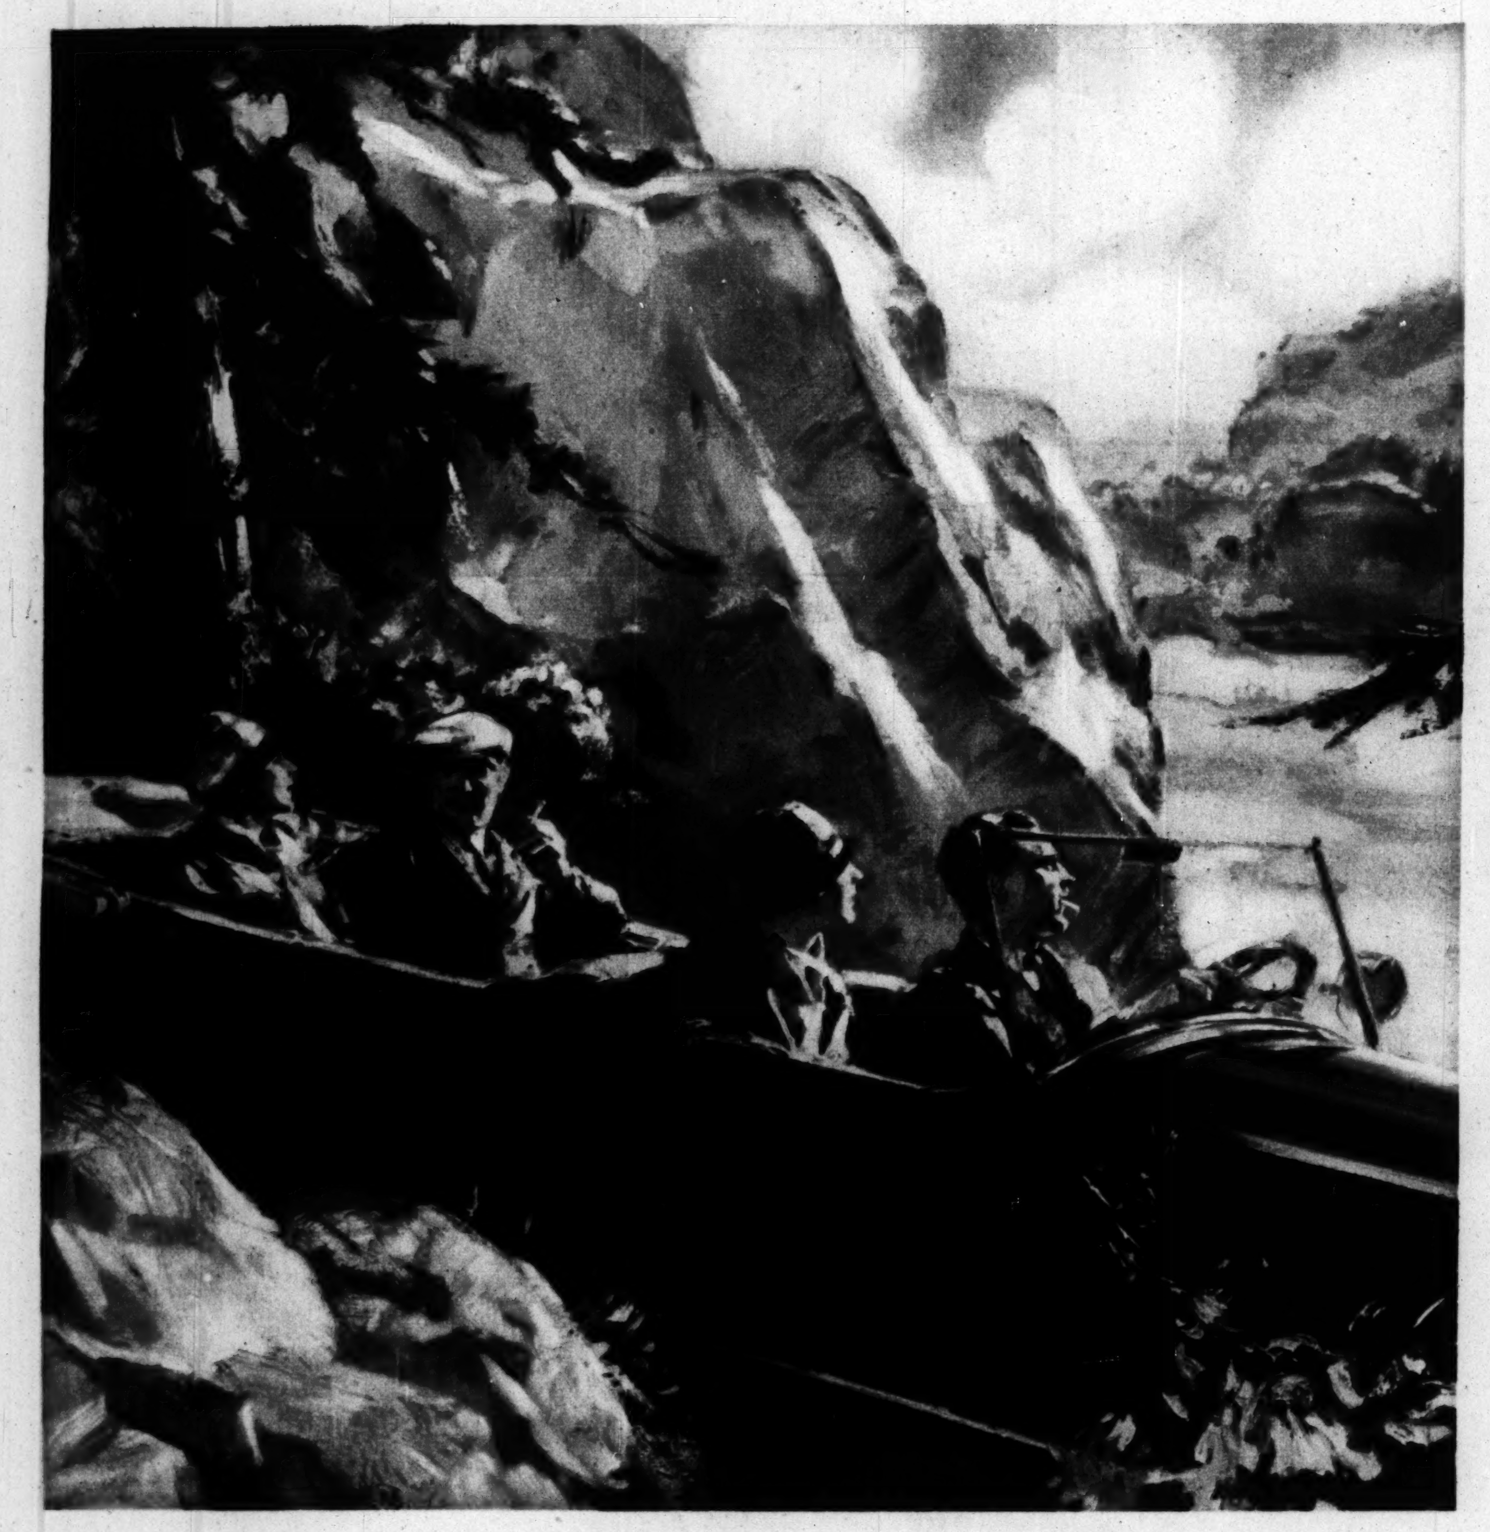
THE PICTURED YOUNG LADIES are in the show Mr. Ziegfeld has designed in succession to the Follies, which endured from 1907 until some weeks ago. The new one was named, at the time this page was prepared for the presses, "No Foolin'!" Chicago may or may not be permitted to gaze upon these lovely lasses in person. Ofttimes the fairest of Mr. Ziegfeld's fair ones refuse to leave the bright lights of Broadway for the lesser illuminations of our provincial Rialto. Miss Newberry is, by the way, a native of Chicago.

When vacation time has come again — and you're off in your car for the land of carefree outdoors —have a Camel!



Camels are sold wherever civilization has its stores. If going into the deep woods or far back in the mountains where trade and people have not come, better take several cartons of Camels with you. You'll find "Have a Camel" the password to friendliness, everywhere.

WHEN glad vacation time again is here. And you're hurrying away to a world of carefree forgetfulness. Ah, then—when straight ahead lie the great woods and sparkling waters of your own outdoors—have a Camel!

For Camel's friendly goodness makes every fair vacation fairer. Each happy day is more satisfying, more restful for the companionship of Camels. Camels have never been known to tire the taste—they are made of such choice tobaccos. Camels are so perfectly blended that, indoors or outdoors, they never leave a cigaretty after-taste. Rolled into Camels is more sheer smoking enjoyment than you ever found in any other cigarette.

So as you start away for a deserved vacation. As the long road calls you on to unexplored land. When each day you feel more joyously rested—taste then the most perfect contentment that ever came from a cigarette. When it's your right to be happy, you should have the best cigarette made, regardless of price.

Have a Camel!

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know and enjoy Camel quality, is that you may try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

PLANE PICTURES $100,000,000 FIRE WHILE SHELLS BURST FROM FLAMES—The great fire at the naval ammunitions depot at Lake Denmark, N. J., was at its height when a daring photographer secured this graphic camera story of the disaster. Lightning struck a magazine and started a series of explosions which shook the country for thirty miles around, tore houses from their foundations, hurled automobiles off the highways, and clouded the skies with barrages of flying debris, dense smoke, and bursting battle shells. The flames spread to the Picatinny army arsenal, half a mile away, and drove out the enlisted and civilian personnel there. Only seven bodies have been recovered as this page goes to press, but it is feared forty or more may have lost their lives in the disaster.

Summer Toiletries by Houbigant

To gain the freshening, deliciously cool feeling of immaculacy in summer, one must have these Houbigant toiletries. The Face Powder is as fine and soft as silken chiffon; it caresses the skin enduringly. It is perfumed with Quelques Fleurs, Le Parfum Ideal, Subtilité, Mon Boudoir, or Le Temps des Lilas; five true tones—$1.50.

A dash of Houbigant Eau de Cologne, after the bath, and also several times a day, will alleviate the discomfort of warm weather—it has healing qualities and the odeur is remarkably invigorating—four sizes, beginning at $1.50.

Crême en Beauté is an excellent cream base for rouge and powder. It is a pure vanishing cream, free from wax, and delicately perfumed—$1.50.

Quelques Fleurs Skin Lotion tones up the skin, and keeps it soft and white. It also aids in removing blemishes. A protection from sun, dust and wind—$1. The Talc is light, refreshing, and exquisitely fragrant. It is obtainable in the various odeurs, in a glass bottle with shaker top—$1.

The romance of perfume is expressed in the booklet, "Things Perfumes Whisper." May we send it to you, with five sachets, fragrant with Houbigant odeurs? Houbigant, Inc., 539 W. 45th St., New York.

Compact-Rouge—in four shades; Powder—three shades—$1.50
Dusting Powder—small size, $1.50. Large size, $2.75
Parfums in Purse Size Flacons—$1.00 and $1.25

Prevent 90% of Decay This Easy New Way!

Toothbrushing Fails to Clean Between Teeth Where 90% of Cavities Start. Use a "Flossy Pick Pocket!"

YOU brush your teeth — still they decay. Why? Because teeth stand in tight contact. NO toothbrush can clean between them. That's why food lodges between teeth — in 30 pockets. There it not only looks repulsive—but also decays, forms acids, breeds germs, stains enamel, exposes nerves, causes pyorrhea and unpleasant breath.

Now an easy new device—the Ivory "Flossy Pick Pocket"—has been perfected by a dentist to prevent all this. Quickly it guides flat antiseptic coral silk between ALL teeth. Fits your mouth. Doesn't irritate or cut gums like toothpicks or old slow awkward way of holding floss with hands. Easy to use—easy to carry. Get a "Flossy Pick Pocket" and you won't neglect to keep your teeth clean between. Millions sold—every user delighted. Recommended by dentists.

THE DUKE OF YORK'S A SOUTHPAW, sure enough. The Duke is the agile chap swinging that mean racket in his left hand. Tennis history was made when this second son of the king entered the recent Wimbledon tournament, but he was put out in the very first round of doubles.

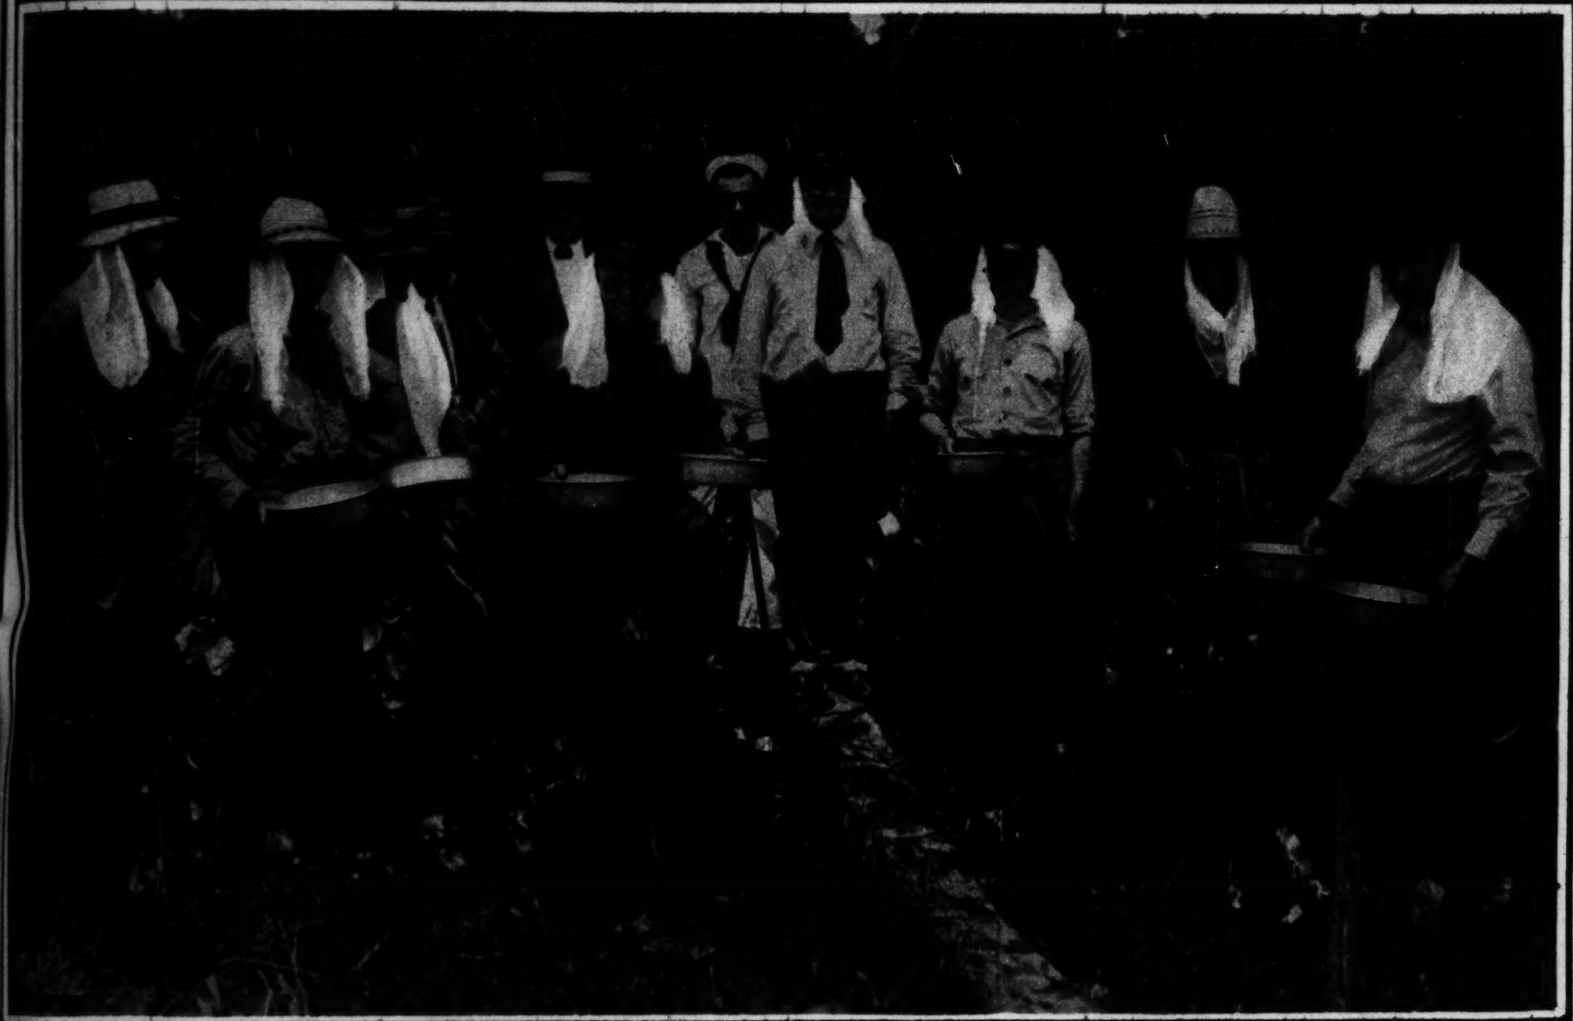
BEHOLD MISS FIDELITY, otherwise Jaen Marre, first prize winner in the beauty contest by which the Elks selected a queen to rule over their national convention here. The blue-eyed, blonde, graceful Jaen also gets a movie contract out of the contest. Gertrude Olmsted, now a movie star, was introduced to the films this same way by the Elks.

(Photograph from Wide World.)



THE MARINES ATTACK A NEW FOE, the pesky mosquitoes which infest their post at Quantico, Va. The Devil Dogs dusted the swamps and creeks of the Virginia lowlands with poison sprayed from airplanes, after first planting the pans shown here to determine just what proportions of the poison would be most effective.

BAILEY'S BEACH AT NEWPORT, the summer playground of eastern society. Fashionables from New York are thronging Newport this season despite the fact Newport business men staged an advertising campaign to lure the common people to the resort. Or perhaps the ads interested the society notables, to.

THE YOUNGER SET AT NEWPORT, all orthodoxly listed juniors of the New York Social Register. The four in riding togs—if that's what those things are—are the Misses Evelyn Clark, Rose Davis, Barbara Holmes, and Adelaide Whitehouse. Here's a cooling summer beverage that is really good for you

DOWN from the land of the snow-clad pines it comes to you—glorious, golden, sparkling "Canada Dry."

Somehow it seems to make you cooler just to watch it dance and bubble in the dewy glasses. It's so clear and crisp and keen—like the cool of a mountain spring in the depths of the dark green forest.

You will relish this refreshing coolness on a hot summer's day and you will marvel at the wonderful flavor of this fine old ginger ale.

But there is another and even more important reason why "Canada Dry" is so good for you and why it has become, in four short years, the sensation of the United States. And that is its outstanding purity and quality!

For years and years this fine old ginger ale has been served in the great hospitals of Canada and it is now served in many of the leading hospitals in this country, including the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, the Woman's Hospital and the Presbyterian Hospital in New York.

A safe drink even for children

Physicians actually prescribe "Canada Dry" for their patients because of its purity and quality, and it has been approved by both the "Tribune" Institute and by Dr. Wiley, of the "Good Housekeeping" Bureau of Foods and Health.

The reason is simply because "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and because it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

A cooling drink for summer days

Drink "Canada Dry" with your luncheon these hot summer days and see how keen and fresh and cool it makes you feel the rest of the afternoon. Serve it at night-time with your dinner and note how it lures the lagging appetite. Sip it with a cracker or two just before retiring and know the peaceful calm that leads to deep and restful sleep.

Even people who used to say that they didn't like ginger ale have found a new delight in "Canada Dry." In purity and quality and in the witchery of its matchless flavor it is, indeed, "The Champagne of Ginger Ales."

GEE! WE FOUND THE CITY OF GOLD AT LAST
18K
18K
WITH UNSCALABLE WALLS OF ROCK ON THE NORTH, SOUTH AND WEST THE THREE ADVENTURERS REALIZE THEIR ONE ESCAPE IS TO FIND AN EASTERN OUTLET FROM THE VALLEY OF WHISPERING VOICES—
THIS ILLITERATE PERSON BELIEVES STUDIED PREPARATION IS THE SEED OF SUCCESS—
I'LL CARRY A FEW STICKS OF DYNAMITE TO USE IF WE HAVE TO BLAST OUR WAY OUT—
IF WE CAN ONLY FIND A WAY OUT OF THIS OLD VALLEY I'LL BE GLAD—
NOW THAT WE HAVE HIDDEN THE THINGS WE CAN'T CARRY IN THAT CAVE WE OUGHT TO WEIGH OUR ANCHOR AT ONCE—
IT IS WRITTEN A PRUDENT HASTE IS A SIGN OF WISDOM—
WE CAN'T START TOO SOON TO PLEASE ME—
THIS IS OUR LAST CHANCE—IF WE DON'T FIND A WAY OUT NOW WE ARE TRAPPED IN THE VALLEY FOREVER—
WE'LL ALL BE OUT OF HERE BEFORE THE SUN SETS—AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT—UNENDING PERSEVERANCE IS AN INVINCIBLE GRIND STONE FOR ALL OBSTACLES—
MY COMMONPLACE EYES ARE GLADDENED BY THE SIGHT OF THE WAY TO FREEDOM—
HURRAH! WE'RE OUT OF THE VALLEY AT LAST—WHOOP-EE!
LIVELY MATES—THERE'S A STORM BREWING—A CREW OF LUBBERLY PIRATES ARE HIDDEN IN THAT JUNGLE AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT—WE HAD BETTER DUCK BEHIND THIS TREE—
I'LL JUST FIRE THE FIRST SHOT IN THE AIR—
YOU FIRE A SHOT ACROSS THEIR BOW—THE SOUND OF FIRE ARMS MAY MAKE THEM CHANGE THEIR TACK—
ONLY BY THE MOST UNDIGNIFIED HASTE CAN WE ASSURE OUR CONTINUED EXISTENCE—
GOLLY, I WISH I WAS SAFE AT HOME—
IF THIS DYNAMITE FAILS OUR GOOSE IS COOKED—THE BLACK BRIGANDS ARE GAINING AND THEY'LL SOON HAVE US AT THEIR MERCY—BAM!
YOUR BENEVOLENT DYNAMITE FILLS THE UNWORTHY ONES WITH JUSTIFIED APPREHENSION—
IF WE CAN REACH THE ENTRANCE TO THE VALLEY WE CAN MAKE A STAND AGAINST THEM—
OH BOY!
WITH FIENDISH HOWLS THE SAVAGES PREPARE TO ATTACK, WHILE THE THREE ADVENTURERS RESOLVE TO FIGHT TO THE END AS THEY KNOW ONLY TOO WELL THE TORTURES SAVAGES INFLICT ON HELPLESS CAPTIVES—
IT MAKES MY FLESH CREEP TO HEAR THE WAY THEY HOWL—
IT HAS BEEN WISELY WRITTEN A DOG IS NOT CONSIDERED A GOOD DOG BECAUSE HE IS A GOOD BARKER—
